U. S. Naval Arsenal Near Dover, N. J. Blown Up By Lightning; Forty Marines Reported Missing

MISSOURI TO VOTE ON REPEAL OF DRY LAW IN NOVEMBER

Petitions for the Referendum in the Fall Found to Be Sufficient by Secretary of State Becker.

PROPOSAL TO BE NO. 4 ON BALLOT

Signatures of Sufficient Electors Were Obtained by State Association Against Prohibition.

By The Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 10.—Petitions for a referendum on repeal of the State prohibition enforcement law were declared sufficient by Secretary of State Charles U. Becker this afternoon after completion of the counting of the signatures, and the proposal will be placed on the initiative and referendum ballot of the November election as proposition No. 4.

The petitions were declared sufficient for 12 Congressional districts, one more than the minimum of 11 districts required by the initiative and referendum law. The Missouri Association Against the Eighteenth Amendment, which directed circulation of the petitions filed them from 15 districts, but the petitions from the fifteenth congressional district were thrown out because they fell 256 signatures short of the required minimum of 3,416 for that district.

To place a proposal on the ballot petitions must be filed bearing signatures of five per cent of the voters in each of at least two-thirds of the 16 congressional districts in the State.

Approximately 500 signatures were thrown out in the check of the referendum petitions, because of errors. Of this number 350 were stricken from the Sixteenth District petitions, because the required affidavit by a notary public was omitted from some of the petitions.

A referendum on the workmen's compensation bill passed by the 1925 Legislature will be proposition No. 1 on the ballot. A constitutional amendment authorizing municipalities to pension retired policemen, by local ordinance, will be No. 2 and a workmen's compensation bill proposed through the initiative will be proposition No. 3.

PERFECT CAST SAVES 2 LIVES

AVON, N. J., July 10.—A perfect cast of 100 feet, with a heavy fishing line, saved two drowning persons here today. Elizabeth Thompson was seized with cramps while bathing. Alfred Kunze attempting a rescue was helpless in a strong current. John Guirin, bass fishing nearby, made the cast and hauled both in.

WINS 1464-MILE AIR RACE

Only 5 of 15 Starters in England Finish Contest.

By the Associated Press.

HENDON, England, July 10.—Capt. Hubert S. Broad, who represented Great Britain in the competition for the Schneider trophy last fall, won the annual airplane race for the King's Cup, which started here yesterday. Only five of the original 15 starters finished.

Lieut. Scholefield was second, only 15 seconds behind the winner. The distance was about 1464 miles, and the handicap was so arranged that the small machines making a low average per hour had an equal opportunity with the high-power machines. Broad drove Sir Charles Wakefield's 27-horsepower Moth. His average speed was 90.4 miles, considered a wonderful performance for such a small machine. Lieut. Scholefield drove a 450-horsepower Vickers, making an average speed of 142 miles an hour. But he was not able to overcome the handicap which had been allowed the smaller airplanes.

Two Parties Rush Same Still in Dark; Four Wounded.

By the Associated Press.

BROWNSVILLE, Tenn., July 10.—Two forces of county officers out hunting the same still, each ignorant of the other's presence, collided in the dark in this county last night and a revolver fight followed. Four were wounded, including Sheriff E. C. King, shot through both legs; and Deputies Lee Styles, shot in the abdomen, probably fatally; Billy Whitten, scalp wound and Ike Curlin seriously.

PATRIOTISM KILLS DAWES' DOG

Merigo, Vice President's Terrier, Ate Firecrackers on Fourth.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 10.—Merigo, a fox terrier owned by Vice President Dawes, is dead because he celebrated the Fourth of July too zealously. Dawes, returning to his Evanston home from the East today, was met with the news that the animal, brought here from Washington by other members of the family, had died this morning. It was found that Merigo had been eating unexploded firecrackers.

Parisians Gaze at $40 Stockings.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 10.—A pair of silk stockings, adorned with a certain amount of embroidery, occupies a whole window in a big Paris store. The price of this work of art is 1250 francs. French passers-by note the sum and at once convert it into dollars, as they declare nobody but an American woman could or would pay $40 for a pair of stockings.

Watermelon Upsets Negro Church.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The Rev. J. Milton Waldron, pastor of Shiloh Baptist Church (Negro) has complaiend to the authorities of the difficulties of conducting his Sunday services with loud-voiced hucksters on the outside shouting "red, ripe watermelons." The cries were disturbing the peace and tranquility, he said, and distracting the attention of the congregation to a point where something should be done about it.

WILL FOUND LONG AFTER DIVISION OF $100,000 ESTATE

Property That of Theodore C. Link, Former St. Louis Architect, Who Designed the Union Station.

WIDOW NAMED AS SOLE BENEFICIARY

Document in Tin Box in Attic of House Here—Likely to Be Offered for Probate.

When Theodore C. Link, a former St. Louis architect, who designed Union Station, died at Baton Rouge, La., in November, 1923, a thorough search for any will which may have been left by him was made but none was found, so his estate, valued at over $100,000, has been administered on the theory he died intestate. By agreement of heirs his widow, Mrs. Annie Link, took charge as administrator in Louisiana, the property there being estimated at $70,000, while her son, Edwin C. Link, 5854 Cates avenue, qualified as administrator of the property in Missouri. But now, long after heirs had agreed upon a distribution of the estate, a will by Link March 11, 1918, has turned up in which, it was stated, he bequeathed all his property to his widow.

The will recently was found in a forgotten tin box left in the attic of an apartment house at the southeast corner of Spring avenue and Delmar boulevard, where Link formerly lived. It is in possession of his widow's attorney, Edward D'Arcy, who yesterday said that pending investigation of the validity of a law passed in Missouri several years ago providing that no wil can be probated longer than a year after administration has been granted on an estate no action has been taken to file the will. However, the case probably will be put up to Probate Judge Holtcamp soon, it was said.

Agreement on Distribution.

The agreement in regard to distribution provided that the Missouri property was to be divided in four parts, three parts going equally to Mrs. Link and her two sons, Edwin and Clarence Link, the latter of Baton Rouge, and the remaining fourth to two granddaughters, Mrs. Robert Y. Woodward of this city and Miss Katherine Link of Santa Rosa, Cal. Under the law of Louisiana a widow, in the absence of a will, is entitled to half of her husband's property absolutely and to a life interest in the remainder. Mrs. Link, it was stated, availed herself of this right.

What would be the effect if the will should be admitted to probate was explained to a Post-Dispatch reporter by William F. Woerner, attorney for the Missouri administrator of the Link estate. The contract of the other heirs with Mrs. Link for equal distribution in the property here, the attorney said, probably would be set aside because based on a mutually false understanding of the facts. "They thereupon," he continued, "would be liable in law to restore to the widow what they had received. But that would not be an unjust hardship in view of the fact they had not parted with anything to get such funds in the first place."

Woerner, who is an authority on wills and estates, pointed out that some of the realty, including the apartment at Spring avenue and Delmar boulevard, which Link owned, and his country home at St. Albans, Mo., were sold at auction last March, the whole bringing $35,000. The proceeds were divided among the supposed heirs according to the agreement. "But persons," he explained, "who in good faith dealt with or bought property from the administrator, relying upon the authority conferred upon him by the Probate Court, would be protected and retain a good title. The administrator, too, would be entitled to credit for all debts and expenses paid by him in good faith."

View of Legal Authority.

With respect to the validity of the statute previously mentioned, Woerner said it is possible the law

MAN SUES WIDOW HE SAYS PROPOSED THEN JILTED HIM

Peter Fuchs Asks for $25,000 Damages From Mrs. Carrie L. Wythe, Alleging Breach of Promise.

ASSERTS SHE "SHOOK" HIM IN LOS ANGELES

He Had Got a Job for Her There but She Wouldn't Take It and Demanded Back the Deeds.

Peter William Fuchs, 37 years old, a widower, sat last night on the front porch of his mother's cottage at 215 West Schirmer street, and told reporters why he had sued Mrs. Carrie L. Wythe, a widow, of 3615 South Compton avenue, for $25,000 damages, alleging breach of promise to marry. The suit was begun yesterday in the Circuit Court here.

He insisted Mrs. Wythe had courted him and proposed marriage only to desert him last month in Los Angeles whither he, she and her 10-year-old daughter had motored. The jilting was bad enough, he said, but his former fiancee made it worse by enjoining him from collecting rents on her property here.

Mrs. Wythe could not be reached for a reply. She is the widow of William Wythe of the Wythe Engraving Co. and Brown Embossing Co., who died in 1921, leaving her financially independent.

Fuchs has been married twice and has a 9-year-old daughter. He is short and lithe, and Mrs. Wythe is short and stout.

Heard She Was Lonesome.

"I met Mrs. Wythe through Mrs. Esther Armbruster, wife of my nephew, John, who rented from Mrs. Wythe," Fuchs said. "Mrs. Armbruster said Mrs. Wythe was lonesome and wanted to meet somebody.

"We were introduced and Mrs. Wythe became friendly. She told my friends I was a pretty good sort of a fellow. We went out together."

"Did you spend any money on her?" was asked.

Fuchs considered at length when replied cautiously: "I'm not going to commit myself." He continued:

"We mostly stayed around the house or went out riding. I had an old car and I traded it in for a new Ford, she paying the difference. I met her last December. Last May she decided we'd go to California and get married. I didn't especially want to go, but she proposed it to me—that's where I got her on the breach of promise suit.

Trouble Starts in Denver.

"I drove the Ford, and she and her daughter, Mona, rode along. The trouble started in Denver. I used to work in Denver as a sporting goods salesman, and she was afraid I'd take girls riding in our Ford, so she locked it up. Oh, she was suspicious!

"Everything went wrong. We had several punctures and she blamed me. She reminded me that she and her husband, when he was living, drove to Canada without any punctures. I just kept my mouth shut and drove on to California.

"She had an income from her apartments in St. Louis, and bonds besides, but she kicked over paying my expenses, like she promised to. She wouldn't get me a room one night and I had to sleep out in the Ford. I caught cold, lost 20 pounds and haven't been able to work since.

He Found a Job for Her.

"We got to Los Angeles and I went out to look for a job. I found a job just right for her but she wouldn't take it. She was suspicious—always afraid somebody would do her out of her money. Then she asked for her property back. You see, before we left St. Louis she had transferred to me a half of her interest in apartments at 3617 and 3558 South Compton avenue, and I was collecting $87 in rents from one. I refused to give back the deeds, and told her: 'That's done and I won't undo it. I don't change my mind every six hours like you do.'

"She warned me that she didn't

Four Big Disasters to U. S. Navy Within the Last Five Years

Of several recent disasters which have befallen the United States Navy, the loss of the submarine S-51 is freshest in the public mind.

The S-1 was sunk in collision with the coastwise pasenger steamer City of Rome, off Block Island, R. I., the night of last Sept. 25. Of the 36 officers and men aboard, three were saved. Eight bodies were recovered within the next few days. Of the 25 others who were lost, seven appear to have been washed out to sea, as only 18 bodies were taken from the submarine after it was raised and towed to the Brooklyn Navy Yard last week. The Government has held the passenger steamer was to blame, and has prepared a claim against the owners of the ship.

The navy's giant dirigible Shenandoah was destroyed in flight near Ava, O., early last September 3 on its way to St. Louis and places farther west, Lieutenant-Commander Lansdowne and 13 other officers and men were killed.

Seven destroyers were wrecked on the rocks off Point Honda, Cal., the night of Sept. 8, 1923, with the loss of 23 lives.

The navy dirigible ZR-2, bought in England for the United States, fell into the River Humber at Hull, England, Aug. 24, 1921, and 15 Americans and 26 Englishmen lost their lives.

Stories of Survivors And Eye-Witnesses of Naval Arsenal Blast

Six Marines Hurled 15 Feet Into Air, Rubber Boots of One Blown Off, Others Mass of Cuts and Bruises.

By the Associated Press.

PATERSON, N. J., July 10.—Marine Private James M. Weaver, 19 years old, of Birmingham, Ala., who with two other marines was found running on a mountain road near Oak Ridge after the arsenal explosion today, was brought to Paterson General Hospital by Harry Barkley, a motor vehicle inspector.

The upper portion of Weaver's body was a mass of cuts and bruises and about his bleeding feet was wrapped the remnants of a shirt.

The other marines did not appear to be seriously injured, Barkley said, and he left them by the roadside after calming them.

Weaver told physicians that he had just returned from a week-end leave and was in the act of changing his clothing when fire call was sounded. The blaze was believed to be trivial, and he with five or six others responded with a hose cart.

He did not recall what building was on fire, but when they got into action the first of the magazines blew up. He saw his companions hurled 15 feet in the air. The concussion tore the rubber boots from one of the marines, he said.

When he recovered sufficiently from the shock, he said, he joined the other two and they began running. All he remembered of the rest, he said, was that it "felt like a touch of hell."

Weaver had no idea of how many men were on leave, but he believed many escaped the catastrophe because it occurred during the week-end.

Commandant of Depot Blown From Auto by Explosion.

By the Associated Press.

DOVER, N. J., July 11.—In a statement to the Associated Press at 12:30 o'clock this morning Capt. O. C. Dowling, U. S. N., commandant of the navy munitions depot, said that he saw no one killed in the explosions which wrecked the depot last night. He said he had no way of checking the number of casualties before daylight, and that he expected the fire which followed the explosions to rage for hours.

The depot, he said, contained 200 magazines, small buildings filled with T. N. T. depth charges, high explosive shells and smokeless powder. Every building in the depot was wrecked, he said, and virtually every magazine exploded.

At the time of the first explosion, he said, there were at the depot 61 marines, 20 sailors from the Brooklyn navy yard on special duty, three other sailors and an undetermined number of civilians, including the wives and families of some of the men stationed at the depot. Describing the disaster, he said:

"At 5:25 p. m., I was sitting in my quarters with my wife when the fire alarm sounded. Some one had seen a wisp of smoke coming from a magazine containing TNT depth charges.

"I got into my car and drove toward the magazine. When I was about 200 feet from it there was a terrific explosion which wrecked my car and threw me out of it."

There was nothing to do but run before the rain of splinters

BLAZING DEBRIS FALLS ON TOWN 30 MILES AWAY

By Leased Wire From New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 10.—A bolt of lightning struck one of the TNT magazines of the naval arsenal on the shore of Lake Denmark, four miles from Dover, N. J., about 5 p. m. today.

The deafening explosion that followed spread death and destruction. it is not known how many persons were killed, but it is possible the list will exceed 50. At least 50 marines and sailors are reported missing and 150 civilians were injured, many of them seriously. The Navy Department officially reported at least 40 marines missing.

Only a pall of smoke, broken by a sudden flash as occasional shells exploded, marked where the naval arsenal had been.

Two miles from that blackened area, where wooden buildings—the barracks and officers' quarters—were burning fiercely, is the Picatinny Army Arsenal, storehouse of hundreds of thousands of pounds of smokeless powder and shells for the army's big guns.

At 11 o'clock tonight the flames were sweeping toward the army ammunition buildings. Molten pieces of steel were pattering on the roofs of the powder magazines.

Major-General Summerall, at Governor's Island, reported to the War Department that part of the Picatinny army arsenal exploded at 8:14 o'clock tonight, but no report of casualties had been received.

Officers at Picatinny said that if the arsenal did explode, the countryside for miles around would be laid waste.

The danger lines, beyond which no persons were allowed to pass, were extended late tonight to about five miles from the arsenals. They had previously been maintained at three miles.

About midnight the explosions at the naval arsenal were not as frequent as they had been earlier in the evening.

As the shells in the naval arsenal continued to explode, thousands of residents in the vicinity made their way to Dover. Roadways were clogged with automobiles pressed into service as ambulances. Hospitals and private homes in the region of Dover were jammed with the injured.

Mt. Hope and Rockaway, Villages Nearby, Wrecked by the Blast

Because of the confusion and the widespread fear that the Picatinny arsenal would go up in one deafening blast, it was impossible to obtain specific figures for dead and injured nor to get more than a fragmentary picture of the destruction caused by the blast.

The mining village of Mount Hope, two miles from Lake Denmark, was virtually destroyed. Houses toppled on occupants. Women and children ran to the fields seeking safety as blast followed blast.

Rockaway, a village seven miles away, also was wiped out. As they crowded through the streets of Dover—streets lined with glass from shattered windows, streets filled with frightened residents, the refugees warned all they saw to flee.

Blazing embers and powder sparks, carried by a strong wind, set fire to the telephone exchange at Butler, N. J., 30 miles away, but the fire quickly was extinguished.

Lieutenant-Colonel Norman D. Ramsey, commander of the army ordinance depot which adjoins that of the navy at Lake Denmark, reported to third corps area headquarters that he was slightly wounded, but was able to continue on duty. He was unable to give any estimate of the casualties.

The first explosion occurred in magazine 38. Immediately after lightning struck the magazine, Capt. O. C. Dowling, U. S. N. commandant at the depot, had the fire call sounded and mustered his entire force as a fire brigade.

Working in dense clouds of sulphurous smoke that billowed up from the burning magazine, the men had just laid their hose lines when the second explosion occurred. Some of the men were hurled high into the air, others fell wounded, in their tracks.

Capt. Dowling after this explosion telephoned to near-by towns for aid, but as fire engines, ambulances, physicians and volunteer rescue workers rushed to the depot, the third explosion occurred and the rescuers were unable to enter the danger zone immediately.

As soon as reports of the explosion reached New York, Maj.-Gen. Summerall, commandant of the Second Army Corps, rushed a company of the 16th Infantry from Fort Jay to Dover, and sent an army automobile with hospital supplies, to assist in the relief work. The troops, commanded by Brig. Gen. Hugh Drumm, will police the wrecked area.

The first victim whose death was confirmed was Mrs. Frances Feeley of Brooklyn. She died in Dover General Hospital.

The American Leagion post at Dover was turned into an emergency hospital and physicians' offices were crowded by soldiers, sailors and marines seeking first aid treatment.

Mrs. Feeley was visiting Major and Mrs. Young in their home on the Picatinny Reservation when the ceiling caved in. She died on the operating table. Meanwhile, as ambulances and private automobiles bore the injured to emergency hospitals and dressing stations, the explosions continued.

Houses for miles around trembled with each new detonation and the highways were clogged with automobiles.

As this dispatch was sent it was reported that would-be rescuers were unable to reach some of the shattered buildings on the naval reservation to take out the presumably dead and injured because of the continued blasts.

Fire departments volunteers, soldiers and the remnant of the marine personnel found it impossible to approach nearer than a mile to the blazing buildings and exploding shells in the Naval Reservation.

The body of Lieut.-Commander E. A. Brown was discovered just inside the hastily established fire lines. His wife reached safety in an automobile.

Physicians from towns and villages in a radius of 50 miles were called as the injured poured into Dover. Throughout the area shrapnel and jagged pieces of metal continued to fall during the night. Officials said the explosions in the Naval store house might continue for a week.

Seven marines, whose clothes had been almost blown from their bodies were taken to Newfoundland, reclothed and housed in a building owned by the water company.

Fifteen of the approximately 60 marines at the arsenal were on guard duty when the first blast came. All of those are believed to have escaped. In addition, three or four more were on leave of absence. One, private, first class, E. C. Morris, returned half an hour after the explosion started and immediatel joined the volunteer army of relief workers.

Private Leo Jones, who started running through the woods on the shore of Lake Denmark as soon as he heard the first blast, said he saw several marines knocked down by the concussion who did not rise again. Others, he said, were struck by flying shrapnel.

Capt. Otto Carl Dowling was in command of the Lake Denmark depot. He is believed to have been injured. Lieut. Herman Conrad Schrader, U. S. N., and Capt. Burwell Hayden Clarke commandant ot marines, both are reported missing.

Maj. Normal Ramsey, in charge of Picatinny arsenal ordered all enlisted men and civilian employes and their families from the arsenal grounds as the fire from the naval arsenal crept nearer. Women and children dodged from tree to tree through clouds of falling powder particles and flying shrapnel balls.

Story of Eye Witness Whose Auto Was Overturned by the Concussion

Guards were posted to keep away the curious and Maj. Ramsey and his staff officers took up a position behind a golf bunker on the reservation. There they remained late tonight as bits of metal screamed over their heads or thudded into the bank in front of them.

Perhaps the only eye witnesses of the first explosion were Mark and Henry Mindlin of East Orange, N. J. They were motoring through the Naval Reservation.

"Everything was dead quiet," said Mark Mindling as he was being bandaged by a nurse in Dover General Hospital." The storm seemed to be right on top of us. There was a tremendous clap of thunder and right on top of it so quick that we were completely stunned, there came a terrible blast that shook the whole earth. A red ball of fire leaped to the sky. Our windshield shattered to bits and spilled broken glass all over us. The red ball of fire was the magazine going up, but we didn't know it then.

"Before we came too, there was a second explosion. Our car was turned over by the concussion. We crawled out, all scratched. A third explosion sent us rolling into the ditch. We crawled the rest of the way on our hands and knees to the Picatinny arsenal, the stuff shooting over our heads and the heat becoming more unbearable every minute."

The Lake Denmark arsenal is the Navy's largest ammunition depot and was the center of storage during the war for 12 and 16-inch shells. More than 300 buildings stood in the reservation which, with the Picatinny arsenal adjoining, comprised about 2000 acres.

The Pictanny arsenal was threatened by a forest fire in 1925. Before the flames could be checked, one magazine exploded and a soldier was killed.

Refugees From Vicinity of Disaster Flock to Dover, N. J.

By the Associated Press.

DOVER, N. J., July 10.—Refugees from Mount Hope and other towns damaged by the naval arsenal explosion are flocking into Dover and are cared for by residents.

Robert Richards, a native of Dover, told friends that an officer had telephoned him from one of the arsenals at about 7:30 o'clock and advised him to move his family out of Dover. Richards said he would leave immediately. Who the officer was and from what arsenal he called could not be learned.

The naval arsenal is situated on Lake Denmark, a small body of water about seven miles northwest of Dover. Mount Hope, with a population of close to 1000 was about two miles southwest of the plant. The shells bombarded Mount Hope, a few landing in the army arsenal at Picatinny.

Buildings in Rockaway, about five miles southwest of the arsenals, were damaged by the concussion of the explosions. No shells were reported to have landed there, but several houses crumbled when the major explosions occurred.

Two-Thirds of the Personnel Missing, Navy Bureau Hears

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The Navy Department was advised tonight that the naval ammunition depot at Lake Denmark, N. J., had been struck by lightning, and that approximately two-thirds of the personnel was missing.

The message to the department said that about 20 survivors had been taken to Newfoundland, N. J. Lieut.-Commander E. A. Brown, medical corps, was said to be killed.

The depot was struck by lightning about 5 p. m.

First official reports did not reach the Navy Department for several hours, and one of the first messages was garbled.

A later message, from Rear Admiral Plunkett, commandant of the Third Naval District, at New York, said Capt. O. C. Dowling, in command at the depot, had been seriously injured.

Admiral Plunkett said the depot had been struck by lightning and had been completely wiped out. The number of dead and injured was not known.

Plunkett advised the Navy Department just before midnight that a relief detachment made up of three medical officers, 17 men of the naval hospital corps, two marine officers and 46 marines were on the way with medical supplies to Lake Denmark from New York. He said also an ambulance, two medical officers, six special medical corps men and surgical supplies had been dispatched from Philadelphia. He was then without advices as to the casualties.

American Red Cross headquarters announced that it had sent Guy Storey, director of camp activities at Governor's Island, N. Y., to the scene of the disaster, to see what the national organization could do to supplement the relief work of local Red Cross units. Miss Alice Brock, field representative, has been ordered to West Morris, N. J., to co-operate with the Red Cross chapter there in relief activities.

The following telegram was received at the Navy Department at 9:44 p. m., Standard time, from Rear Admiral Plunkett, commandant of Third Naval District at New York:

"Report of death of Lieutenant-Commander E. A. Brown, Medical Corps at Lake Denmark now denied. Have been unable to obtain confirmation of death. Definite information concerning casualties within short time."

The Navy Department's records show that the complement of the Lake Denmark depot was as follows: One Captain of Marines and 59 enlisted men of Marine Corps, five naval officers and four enlisted men of the Naval Hospital Corps. Total 69. It was said at the Navy Department that a number of civilians, possibly 20 to 30 were employed there. They may not have been at work at the time the explosion occurred.

Major-General Clarence V. Williams, chief of army ordnance, and Brigadier-General V. L. Ruggles, assistant chief, prepared to leave tonight for the army arsenal at Picatinny to survey the situation.

Gen. Ruggles was informed that considerable damage had been done to buildings on the army reservation, some of them having been wrecked. He also was told that no estimate could be made on the loss of life or property damage, as no one could get near the danger zone.

Only one death, that of a woman, had been officially established, although it was believed many had been killed, and it was estimated that at least 20 or 30 persons had been injured.

Gen. Ruggles was informed that Capt. Dowling, commandant of the naval depot, had been injured about the legs. Previous advices had stated that he was seriously injured.

The Navy Department experienced difficulty in getting accurate information from the scene of the disaster. It also attempted to get up a list of personnel at the depot, but up to late tonight had given out only a few names.

They included, in addition to Capt. Dowling, and Lieutenant-Commander Brown of the Naval Medical Corps, Capt. B. H. Clarke and Lieut. Herman C. Schrader of the Marine Corps, chief gunners, J. M. Gately and W. A. Gerdts, and the following from the naval hospital detachment, stationed at the marine barracks: Charles Franklin Breamer, Chief Pharmacist's mate; Harry Christian Brown, pharmacist's mate; Donald Sanborn Prescott, pharmacist's mate second class, and Bernard Joseph Schackman, pharmacist's mate third class.

Home addresses were not available.

The Army Arsenal, Ruggles said, contains approximately 10 per cent of the army's stores of ammunition. The 700 workmen employed there, he added, had quit work at noon and most of them had gone to their homes in nearby towns.

The Army Arsenal was established at Picatinny about 40 years ago, and during the world war, plants were installed for the loading of projectiles and bombs. Work of this nature now carried on there is mostly experimental.

Capt. Dowling, in a telephone message late tonight to the Navy Department from Picatinny Arsenal, reported that Lieut.-Commander Brown, Lieut. Schrader and Capt. Clarke were mising. This did not indicate, however, that they had been killed, he said, as it was impossible to check the personnel.

Dowling said that the naval arsenal was on fire from end to end and had been demolished and that the Picatinny arsenal also was partly demolished.

Secretary Wilbur Kept Informed by Wireless.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 10.—Wireless messages from the naval radio stations at Lakehurst and the New York Navy Yard tonight kept Secretary of the Navy Wilbur informed of developments in the Lake Denmark, N. J., ammunition depot explosion.

Secertary Wilbur went aboard the U. S. S. New York today. He had planned to remain aboard for a rest until Thursday. Whether or not the New Jersey disaster had changed his plans could not be learned tonight.

SCENE OF THE DISASTER NAVY'S LARGEST PLANT FOR STORING AMMUNITION

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 10.

THE Lake Denmark plant was the navy's largest ammunition storage depot, comprising more than 500 acres of land. During the World War it was extended by an addition of 183 new buildings and other extensions of considerable magnitude were made.

The depot was purely a storage plant, at which no work of assembling, breaking down, or issuing of ammunition was done.

In describing activities at the depot, the Navy Department said tonight that ammunition supplies were received there either from the manufacturer or from other depots and were forwarded to other points upon orders by the department.

Tells of Seeing Explosion From Distance of 15 Miles.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Frank A. Gale, Montclair, N. J., tonight described the explosion of the naval ammunition depot at Lake Denmark, N. J., as he witnessed it from Oak Ridge, N. J., 15 miles distant. The first indication of an accident was the appearance over the Sparta Mountains, which separate Oak Ridge and New Foundland, N. J., from the valley in which the arsenal is located, of a huge cloud of white smoke.

A sharp explosion, deafeningly loud, followed the appearance of the cloud. Immediately afterward a thundering rumble and hissing shook the ground. A brilliant cloud of flame spread over the sky in the direction of the arsenal. A second and heavier explosion followed almost immediately.

The rumbling continued without intermission until some 40 minutes later, when a third explosion spread another brilliant flame across the sky. This third explosion was not so intense as the two which preceded it.

The rumbling continued for almost two hours after the first explosion, punctuated at brief intervals by sharp reports as of bombs and mines.

Gale said that the villages of Oak Ridge and New Foundland suffered little damage from falling debris as they were protected by the mountain ridge. He added that he feared greatly for the lives of numbers of children in summer camps in the vicinity of the arsenals.

Gale expressed the opinion that if lightning caused the original explosion it was literally "a bolt from the blue." He said that the storm which had broken over the territory some time previously had quieted to a gentle rain and that the western sky was clearing rapidly when the first blast came.

The Western Union telegraph operator at Dover, N. J., four miles from the arsenal, told Gale that the town of Dover suffered little damage, also due to a protecting ridge intervening. The operator, Gale said, reported that he had accounted for 100 dead among the military stationed at the arsenals and inhabitants of nearby towns.

Gale said that persons dwelling within a radius of 15 miles of the arsenals were leaving as rapidly as possible because of reports that there still remained a large magazine at the naval ammunition depot which had not yet exploded, but which was expected to go at any minute.

Gale said that reports reaching Oak Ridge were that the villages of Mount Hope and Denmark on the outskirts of which the arsenal is situated were totally destroyed an dthat several summer camps in the vicinity also were leveled.

S-51 in Dry Dock, Where 18 Bodies Were Recovered

Thousands Strew Flowers On Wreck of the S-51

Stand Bareheaded in Blistering Sun at Brooklyn Navy Yard to Pay Tribute to Those Who Died in Submarine.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 10.—A bright page was added to the tragic history of the submarine S-51 today

Beneath a blistering sun and retarded by transportation strikes, thousands made their way to Brooklyn Navy Yard to strew flowers on the rusted, gashed and barnacled hulk in which 33 officers and men met death. The visitors, some of them relatives of the men who perished when the submersible was rammed and sunk last September, stood bareheaded in reverent contemplation of the wrecked submarine.

Her silken flag still fluttered at half mast. Marines paced silent guard at her sides. On the deck was a giant wreath of flowers Navy Yard employes had put beside a smaller one placed by the hands of Lieutenant Commander Richard E. Byrd.

Abandon Search for Dead.

By the time the crowd was admited to the Navy Yard, the search for dead had been abandoned, and the number of bodies the steel sepulchre contained was fixed at 18 by Rear Admiral Plunkett, Commandant of the Navy Yard. All of them were taken out yesterday, but a further search had been made during the morning.

The last roll call for the crew of 36 men found seven unaccounted for and Navy officers said no trace of these may ever be found. Three of them were officers, including the commander of the submarine, Lieut. R. H. Dobson, who was last seen on the bridge.

Ship's Records Damaged.

What ship's records were found, officers said, were in such condition that they may be of no value in ascertaining what happened on the ship before she sank. This was not considered a great loss, inasmuch as it was believed there had been no time to make entries after the iron prow of the Savannah Line steamer City of Rome crashed into the submarine.

The Court of Inquiry that had been investigating the cause of the S-51 going aground in East River, while being towed to the navy yard last Wednesday, adjourned until Monday. It is expected to take up investigation of the sinking of the S-51 off Block Island when it resumes sessions.

The list of identified dead follows:

Lieut. (Junior Grade) F. D. Foster of Nutley, N. J.

Ensign E. W. Egbert, Mariners Harbor, N. Y.

Henry D. Elser, coxswain, Columbus, O.

alentine Hiltbold, chief torpedo man, Newport, R. I.

Frank Lester Mims, seaman, first class, Augusta, Ga.

KANSAS CONVICTS, WHO MUTINIED, SURRENDER

375 Men Who Had Remained in Mine for Day Are Brought to Surface.

By the Associated Press.

LANSING, Kan., July 10.—Mutineers in the mine of the Kansas Penitentiary here ca[illegible] early tonight and came to the surface. The convicts, who had remained in the mine since yesterday, defying prison officials, gave in without having gained their demands.

Hunger and the futility of further resistance in the face of the stern attitude adopted by Warden W. H. Mackey, supported by Gov. Ben S. Paulen, brought the collapse of the rebellion.

The convicts released the [illegible] in the mine shaft, which they had tied down yesterday, and were hoisted up in groups of 12. Shortly before they sent word over the mine telephone that they were ready to surrender, a threat had been made that the mine would be destroyed.

375 Men in Revolt.

The prisoners, 375 in number, had been in the mine since yesterday, refusing to come to the surface and had blocked effort of prison officials to descend the shaft. Spokesmen of the convicts today made demands on Warden Mackey, including one that word of the granting of all demands be published in the newspapers under the picture and signature of the Governor.

To these demands, the Governor turned a deaf ear, and left to Warden Mackey the policy of starving out the mutinous prisoners. The answer was communicated to the prisoners, who, after a short time, induced one of the 13 prison guards, captive with them in the mine, to telephone again to the Warden, begging the granting of the demands. Again the Warden refused.

The demands listed included liberation of men held for disturbance earlier in the week, immunity for the present mutineers, transfer of prisoners to a new cell house, three square meals a day, publication of the acceptance of their demands with picture and signature of the Governor, a copy of such newspaper to be dropped down the mine shaft.

For reply Warden Mackey told the mutinous prisoners they could stay below ground just as long as they wished.

MRS. BUDLONG ENDS TRIAL WITH SURPRISE MOVE

ars Questions on "Silk Shirt Siege" by Confining Her Testimony to Events Before It Occurred

RIEFS TO REPLACE ORAL ARGUMENT

pecial to the Post-Dispatch.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 10.—With a gesture typical of her aptiude for the unusual, Mrs. Milton . Budlong brought her husband's uit for divorce to an abrupt and nforeseen end in Superior Court ere this afternoon. Her sudden hange of tactics terminated in 23 inutes a session that was execited to last far into the night, urprised her opponents and the udge, and visibly disappointed the argest courtroom crowd her marial difficulties have yet attracted.

Instead of resuming, as the only itness for the defense, the exemely detailed account of the ribulations of her married life hich was interrupted by adjournent yesterday, she closed testiony and her case with a single, conic assertion.

"I lived with Mr. Budlong up to ept. 10 or 15, 1923," she read om a prepared statement, "and lfilled all the obligations of the arriage covenant. He left our mmon bed and board and later ok his trunk and left the house."

Judge Edward W. Blodgett alwed the contestants two weeks which to file briefs that will ke the place of summation arguents.

Mrs. Budlong left off the somr black she has steadfastly afcted since the trial began a week o last Monday. She was without hat for the first time, and wore tan crepe de Chine gown parcularly becoming to her dark, atractiveness. Her only jewelry was dinner ring and a string of bloodolored beads—there was no weding band.

In the role of counsel for the fense which she assumed last esday after dismissing her elevth lawyer in three years she pped to the bar when court coned at 2 p. m. and asked for an eption to Judge Blodgett's del of her motion of yesterday, t the suit be dismissed on the t c nc extreme cruelty had n proved by the plaintiff.

The kindly elderly jurist smiling directed that the exception be ted. With a word of thanks rs. Budlong stepped to the witss stand, groped among a sheaf papers, and read her surprising atement.

"That is all I wish to say, your onor," she placidly announced, he defense rests."

Blocked Cross-Examination.

Yesterday garrulous and tearful she was, Mrs. Budlong discussed nly that part of her life prior to 923. Most of the allegations of ruelty that form the basis for her usband's suit concern events from at time on. Today's move, therere, balked all cross-examination the really important period of eir domestic relations. It barred unsel for the petitioner from all estioning as to the "silk shirt ge" of February, 1925, when rs. Budlong locked herself in her sband's apartment and comanded front page publicity for e days by flinging to the rerters messages written on her sband's silk shirts.

Abbot Phillips and Chauncey heeler who have pressed Budng's case against his wife for arly three years, lifted their eyeows in amazement at her anuncement then bent their heads whispered consultation.

"We have decided to waive oss-examination in behalf of the tition," Phillips said.

Mrs. Budlong, with a pleased ile, rose and carefully fitted a rge tan hat on her black hair. "I would like, your Honor, to file brief instead of oral argument," addressed the Court, "and reest at least two months in which prepare it."

Judge Blodgett emphatically derred and was promptly and gently echoed by Phillips.

"It is very unusual to file a brief adverse case, your Honor," Phils protested. "In fact, I have er heard of its being done in courts."

"Would you be kind enough to his Honor hear what I have to ?" asked Mrs. Budlong of her ponent, her hearty dislike for om she has made no effort to nceal. "Mr. Phillips has done thing after another in this case t is not according to regular cedure. Your Honor knows my xperience, and I would like a as well as time to prepare my ef. I would like until Septem, anyway."

The argument and the case ended th Judge Blodgett's decision that s. Budlong's brief must be filed July 20, after which the petiner will have four days in which file a reply.

Widower Who Claims $25,000 From Widow, Who Wouldn't Wed

PETER WILLIAM FUCHS.

SAYS HE CAN DISPROVE M'PHERSON KIDNAPING

Mayor of Agua Prieta, Mexico, Offers to Testify Before Grand Jury.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, July 10.—Wiring to District Attorney Keyes that he could and would prove to the Los Angeles grand jury that Aimee Semple McPherson was not kidnaped and held prisoner in Mexico. Ernest Doubion, Mayor of the town of Agua Prieta, where the evangelist made her appearance after her mysterious absence, today was reported to have promised to appear in this city and tell his story whenever the authorities desire. That his testimony will be the sensation of the grand jury hearing, which will be resumed Tuesday, seems certain.

Deputy District Attorney Joe Ryan, whose unannounced disappearance yesterday caused much speculation, was in San Francisco today. Newspaper men found him there working under a cloak of secrecy in an effort to find Kenneth Ormiston, former radio operator of Angelus Temple, who was questioned shortl after Mrs. McPherson's disappearance. His examination at that time was brougth about by the asserted discovery that his wife at one time contemplated naming Mrs. McPherson in a suit against Ormiston.

It is said that following this examination Ormiston went to Salinas, Cal., where he is rumored to eave joined a heavily veiled woman. The two, according to published reports, entered Ormiston's car and drove away. Ormiston has not been seen since.

Meanwhile, Mrs. McPherson and her mother refused to see newspaper men who wish to interview them in connection with these new developments, referring callers to Arthur Veitch, their attorney.

Department of Justice agents are said to be in Mexico searching for "Felipe," the supposed head of a white slave ring, to whom Mrs. McPherson asserts her captors threatened to sell her if the ransom was not forthcoming.

may be sustained on the theory that the disposition of property by will is not absolutely a natural right of the owner, but only a privilege allowed by law, to which the Legislature may attach such limitations as it sees fit. "Although the statute may be legal," he added, "we must concede that its wisdom is not beyond question. Here Mr. Link died leaving a perfectly good will in which he directed that his estate should go to his widow, but through no fault of his, and through none of her's, this filing had aagNbuai-tas hrdu this will happened to be discovered only after the year fixed by lew fo- filin- had -arsed. If this will were executed with the formalities required by the Louisiana law it could be probated at Baton Rouge, where Link died, and then merely on filing an authenticated copy it would have the same effect as probated here. But the Louisiana law is so different from the law here that the will is not good there."

During the period of administration considerable litigation ensued which, it was pointed out by counsel, could have been avoided if the will had been found on time. Mrs. Woodward, through her husband, who is an attorney, filed a petition in Probate Court to remove her uncle as administrator on the ground that he failed to make final settlement. Judge Holtcamp denied her petition when it was shown settlement had been delayed pending adjudication of a partition suit. This suit was by one of the heirs for the purpose of authorizing sale of the realty. A controversy also arose over whether Link's domicile at his death was in Louisiana or Missouri. It is a legal principle that all stocks, bonds and other personal property, no matter in what State located, must be distributed among the heirs of the deceased person according to the law as fixed by the State in which the person lived. The question of legal domicile in the Link case made a vast difference in fixing the proportions each heir would receive but documents filed in the Probate Court reveal that a compromise upon this point finally was made.

In addition there were conflicting claims to force the partition of the realty.

Besides being the designer of Union Station Link designed the plans for the St. Louis World's Fair buildings and for Barnes Hospital among other notable structures. He had left St. Louis to draw the plans for the State capitols of Mississippi and Louisiana and had just finished this work shortly before his death.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Federal internal revenue collections in Missouri for the fiscal year ended June 30 amounted to $67,809,275, an increase of $6,348,170 over 1925, the Treasury Department announced today. An increase of $6,365,601 in income tax collections in the St. Louis district was responsible for the enormous gain throughout the whole State.

Total collections in the St. Louis district amounted to $52,808,985, of which $36,685,106 was from income taxes and $16,123,879 from miscellaneous taxes.

Income tax collections in the St. Louis district for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1925, amounted to $30,319,505. The miscellaneous taxes during that year amounted to $16,289,568. The decrease in this latter class of tax was $165,689. The net increase for the St. Louis district over last year was $6,199,912.

At Kansas City, $15,000,240.

Receipts from the Sixth Missouri (Kansas City) district were approximately the same for the two years. Total collections in that district this year were $15,000,240, of which $12,929,200 was from income taxes and $2,071,040 from miscellaneous taxes. Income tax collections in that district in 1925 amounted to $12,148,068. The increase was only $781,132.

Despite the liberal exemptions and the drastic cuts in the 1926 revenue law, the internal revenue receipts for the entire country showed a gain of $251,982,631. Total collections from all sources this year amount to $2,836,122,899 in comparison with the $2,584,140,268 collected in 1925.

For the entire country, both income and miscellaneous taxes produced increases. In 1925 the income tax collections were $1,761,659,049; this year they were $1,972,798,839. The increase was $2[illegible]1,13[illegible],[illegible]90. Miscellaneous taxes in 1925 were $822,481,218 and in 1926 were $863,314,060. The increase was $40,832,842.

Largest Collections.

The largest collections were from the industrial states of New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Michigan, North Carolina, Ohio and California, New York leading the list with $733,072,365, far ahead of Pennsylvania with $251,982,600. Income tax receipts alone in New York amounted to $568,114,671. In 1925 the income tax collections were $496,709,727.

Total collections for Illinois which, like Missouri, is divided into two collection districts, were $216,511,958 last year, of which $176,881,182 was from income taxes and $39,630,776 from miscellaneous taxes. The first (Chicago) district turned in $169,093,737 in income taxes and $34,544,405 in miscellaneous taxes, making a total of $203,638,142. The Eighth (Springfield) district had total collections of $12,873,825, of which $7,787,455 represented income taxes and $5,086,370 miscellaneous taxes.

Decrease in Kansas.

Agricultural Kansas contributed a total of $4,877,401 this year. Income taxes represented $4,392,164 of this amount and miscellaneous taxes, $485,237. Last year the income taxes amounted to $4,692,973. The decrease was $300,809.

Oklahoma fared better than her neighboring sister. Total collection there amounted to $17,916,116, of which $15,782,894 was from income taxes and $2,133,272 from miscellaneous taxes. In 1925 the income tax collections were only $9,820,419. The increase was $5,962,475.

CITIZEN SOLDIERS BEGIN TRAINING AT THE BARRACKS

Presentation of Colors Is the Feature of Opening Day's Exercises at Camp Here.

1600 RECRUITS REPORT FOR DUTY

Most of Them New to Military Discipline Under Which They Will Work Until Aug. 6.

Sixteen hundred youths unaccustomed to khaki uniforms and military discipline gathered on the parade grounds at Jefferson Barracks yesterday afternoon for the formal opening of the Citizens' Military Training Camp in which they will participate until Aug. 6.

The rookies lined up in drill formation before the grandstand and with heads bared took the oath of allegiance which was read phrase by phrase by Lieutenant-Colonel George W. England and repeated by the students.

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm)," ran the oath, "that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the United States of America; and while at this camp, I will obey those in authority and observe all the rules and regulations of the camp to the best of my ability, so help me God."

Presentation of Colors.

The Sixth Infantry colors were taken from the home of Col. Moor N. Falls, commandant at the Barracks, and presented with military ceremonies to the students. The National colors were intrusted to Thomas Cherry of Cowden, Ill., the regimental colors to Thomas Gallagher, Shelbyville, Ill., while A. P. Robertson of Frankford, Mo., and Guy McHenry, Manila, Ark., were named color guards. The flags will be kept in the training camp quarters until the close of the encampment.

Col. Falls delivered an address of welcome, Chaplain C. J. Higgins pronounced the benediction and the Sixth Infantry Band played military airs. At the conclusion of the ceremonies the students returned to their tents and about 100 of them were assigned to guard duty for the first time.

The program for today is not a full one, it being the Sabbath. Protestant and Catholic church services will be held during the morning, and at 10 a. m. the students will assemble on the parode ground where addresses will be delivered by Col. Falls, Lieuenant-Colonel Bingham, the camp surgeon, Chaplain Higgins, Col. Albert T. Perkins and Carl F. G. Meyer.

The purpose of the speeches will be to acquaint the youths with their duty to their country and impress them with the importance of adhering to discipline while in camp.

Monday morning the camp will swing into a program of drills and maneuvers, designed to crowd as much of military training as possible into a month.

The Red Cross is co-operating to provide entertainment for the youths, by giving a series of dances in the Barracks pavilion. There will be a moving picture show each evening.

BOSTON, July 10.—U. S. Attorney Harold P. Williams today ordered the release from custody of the British schooner Sunner, seized off Cape Cod Wednesday with a cargo of 2500 cases of alcohol, when it was found there was no legal evidence for holding her. Counsel for the schooner declared that the craft was nearly 11 miles from shore at the time of the seizure, that she had had no contact with the shore, and that she had no intention of landing cargo in this country. The Sunner was towed out of the harbor today to resume her voyage to Havana.

Japanese, Killing Himself for White Wife's Sake, Pens Love Notes Until Heart Stops Beating

William Idi of Evansville, Ind., Ended Life With Gas When 16-Year-Old Bride Wrote Asking Him to Annul Their Marriage.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., July 10.—William Fdi," Japanese, 26 years old, killed himself here with gas when his 16-year-old white bride, who was Lillian McDaniels, asked him to annul their marriage. His body was not discovered until today, 10 days after his death. Near his hand lay the following note from his wife:

"Dear Bill: Say, Bill, I sure am sorry but we have to do something. I asked my father what he would do if I ran away and married. He said, 'Have it annulled or send him to jail for a long time if he was over 21 years old, and me to the reform school until I was 21 years old.' Now, Bill, if you love me you will let me go without trouble. I will die if you don't, for my father meant just what he said. A white girl belongs to her father until she is 21 years old. He can do just what he wants to. Just think, you will be sure to go to jail for a long time. It will cost between $65 and $100 to get a lawyer to get me out of it. I have an old Judge for a friend and if you will send me the money, I will try and get him to have it annulled. That is to recall the marriage. I will sure die if I have to worry.

"I will always be your friend. You told me Saturday night you would do what I want you to. Please answer quick.

"P. S.—O, Bill, won't you please? If you don't I will (kill myself) because I would die by inches anyway if I had to go to the reform school. It's the same thing as jail. O, and you to jail. I just can't stand it much longer.

"Please answer quick if you love me. When I am 21, then I can do what I want. Please, Bill, dear. See you tomorrow? Dear, I am worried. O, I sure am. I will see you in the morning.

"Yours."

Wrote Love Notes Until He Died.

Scattered over a table, where until his heart stopped beating under the poisonous gas he sat writing note after note to his bride were the following, this one apparently the first, as it is written in a firm hand:

"Dear My Wife: I am going to kill myself now. I don't know what I tell you last before I know whaty ou did last night never willed do this way. I never don't annulled our marry because I still love you. Do you think I afraid to go to jail and death? I am glad to do it, sake my love now.

"But Lillian don't you try to kill yourself like last night because you have nice mother and father. Don't let them have worry again. I havne't nobody to let have worry. I think I have little more time to tell you but so hard to breathe now. Young lady, I can hear sound of the gas that is killing me but don't die yet. I don't know I could kill myself with it but I try. Anyway I haven't hope to save my life if I miss you. I think death is the best way to I go."

This is thought to be the second note. It is written in a less firm hand:

"Dear Lillian: Do you remember all away I told you that I have a poor orphan girl in the Japan. After I die she will be your sister. I want you to write to her what I did, will you? When I found her out from starvation she was just nine years old. After this I protect without duty. Just love for human being but now I killing my selfe sake love."

This is one of the last:

"Dear my wife: Don't be ashamed you selfe if you had Japanese because I love you more than I my life."

When Death Stopped His Pen.

This is the last; writing is barely legible:

"Dear my wife: I am hard to keep writ to you now. Well good by.

"Your WILLIAM IDI."

The following is the last one Idi wrote Lillian after they were married. She never heard from him again and thought he had left town when he failed to call on her for 12 days.

"Dear Lillian: I will write to you last of my letters. I am going to annul that you ask me our marry. But I couldn't give you up all my life. How can I alive without you. But I am in no hope now. I must kill myself. Well young lady be happy. Will you give me one last something to remember then I will love it like I love you.

"From your WILLIAM IDI."

FRENCH VETERANS IN DEBT PROTEST PARADE

20,000 Expected in Paris Demonstration Today With Appeal to People of U. S.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 10.—Between 20,000 and 50,000 former soldiers of the French Army, many of them wounded, will take part in the parade tomorrow morning in protest against ratification of the Mellon-Berenger debt agreement. The march will take place with battle flags flying, though not draped in mourning as previously planned, to the Arc de Triomphe, the Alan Seeger Monument and the Equestrian statue of George Washington, at each of which a wreath will be placed.

The culminating feature of the demonstration will be the placing at the foot of the Washington statue of a stone on which is carved in French this message to the people of the United States:

"Over the head of diplomacy and far from political and financial combines the war veterans of France appeal straight to the people of the United States. After the deceptions of peace the proposed debt settlement would consecrate the ruin of France and the loss of its independence. America will understand that the war veterans of France, who are honest, sincere and loyal, are asking in a friendly manner that the study of the question should be taken up once more."

The French Government withdrew its order forbidding the parade after it was assured that there was no political significance in the demonstration.

No American organization will take part, although some members of the American volunteers in the French army may be present at the Alan Seeger monument in a private capacity.

Durand and Jourdain, members of the Cabinet, explained at a Cabinet meeting this morning why the ban against the demonstration had been removed. Americans in Paris in general, they said, were of the opinion that he veterans were quite logical in protesting, but were annoyed at the wording of the posters which had been distributed throughout the country describing the Washington agreement as the "Calvary of the Victors," and the statement that the debts had been reduced only 5 per cent.

COOLIDGE TO CARRY OUT FLEET SALE REGARDLESS OF SACRIFICE

Government Soon to Dispose of Remnant of Wartime Ships That Cost $3,00,000,000.

LARGEST STEAMER AFLOAT ONE OF THEM

They Include Leviathan and George Washington and Are Expected to Go at Low Prices.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The few large ships remaining out of the vast fleet which the Government constructed during the World War at a total cost of $3,000,000,000 are soon to be placed on the market, for sale to private ship companies. This is the culmination of a policy which President Coolidge has pursued ever since he took office, namely of getting the Government out of the shipping business as rapidly as possible, even at huge sacrifices in ships and money.

Announcement that the Leviathan—largest ship afloat—the George Washington, and other ships of the United States lines, would be sold to private owners, was made concidently with the removal of Elmer E. Crowley as head of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, which operates the Government-owned ships.

Appointed to succeed Crowley, is Brigadier-General A. C. Dalton, who is known to be committed to the Coolidge doctrine that the Government should neither own nor operate ships if it can possibly get rid of them.

Early Sale Expected.

Purchase of the active remaining vessels either by existing ship companies, or by new combine of large bankers, probably will be announced at an early date. If the prices to be received by the Government are anything like those received for ships previously sold to private owners, another great sacrifice is in order.

Perhaps the largest single sale of Government ships by the Shipping Board was that made late in 1923 to the Dollar Steamship Co. of San Francisco. Seven ships of "The President" class, which had been built by the Government at a total cost of $33,000,000, were sold to the Dollar Co. for $5,000,000. At the same time the Shipping Board steamer, City of Los Angeles, which had cost the Government $4,857,000, was sold to the Los Angeles Steamship Co. for $100,000 cash.

The "President" ships, so called because they were named respectively the President Adams, President Hayes, President Garfield, President Van Buren, President Harrison, President Monroe and President Polk, were crack commercial vessels. Each was 502 feet long, and displaced 13,000 tons. To build them had cost the Government $4,000,000 each. In line with the administration policy of unloading of them as quickly as possible, they were sold to the Dollar Co. for $550,000 each. Five have been in the New York-London service and two in the Pacific Coast-South American trade.

Sale Made Secretly.

The contract for the sale was made secretly and came to light several months later in consequence of inquiries conducted by Senator Fletcher (Dem.) of Florida. In addition to the price disclosed, it was discovered that under the terms of the contract, the Dollar Co. would pay 25 per cent of the purchase price on delivery, and the remainder in installments covering a period of 10 years.

At the head of the Shipping Board when the sale was made, and largely responsible for the terms of the contract, was Edward P. Farley, serving under a recess appointment from President Coolidge. So violent was the reaction in Congress when the terms of the sale became public, that when President Coolidge submitted Farley's nomination for regular appointment, the Senate refused to confirm him. Before leaving office, however, he completed the sale, and the ships were delivered.

The case of the City of Los Angeles was the most unusual. This vessel was built by the Government during the war at an original cost of $1,861,000. When the Shipping Board took it over from the navy in 1920, it was reconditioned at a cost of $2,860,000. Subsequent repairs and additions brought the total cost to $4,857,000. The price of $100,000 for which it was sold to the Los Angeles Steamship Co., therefore was less than one-fortieth of its cost.

Transaction Denounced.

Senator Fletcher, the leading advocate in Congress for a national merchant marine, denounced the transaction in furious language.

"It has cost the taxpayers of this country $3,000,000,000 to build an adequate merchant marine," he said. "I am convinced, and experience has shown, that the only way we can have an adequate merchant marine is by Government ownership and operation of the ships. It doesn't interfere with private business in the slighest degree. There is now less tonnage under the American flag than there was at the beginning of the civil war, and yet we find our own officials virtually giving away the flower of our fleet to private companies.

"I realize that there are many people who believe that the Government should not engage in the shipping businss. I can understand their feeling, and from their viewpoint there would be some justification in selling the vessels at a fair price. But there can be no justification or any ground for giving them away. They are not old tubs. On the contrary, they are comparatively new ships, among the finest of their type on teh seas."

Criticism of Policy.

The act of Congress under which the Shipping Board proceeded in selling the ships, provided that they were to be disposed of as rapidly as was possible under terms and "conditions consistent with ordinary sound business judgment."

Senator Fletcher and other critics of the policy which has been pursued, have repeatedly declared that the sacrifice of the costly fleet at prices only a fraction of the cost to the Government was a plain violation of this provision.

It is true that the United States lines have never made a profit. It has been declared, however, that this could be attributed to two causes:

First—That the men in charge of them were opposed to Government operation and were not eager to show a profit from it.

Second—That the ships on paying routes were sold first to private companies, leaving the unprofitable routes on the Government's hands.

Attitude of Board.

Senator Fletcher, among others, advanced this explanation: "Everybody knows that the majority of the members of the Shipping Board are opposed to Government operation," he said. "They have said so themselves. No business will ever make money when it is conducted by men who want to see it fail."

Subordinate to the Shipping Board and in actual charge of operation is the Emergency Fleet Corporation, another war-time body. When President Coolidge came into office he found a majority of the Shipping Board not in sympathy with his design to unload the ships at whatever sacrifice. A long period of disagreement ensued, but the President gradually got rid of those who opposed him and appointed successors who were certain to carry out his policies.

Then the board found itself having trouble with the head of the Fleet Corporation, the practical operating man. They eventually solved this problem by requiring each new fleet corporation head upon appointment to office to deposit with the Shipping Board an undated resignation, which the board could accept at any time it became dissatisfied with operation. This was the method used a few days ago in getting rid of Crowley.

It is admitted that Crowley was a practical shipping man of great resourcefulness and ability. It has been generally reported that the United States lines, under his management were becoming so efficient that they would soon show a profit. The Shipping Board refuses to give out the figures. Naturally, this would be used by critics of the administration as an argument against selling the ships. So the decision was made—obviously with the President's approval, to let Crowley out.

This was made easy by the reconstituted personnel of the board. The successive resignations of Bert Haney, of Oregon, and Fred Thompson, of Alabama—both of whom opposed the Coolidge policy of disposing of the ships, without at least obtaining some guarantee that the trade routes established by the Government would be maintained—had enabled the President to fill the board with men who favored his views. He had a majority composed of Chairman T. V. O'Connor, and members, W. S. Hill, J. W. Walsh and Philip S. Teller, opposed by a minority including only Admiral William Benson and E. C. Plummer.

Admiral Benson and Plummer supported Crowley, and protested vigorously against his removal. It is worthy of note that Admiral Benson and Crowley were the only practical shipping men out of the lot.

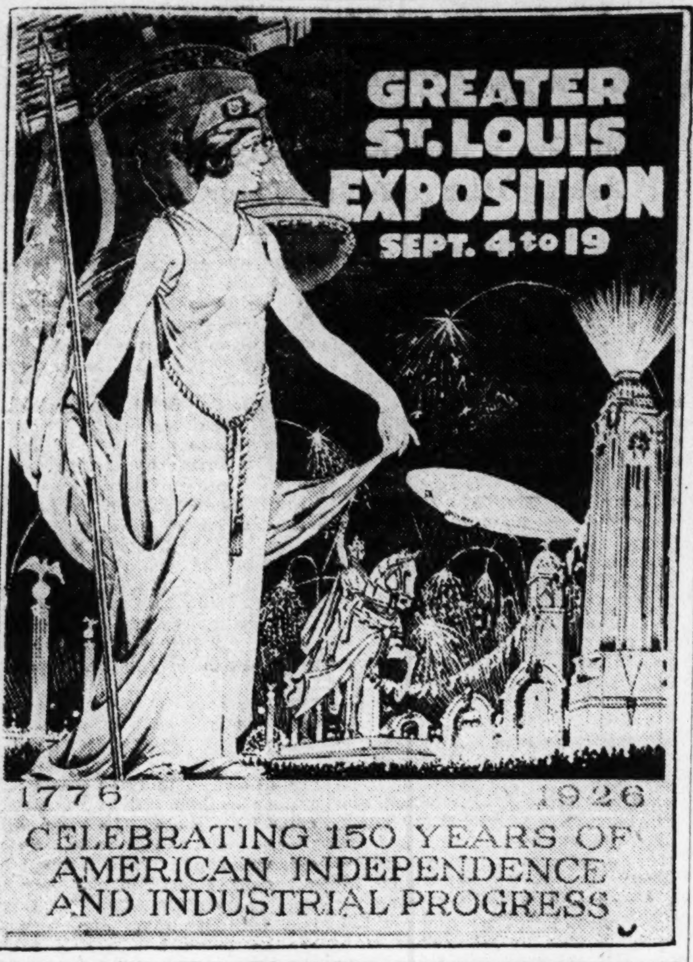
Reminiscent of the methods adopted in the Federal Trade Commission since President Coolidge remoulded it near to his heart's desire, the shipping board majority declined even to present their reasons for Crowley's removal when asked by the minority to do so.

Statement of Crowley.

Crowley, himself issued a statement, saying he had not been informed of the reasons for his dismissal, and declaring that he had saved the Government $5,000,000 in the operation of the ships during the nine months of his incumbency.

That the President and his majority waited until after the adjournment of Congress to fire Crowley and announce the prospective sale of the ships, is no secret. Senator Fletcher had not been alone in Congress in his criticism of the policies followed, and had the present action been taken while Congress was in session, it undoubtedly would have provoked a storm there. For the same reason, it is certain that every possible effort will be made to get rid of the surviving vessels before Congress convenes again in November. This may have the effect of still further lowering the prices—already expected to set new low bargain levels.

Design for Official Poster of Greater St. Louis Exposition



MINIATURE COAL MINE AT EXPOSITION

Attractive Exhibits Planned for Greater St. Louis Fair, Sept. 4-19.

Every branch of industry in which St. Louis is active will be represented in the display booths at the Greater St. Louis Exposition, to be held in Forest Park Sept. 4 to 19, by the Chamber of Commerce.

Hundreds of corporations have reserved individual booths, while in many instances companies interested in similar lines are co-operating to arrange displays. Many of the exhibits will be grouped according to lines of industry.

The coal dealers' organization will exhibit a model of a working coal mine. The Citizens' Smoke Abatement League will demonstrate new equipment and methods in abating smoke. Grouped by industries will be the florists, the monument manufacturers, the merchant tailors and the automobile dealers.

Some of the exhibits will be unrelated to industry. A large fraternal organization has reserved a booth for membership headquarters; the Women's National Exposition has engaged spaec to advertise its next annual exposition, and a theatrical syndicate will be among the exhibitors.

Retailers' exhibits will include shoes, pianos, candy, phonographs, hardware and clothing. Business colleges, life insurance companies, photograph studios, real estate firms, railroads and traction systems will be among the exhibitors.

1600 AT MISSOURI PACIFIC BANQUET

Jubilee Dinner Party at Hotel Chase Begins After Close of Pageant.

Railroad presidents and trainmen, bankers and bill clerks, were among the 1600 guests at the diamond jubilee banquet of the Missouri Pacific lines, which began at Hotel Chase after 11 o'clock last night, and continued until almost morning.

The banquet followed the night's performance of the Missouri Pacific's pageant, at the Washington University stadium, before a gathering which filled the vast seating space. The final production of the pageant will be given tonight. Many of the participants attended the banquet, which, like the pageant, commemorated the 75th anniversary of the building of the original line of the present Missouri Pacific system.

Miniature Freight Train.

The entrance to the Chase lounge and to the dining rooms, was treated scenically to resemble the observation platform of a parlor car. Red and green lights hung at the sides, and "passengers," entering, showed a uniformed conductor, or a porter, their "passes" as they mounted the steps.

Waiters of the Missouri Pacific dining car service manned the long tables. In front of the speakers' table ran a track, on which, after the guests were seated, a miniature freight train appeared, bearing birthday cakes. The cakes, with candles forming the number "75," were placed on each of the tables, the biggest one on the speaker's table. The Mexican band, whose playing had been a feature of the pageant, played at the banquet.

Many Executives Present.

Lewis W. Baldwin, president of the Missouri Pacific, presided and E. J. White, vice president, and W. Frank Carter were the first speakers. Three-minute talks from a number of others followed. Directors introduced were W. H. Williams, chairman of the board; W. T. Kemper, George W. Niedringhaus and R. Lancaster Williams. Speakers representing various states were: Texas, H. R. Safford and R. E. Harding; Louisiana, Charles Claibourne; Arkansas, H. C. Couch; Illinois, Josiah Whitnel; Tennessee, Mayor Rowlett Payne of Memphis; Mississippi, R. V. Fletcher; Nebraska, Nels Updike; and Kansas, Emerson Carey. Col. Ruiz M. O. Sandoval, Consul of Mexico, spoke for that country, and Samuel O. Dunn for the railroad press.

Railroad executives among the guests were J. M. Kurn, president of the Frisco; W. J. Bierd, president of the Chicago & Alton; A. E. Clift, vice president of the Illinois Central; J. E. Gorman, president of the Rock Island; Daniel Upthegrove, president of the Cotton Belt; H. R. Kurrie, president of the Monon; J. L. Lancaster, president of the Texas & Pacific; T. C. Powell, president, and W. J. Jackson, board chairman, of the C. & E. I.; and W. T. Noonan, president of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg.

Geographical Menu.

St. Louis and Missouri speakers and guests included Senator George H. Williams, Representative H. B. Hawes, and a number of bankers and business men.

The articles on the menu, save for the coffee, were products of the territory reached by the Missouri Pacific lines. These included Colorado celery, Arkansas chicken, Missouri radishes and pickles, Nebraska ham, Oklahoma potatoes, Arkansas sweet corn, Missouri lima beans, bread from Kansas wheat, Ozark peach ice cream, St. Louis County milk and fruit cocktail and combination salad from various points. The sugar used with the coffee came from a Colorado refinery.

The office workers who took part in the pageant, some 800 in number, had a holiday yesterday.

17-YEAR LOCUSTS DUE IN MISSOURI IN 1927

Department of Agriculture Issues Warning of Plague in Central States.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Missouri, together with Eastern Kansas, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina will be visited by a plague of the dreaded 17-year locusts next May and June, according to a warning issued by Dr. J. A. Hyslop of the Department of Agriculture Bureau of Entomology.

There will be no plauge this year and no precautionary measures can be taken now to forestall the ravages of the billions of insects that will feed on orchards and nursery stocks, it was said at the bureau today.

Thirty broods of these periodical visitors have been checked up in the United States and brood No. 1, which will infest the Central States next summer, is comparatively small. Little permanent damage is expected. One or more of the broods appear in some portion of the country almost every year.

The Periodical Cicada.

The Department of Agriculture has long kept a close check on all broods of locusts and is able to say with almost complete accuracy when and over what territory any brood will appear. It was generally believed that the period of recurrence was 17 years, but occasionally there would be an outbreak that failed to coincide within any possible 17-year period and investigators were getting different results, with periods ranging all the way from 10 to 17 years. Finally a 13-year period family was discovered in the South. Tihs solved the problem.

The proper name for the insect is the periodical cicada. "Millions of these insects attain maturity at almost the same moment and emerge for a noisy and strenuous existence above ground, terminating in exhaustion and death after about five weeks," a Departmental bulletin states.

During this period the females lay their eggs by chiselling grooves in the small branches of trees. This results in apparently great injury to forest, orchard and other trees, but the fear aroused is out of proportion to the real damage likely to be done. Little permanent injury is wrought except to young orchard and nursery stock and even in these cases precautionary measures can be taken that will obviate most of the injury."

Due in Last Week in May.

The cicada may be expected next year during the last week in May, or the first week in June, bureau officials said. A month later the deposition of eggs in the branches will have become general.

The putting out of young orchards next spring is to be discouraged, the bureau warning advices. Such planting should be deferred until fall when danger from the swarm will be past.

Other ameliorative measures are recommended, such as hand picking the insects from young trees, spraying at the time of emergence and whitewashing of trees at the beginning of the laying periods. The sprays recommended by the bureau are pyrethrum powder, kerosene emulsions or a solution of carbolic or acetic acid.

UHLS' CONVICTION FOR GIBBS MURDER UPHELD

Former Head of Sanitarium in Kansas Must Serve 10 to 25 Years.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOPEKA, Kan., July 10.—Ken B. Uhls of Overland Park, former Kansas University athletic star, must go to prison for 10 to 25 years. The Kansas Supreme Court today affirmed the verdict of a jury in the Reno County District Court convicting Uhls of the murder of William E. Gibbs, an aged recluse.

Gibbs was killed in December, 1923. Uhls is in jail at Hutchinson, having been surrendered by his bondsmen some weeks ago. His father, Dr. L. L. Uhls, was superintendent of the State Hospital for the Insane for 16 years, and following his retirement in 1912 established the Uhls clinic and sanitarium at Overland Park. Ken B. Uhls was the active manager of the clinic for several years.

Gibbs owned $102,000 of the stock of the Uhls clinic. When county authorities investigated Gibbs' effects they discovered that his Uhls stock was missing. Records in the office of the corporation at Overland Park showed the stock had been transferred to Charles E. Westerhaven 10 days before the recluse was murdered. State authorities learned that two days before Gibbs' death Klen B. Uhls, who had succeeded his father as head of the sanitarium upon his father's death in 1922, had left Overland Park with Frank Leonard, a patient at the institution. Less than a month afterward Uhls and the patient were arrested, charged with murder.

A jury found Uhls guilty of murder in the second degree.

STATE CONSIDERS TRYING DURKIN FOR ANOTHER MURDER

Prosecutors Dissatisfied With 35-Year Sentence Given Him for Killing Federal Agent Shanahan.

MAY AGAIN PRESS FOR DEATH PENALTY

Indictment Pending Charges Slaying of Police Sergeant Who Tried to Trap Him After First Murder.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 10.—While Martin J. Durkin pondered in his cell today a prison sentence of 35 years, imposed by a jury which found him guilty of murder for the killing of Edwin C. Shanahan, a Federal agent, Assistant State's Attorneys moved to put him again in jeopardy of the death penalty which the jurors declined to inflict for the Shanahan shooting.

An indictment charging Durkin with the murder of Harold I. Gray, a police sergeant, killed in an effort to trap the fugitive after the Shanahan killing, is on the court calendar and may be called for trial, prosecutors said, in a new effort to get a verdict of death by hanging.

The jury which found Durkin guilty of Shanahan's murder early today had little difficulty in agreeing on his guilt but deliberated for six hours on the penalty before compromising on the 35-year term. Only two jurors wanted Durkin hanged.

Disappointment to State.

The Gray case has been regarded as less sound than the Shanahan indictment by several prosecutors, but the State's admitted disappointment in failure to win at least a life imprisonment verdict resulted in conferences today looking to the demanding of the death penalty for the Gray shooting.

Gray was slain last fall, a few weeks after Shanahan killing, when Durkin who had fled eastward returned to the city and the police attempted to ambush him at the home of Lloyd Austin, an uncle of Betty Andrews Werner. Betty was preparing to flee with him to California. The plans to trap Durkin went awry. Austin and Gray were killed in the shooting, and Durkin himself was wounded in the arm.

It was generally agreed that Austin was killed by cross-fire of the officers, but the State charges that a bullet from Durkin's gun brought death to Gray.

To Seek New Trial.

Durkin may still find a legal channel through which to evade the prison sentence imposed today, for his attorneys will argue a motion next Saturday for a new trial, and will appeal to the State Supreme Court if that is denied. His hope of acquittal was mirrored in a letter to a girl acquaintance who had not come into light of Durkin's loves until Capt. George F. Weideling of the Cook County Jail revealed an intercepted letter from Durkin to the girl.

Written last Wednesday, after Durkin had left the witness stand, the letter voiced the young man's confidence of acquittal and his promise to join, at the end of his trial, the young woman, who told officers that she had come from New York to attend the Durkin trial, in response to a message from him. She visited him once at the jail during his trial.

Durkin said, after today's verdict, that he did not get justice. "I was tried for everything but murder," he declared. "It's a fine state of affairs when a man can't use a revolver to protect himself."

U. S. TO ISSUE PERMITS FOR RADIO THIS WEEK

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The Commerce Department will begin next week the issuance of broadcasting licenses to all applicants who have equipped stations.

This action will be taken in accordance with an opinion by the Attorney-General that the department must grant licenses to all applicants ready for operation, but as to the assignment of wave lengths, this will be left to the broadcasters themselves. They are expected, however, to use only the normal wave band found necessary for their particular need and to cooperate with existing stations in avoidance of confusion.

WOMAN KILLED IN WINDSTORM

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 10.—A tornado-like storm struck the Bronx tonight killing one woman, unroofing houses and blowing down trees. Several buildings were struck by lightning and a Ferris wheel in an amusement park was blown over by the gale. The storm spent itself after half an hour.

Mrs. Betty Feltman, 34 years old, was fatally injured when a small automobile in which she was riding with her husband, was blown across the slippery pavement into the path of a large truck. The car was demolished. Feltman escaped uninjured.

PLAN FOR A SUBWAY STRIKE IN BROOKLYN

New York Leaders Say Others Will Join Their Ranks in Four Days.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Striking subway employes of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company today planned to spread the strike to the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Co. and threatened an almost city-wide tie-up of transportation on subway, elevated and trolley lines.

Three hundred pickets were sent by the strikers to Brooklyn, calling upon employes of the Brooklyn and Manhattan system to quit work.

The Brooklyn system has not been affected, except that it is now carrying the bulk of passengers formerly carried by the lines of the Interborough into Brooklyn and Queens. The B. M. T. system, after its strike a few years ago, increased the pay of some of its employes to a scale higher than that paid by the Interborough.

According to the strike leaders, the Brooklyn men are eager to join the movement "We expect to have them in full swing in four days," said Harry Bark, one of the leaders.

Strikers Claim Accessions.

Meanwhile, the strikers announced that powerhouse employes, towermen and others were joining the original ranks of the motormen and switchmen on the Interborough system.

Emergency forces kept the trains running and the Interborough officers said they were prepared to fill the places of all men who walked out. Students at technology institutes and electrical companies were used to replace some of the power house men, the company said. The company pointed out that during the four days of the strike it had carried 8,584,609 persons without injury. This is considerably less than the average, however, estimates ranging from a falling off of 50 per cent to 70 per cent.

The Subway traffic today was somewhat lighter than usual, but this was partly explained by the half holiday in many stores.

Say Lines Are Holding.

The company's ultimatum to its striking employes that if they do not return to work by Monday noon their places will be filled permanently, has not caused any stampede, the strike leaders say. They say their lines are holding and that desertions are comparatively few.

District Attorney Banton today obtained a summons directing Interborough officers to appear in Tombs Court Monday to answer a charge of violating the State railway law by employing an incompetent motorman. The action was the result of the derailment of a Subway express early yesterday. Penalty for violation of the statute is a fine of $500.

By CURTIS A. BETTS.

The telegraphed item from Jefferson City yesterday that former Gov. Hyde had passed through the capital on his way to an Ozark stream to fish offers a contributing explanation of the slump reported from nearly every section of the State in the campaign of United States Senator Williams for renomination.

Hyde is the Williams' out-State manager. The statement is made that the former Governor is fishing for fish, not for votes. When before this did a campaign manager go fishing for anything except votes three weeks before the close of the campaign?

It may be that this fishing trip has considerably more political significance than would appear on the surface. It certainly has raised the question of just how serious the ex-Governor is in his advocacy of Williams, and it has revived political gossip of a few weeks ago that Hyde's only deep interest lay in keeping his party organization record clear that he might obtain organization support for himself for the senatorial nomination in 1928.

Hyde Ducks from Hard Job.

On a trip through northern Missouri counties last week, one of them Hyde's home county, the dissatisfaction of Republicans with Senator Williams' avoidance of a definite stand on the subject of amendment of the Volstead act was evident without any great effort to discover it. The reports through those counties were that Hyde and the others counted upon to hold the "dry" rural vote for the Senator were facing a very difficult task.

A fishing trip by the ultra dry leader of the Republican "drys" at the crucial period of the campaign might justify the deduction that he had found the explanations he was called upon to give of the candidate's position too difficult and that he had taken to the hills.

Proctor Campaigning Strenuously.

However, it may be only a part of the general plan of campaign. The Senator, himself, has not been beating the brush in his campaign. He delivered a speech in California, Mo., two weeks ago, a few more in Kansas City last Tuesday, and since then he has been resting in St. Louis and attending to personal affairs. He begins his active campaign tomorrow with an automobile tour of the principal town of southeast, southern and southwest Missouri.

From the manner of campaign, it is apparent that the Senator is relying largely on organization and that he believes his unusually complete organization will accomplish his nomination without an extensive personal campaign. On paper such a conclusion would be justified. Who would doubt his ability to carry St. Louis by a substantial majority when both former Mayor Kiel and Edmund Koeln were supporting him? Who would doubt his ability to carry the out-state counties when Gov. Baker, the huge State Republican machine and Hyde were supporting him? But the best of organizations have met defeat.

David M. Proctor, the Senator's "dry" opponent, has campaigned 70 of 114 counties, and by the end of the campaign will have visited virtually all of them. Most of the counties have voted "dry" in elections in which prohibition has been an issue, and Proctor has been meeting much encouragement, particularly since Williams' California speech.

Organization Is Elaborate.

If Williams wins it will be through organization because most certainly no campaign has been made for him. The Republican organization extends all the way down to the school district, and the influence of that organization will be exerted for Williams.

This has been accomplished largely through Dr. E. B. Clements, National Committeeman from Missouri, who, in conjunction with Chairman Phares of the State Committee, worked out an effectively functioning business organization in 1924 and has held it together remarkably well. Adequately supplied with funds, it turned defeat into victory for Gov. Baker during the closing few days of that campaign.

It will be called upon to turn the trick for Williams, and it may succeed again, though it must be admitted that ability to deliver in a primary is vastly more difficult than in a general election.

The matter of finances has not yet come to attention in the campaign, and could hardly be expected to be evident until about a week before the close of the campaign, if at all.

While the Williams campaign is lagging and apparently is without driving force, Proctor is fighting for the "dry" vote in the country, Mayor Miller is fighting for the "dry" vote in St. Louis for Proctor, and Blodgett Priest, the only avowed "wet" in the race, is covering every inch of "wet" ground in St. Louis, in Kansas City, and in the wet counties, giving particular attention to the counties along the Missouri and Mississippi rivers which have large numbers of voters of German descent. It will be conceded that almost every vote Priest receives will be a vote taken from Williams.

On the Democratic side Congressman Hawes made his real campaign a year ago when he toured the State lining up influential Democratic leaders, both "wets" and "drys," both "Reeds" and "anti-Reeds." He preached party harmony without saying very much about his candidacy. His doctrine became impressed on Democratic voters and the idea became widespread that Hawes was the only prospective candidate who could hope to win.

Though Hawes in no instance committed himself to such a statement, many of his active supporters spread the word that unless Hawes received the nomination many thousand Democrats in St. Louis would vote the Republican ticket. They pointed to the campaigns of 1920 and 1924 to prove their point, the Democrats having nominated for Governor a candidate who appealed more to the country than to the city in each of those years.

Hawes "Resting on His Oars."

The lean years for Democrats had brought about a desire to win, to be in control or affairs, that with many outweighted personal opinions, and many party leaders of pronounced "dry" views were brought into the Hawes organization.

Hawes has been rather resting on his oars in this situation, having made no out-state speeches except his campaign opening address at Excelsior Springs a week ago. His opponents, Judge Ewing Cockrell and Willis H. Meredith have been campaigning actively, but both are "drys" and they will divide the "dry" vote. In few, if any, places does one hear any Democrat say he expects either Cockrell or Meredith to win, while it is not uncommon to hear the view stated that Hawes' vote will exceed that of both of his opponents.

The impression which has gone out in the last few days that Proctor stood a good chance of defeating Williams has been beneficial to the Hawes' candidacy. It is being argued that if Proctor is the nominee of the Republicans that many thousands of Republicans in St. Louis will vote for Hawes to give him such a big majority that anything he might lose among Democrats in the country would be more than overcome. While it is conceded, even by Hawes' supporters, that there is a very sizeable Democratic vote in the country which Hawes could not get even in a general election, the belief is general that little of this would go to the Republican nominee. These Democrats, it has been argued, would merely fail to vote on the senatorship. It is thus contended that every Republican vote Hawes got in St. Louis would amount to two votes, while each one he lost in the country would count only as one against him.

Cockrell Cancels Speech When Meredith Is Not at Home.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., July 10.—Judge Ewing Cockrell of Warrensberg, Democratic candidate for United States Senate, canceled his speaking engagement here last night when he learned his opponent, Willis H. Meredith, of this city, was not in town to hear him. He said he wanted Meredith to introduce him and also to hear him.

"It is untrue that I am attacking Meredith and running against him. I am only opposing Harry B. Hawes and opposing him strongly, not only as to his views but how he is campaigning," Cockrell said.

Cockrell spoke at Dexter last night. Touring in a Ford car, he today finished his Southeast Missouri campaign, speaking in Ripley, Oregon and Shannon counties He will depart for St. Louis tomorrow and then will open his northern campaign.

President Has No Luck in Second Quest for Fish

Returning Empty-Handed, Mr. Coolidge Practices at Casting Off the Foot Bridge Before Camp.

By the Associated Press.

PAUL SMITHS, N. Y., July 10.—The sport which has gained the increasing attention of President Coolidge since he came to this mountain resort this week, claimed him again today, the chief executive jumping into a boat and trying his hand at fishing on Lake Osgood, before the summer White House.

Although accompanied by Oscar Otis, caretaker of White Pine Camp, where the President is spending his vacation, and the experienced guide took him to the best spots on the little sheet of water, no luck rewarded their efforts, and Mr. Coolidge returned empty-handed shortly before noon. Not discouraged, he then went to the foot bridge before the camp and practiced at casting.

Strolls With Collies.

Rain, which fell at frequent intervals during the day, after a continuous downpour last night, made little difference to the President or to Mrs. Coolidge, who, during clear spells, walked about the shore of the lake with the white collies, Rob Roy and Prudence Prim.

Mr. Coolidge also walked under the trees in the morning, but in the afternoon he turned his attention to Government business and the latest mail from Washington as a heavy thundershower raged outside.

To Attend Church Today.

The first trip of any distance from the camp will be made by the President and Mrs. Coolidge tomorrow when they plan to attend morning services at the First Presbyterian Church of Saranac Lake, 13 miles away.

At home they attend regularly the Congregational Church, but there is none of that denomination in this vicinity. After representatives of the President had made a survey, the church at Saranac Lake was decided upon, but without indications of whether it is the intention to make this the President's church home during his entire stay here.

The first visitors of the summer were received at the executive offices today. They included Representative and Mrs. Burtness of North Dakota, who have been touring New England and are on their way West, and former Representative Francis of New York City, who was a luncheon guest of Secretary Everett Sanders. No visitors, however, went to White Pine Camp, and the President remained in seclusion.

To Entertain Rotary Club.

The Century Boat Club will entertain the Rotary Club at a dinner and veranda party at the boat club this evening.

ROBBERS KIDNAP BANK CASHIER AND FLEE WITH $1600

David M. Ottersbach of North Side Bank, Jennings, Released After Four-Mile Ride.

The three robbers who kidnaped David M. Ottersbach, cashier of the North Side Bank, 8905 West Florissant avenue, Jennings, a block from the bank, at 9 a. m. yesterday and took $1600 he was carrying to the depository, ejecting him from their automobile near Ferguson, were using a Peerless sedan which was stolen from its chauffeur Friday night.

The car is the property of John A. Leschen of 20 Kingsbury place, vice president of A. Lechen & Sons Rope Co. It was taken from his Negro chauffeur by two armed men while Leschen was at Grace Lutheran Church,, Garrison and St. Louis avenues. The robbers yesterday abandoned the sedan in Ferguson, shortly after putting Ottersbach out.

Ottersbach, who is 26 years old and resides in Terrace lane, Jennings, had $1000 in bills in a paper package on the floor of his Ford sedan and $600 in silver in a large cloth sack. He obtained this, following weekly custom, at the Cass Avenue Bank, Fifteenth street and Cass avenue, where he farmerly was a teller, and drove out West Florissant avenue.

Put Sack Over His Head.

At Goodfellow avenue, just inside the city limits, he noticed three well-dressed youths eying him furtively from the Peerless, which was parked facing west. His suspicions aroused, he speeded his car, but they pursued him a number of blocks to Hamilton avenue, Jennings, a block east of his bank. They forced his car to stop at the curb and leaped out with drawn revolvers and holding handkerchiefs to their faces with their left hands. He was not armed. They demanded the money and he pointed to it in his car. They put a sack over his head and made him lie on the floor of the tonneau of the Peerless, abandoning his Ford. Two robbers rode in front and the third sat in back with his feet holding the cashier down.

Storeekeeper Saw Holdup.

Apparently they went north to Hall's Ferry road and west, for in about 10 minutes they stopped at Chambers road and Oak avenue, north of Ferguson and three miles and a half from Jennings, and shoved him out. Removing the sack from his head, they made him run back down the road, while they drove to Ferguson. First a farmer and then a garage man helped Otterbach make his way towards the bank, but St. Louis policemen, scouring the vicinity in search of the robbers, met the latter on Hall's Ferry road and took the cashier the rest of the way.

$200,000 BOND ISSUE VOTED BY KIRKWOOD

A $200,000 bond issue for municipal waterworks and electric purposes was approved yesterday at a special election in Kirkwood by a vote of almost 5 to 1.

The total vote was light, 674 ballots being cast, of which 566 were in favor of the bond issue and 108 against it.

Of the $200,000 in bonds, $150,000 will be spent for improvement and enlargement of the waterworks, made necessary by a growing population. Kirkwood is the only community of St. Louis County which owns its own water system.

The remaining $50,000 will be spent on the electric light and power system, for extension, replacement and repairing damage done in the ice storm of December, 1924. Kirkwood buys its current from the Union Electric Light and Power Co.

MAJORY.—Consult your parish priest for full information regarding the marriage ceremony.

FERGUSON, MO.—Dealers in stamps are listed in the city directory under "Stamps-Postage." Inquire among them regarding the collection of stamps.

O. L. H.—An excellent cement for porcelain and stoneware is obtained by mixing 20 parts of fish glue with an equal weight of crystallizable acetic acid and evaporate the mixture carefully to a syrupy consistency so that it forms a gelatinous mass in cooling For use the cement thus obtained is made liquid again by heating and applied to the fracture with a brush. The piece should now be pressed firmly together, by winding a twine tightly around them, until the cement has hardened.

JOHN—The common cucumber, distinguished by heart-shaped, acuminately pentangular leaves, which are rough with hairs approaching to bristles, and oblong fruit, is a native of the middle and south of Asia, and has been cultivated from the earliest times. Its fruit forms an important article of food in its native regions, the south of Europe and an esteemed delicacy in colder countries, where it is produced by the aid of artificial heat. Many varieties are in cultivation, with fruit from 4 inches to 2 feet long, rough, smooth. Young cucumbers are much used for pickling, and are called gherkins; a small fruiting variety is selected for this purpose. The cucumber is cultivated in fields even in the south of England, for the supply of the London market; but in all parts of Britain the plants required for the purpose of growing either in the open or under glass must be reared in a hotbed in spring. In the northern parts it can be only successfully cultivated in frames during summer. A large trade is now done in winter crops of cucumbers, which are grown in well-heated, specially constructed glass houses. In many parts of the United States it will, if planted late enough to escape the frosts, grow well with almost no care. But it requires rich soil, much moisture, and heat. To this genus belong other species valued for their edible or ornamental fruit, but all that are popularly named cucumber are not properly cucumis, but merely species or varieties belonging to allied genera. The snake cucumber eaten either pickled or raw, and has similar qualities to the common cucumber. A number of species of cucurbitaceae are natives of the United States, but they are all of small exonomic importance.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

INQUIRER.—Girls under legal age can marry with their parents' consent, in practically all States.

A READER.—The person who signed the note can be sued in Missouri, where she now lives, and a judgment can be obtained against her. A judgment cannot be obtained against her husband, however.

A. E. L.—You can remarry in Indiana immediately after obtaining a divorce in Missouri, but it is safer to wait until the end of the term of Court at which the divorce was granted, as the divorce decree may be set aside during that term of Court.

F. E. J.—The conviction for petit larceny would not necessarily make the person ineligible for the police force, if he can show that he is now of good character, but it would make his appointment very unlikely. He can apply at Police headquarters any time.

E. B. H.—You could not get a divorce in Ontario except by a special act of Canadian Parliament. You might be able to get a divorce in Manitoba, after establishing a residence there for a sufficient period, if you had the requisite grounds for divorce. It is much easier to get a divorce in the United States.

ROG.—There is no fixed amount that she must have, to make a will necessary. It is wise to have a will, because you do not know how much you may have at the time you die. Her husband will be entitled to a child's share of her estate. The Probate Court fees of course vary in each case. You can get a rough estimate by inquiring at the office of the Clerk of the Probate Court, 4th and Pine. There is no way to leave money to her children, except by a will, or by giving it to them during her life time.

BAKE—A 5 grain cystogen tablet taken three or four times daily dissolved in a glass of water is among the best for catarrah of the bladder.

L.—The spots before the eyes are practically always associated with a highly nervous state and are not in themselves dangerous as affecting the eye sight. The remedy would consist in determining and correcting the cause of the nervousness as the spots are after all only a symptom of other troubles.

DUMB DORA.—Grape fruit, like oranges and lemons contains mostly citric acid and in the case of oranges a certain percentage of sugar. They are all wholesome articles of diet and never out of season when they can be obtained fresh and in good condition. They have little active medical value aside from stimulating and aiding the process of digestion.

MRS. A. S.—The falling of the eye-lashes is due to some systemic disease and may result from an infection of the fat glands located in the margin of the lids which when acute produces styes. If due to this last cause the rubbing on the margin of the lids nightly of an ointment known as the mild yellow oxide of mercury should relieve the trouble. If not local a physician should be consulted to determine the cause and prescribe the proper remedy.

Sadly missed by

PARENTS, SISTER, BROTHERS AND ALL WHO LOVED HIM. (c)

In loving memory of our dear wife, mother and sister, Margaret Wilkie Brown, who died July 13, 1925.

More and more each day we miss you,
Friends may think the wound is healed
But they little know the sorrow
That is within our hearts concealed.
We often sit and think of you when we are alone.
For memory is the only thing grief can call its own.
Sadly missed by

Husband, Children, Sisters and All Who Loved Her.

In memory of Joseph T. Burke, who died July 11, 1925.

One year ago today
My dear one passed away.
Gone but not forgotten.
Moon and stars are shining
Upon one lonely grave,
Where sleeps my dear one.
Whom I loved so well.
But could not save.
Heaven smiles, retains our treasure,
Earth the barren casket keeps.
Saddly missed by

LOVING WIFE, MARGARET. (c)

In loving memory of my dear wife and our mother, Minnie Kress (nee Kade), who departed this life two years ago, July 9, 1924.

The golden sun is shining
Upon our dear mother's grave:
The one we loved so dearly
And tried so hard to save.
And when we lost our dear mother
We lost our dearest pal.
We love you, and we miss you.
And forever shall.
So rest in peace, dear mother;
You're safe in heaven's bower.
The day when we shall meet you
Grows nearer every hour.
Sadly missed by

HUSBAND AND DAUGHTERS.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving memory of my dear wife, Margaret Mason, who departed this life one year ago today, July 10, 1925:

Dear Margaret, how I miss you;
Miss your sweet and loving face.
You have left me all in sorrow
And no one can take your place.
Sadly missed by your HUSBAND, MOTHER AND AUNTS.

In loving memory of my dear wife and our dear mother, mother-in-law and grandmother, Mrs. Catherine Schroeer, who departed this life July 13, 1925:

In the graveyard softly sleeping,
Where the flowers gently wave,
Lies the one we loved so dearly,
In her silent, lonely grave.
Peaceful be your sleep, dear mother,
It is sweet to breathe your name—
In life we loved you dearly,
In death we do the same.
Just one year ago you left us;
How we missed you, mother dear,
And remember all your kindness
As we drop a silent tear.
Sadly missed by husband, children and grandchildren.

MR. ALBERT SCHROEER.

A Nationally Known

Specializing in One Type of
CAPABLE SALESMAN
SOUTHERN ILLINOIS.

We want to turn this territory over to a man who thinks enough of it to live on it. We want a man who knows the trade and who has sold the trade. A man who is not "looking for a job," but who feels the time has arrived to make a permanent connection with almost unlimited possibilities.

If you think you can swing a job of this kind—if you have realized that this is the age of the clothing specialist—write us a letter. Tell us just the things you'd want to know if you were doing the hiring; age, experience, territory covered—you know what we mean. All information you give us will be held in strictest confidence. Box J-323, Post-Dispatch.

A SINCERE SALESMAN

We have no $25,000 a year jobs for salesmen.

No salesman can become one of our executives in a month.

We are not looking for the quick, slick, clean-up salesman.

We do not sell real estate, insurance or house-to-house.

We only call on executives in business.

We have average salesmen earning $8000.

We do promote salesmen with sales records to executives.

A connection in this organization means securing a permanent territorial franchise with a nationally known organization. A proven future without investment, except your brains, for active salesmen between 30 and 40 years of age.

I will interview, privately, and employ in St. Louis two men for nearby territories, so do not consider this unless you are prepared to start at once, should a connection be agreed upon.

Let's get down to "brass tacks." We only want to interview salesmen who are sincere in their desire to make a permanent connection. Remember, no quick clean-up here, but an opportunity which you will immediately recognize after talking it over with me.

Write or phone M. H. Glascock, Hotel Statler, Monday or Tuesday.

*Five-day session.

Livestock values showed a downward swing at the St. Louis National Stockyards last week, under liberal receipts in most departments. The cattle and calf run at approximately 33,000 head was the largest of the year. Cattle sales ranged from steady to 50c lower, in a slow session, exceptions being canner cows and Southern canner yearlings, which strengthened slightly. Veal calves advanced 75c to $1 on the better end. Native beef steers, embracing several hundred loads and averaging medium to good in quality, averaged 50c lower except in a few choice handyweight offerings, which held about steady. The bulk of sales was $8.50 to $9.50 per cwt., and tops scored upward to $10.40. Sales included three loads of 1308-lb. Saline County, Mo., beeves at $10.35 and this price was also paid for three cars of 897-lb. Morgan County, Ill., yearlings. The top, $10.40, went for four loads of 1134-lb. Nebraska beeves. Western steers aggregated 150 cars and closing prices were 25c to 50c lower. Prices varied mainly from $6.05 to $7.35. Texas contributed over 90 per cent of the run. Light yearling steers and heifers, like mature beeves, were steady on a few selected lots, although the bulk of sales reflected a 25c to 50c decline. Attractive offerings were numerous at $9 to $10, followed by medium and plain droves around $8, $7, $6 and under. Although a few top offerings were steady to 25c lower, the major portion of the beef cow run suffered a 25c to 50c decline. Sales were largely at $5.25 to $6.25, with top offerings up to $7 and $7.50. Cutter cows remained about steady at $4.25 to $4.75, and canners were stronger, selling in a range of $3.25 to $4, bulk $3.50 to $3.85. A decline of 25c applied to most bulls. Weighty beef animals closed at $6 to $6.50, bolognas $5.50 to $6, and thin, lightweight offerings $4 to $5. Stocker and feeder steers slumped 50c on an average, due to the break in beef cattle and a slackened interest in stocker offerings from the country. The busy farm season reduced orders and price cuts of a substantial nature were the rule. Sales bulked at $6.75 to $7.75. Plain offerings sold down to $5, while best droves reached $8 and $8.75. Stock cows and heifers were also lower, easing off 25c, spots 50c. Cows were available at $4.25 to $5.25 and heifers at $5 to $6.75. Good veal calves advanced from $11.75 at the close of the previous week to a $12.50 to $12.75 basis Friday. Southern canner yearlings moved mainly at $4.50 to $5, according to weight and quality.

Hogs Down for Week.

Hog values were under pressure during the week and prices in closing deals showed a general decline ranging from 75c to $1 on all grades. Hot weather curtailed many of the Eastern order buying interests that have been buying freely here in the past and gave packers an opportunity to bear down on prices which, they claim, have been too high for some time. They also claimed a decrease in the salable quantities of fresh meat, this also being laid to the effect the warm weather had on the public's appetite. Receipts certainly were hardly to blame, as the supply ran but little in excess of previous weekly offerings of recent date. Eleven markets, in fact, ran lighter than both the previous week and a year ago. Light hogs continued to maintain their supremacy in price and the gap between values of lights and butcher weights showed a widening trend. Top lights at one time reached $15, but closing deals saw this figure reduced to $14.25. Bulk of sales for the week on weights 190 pounds and down was made in a wide spread of $14 to $14.85. Light butcher weights averaging 200 to 200 pounds bulked at $13.75 to $14.60 for the six days, with medium weight hogs of 230 to 260 pound weight at $13.35 to $14.25. Heavy hogs showed practically a dollar spread in range, sales from $13 to $14 largely, although at one time weights coming under this classification ranged upward to $14.15 and $14.25. The pig trade suffered in sympathy with better weight grades of swine and, although the closing top on this class is $14.35, most sales registered at $14.25 and under, Southern kinds ranged down to $13 and under, depending on weight and quality of the offerings. Packing sows and stags show a flat dollar decline, sows clearing in a range of $11 to $11.25 and stags dropping to $10 to $11 basis. Following is a complete quotation of the prices on different grades of swine as they sold on the close: Good heavy hogs, 270 pounds and up, $13 to $13.25; medium weights, 230 to 260 pounds, $13.35 to $13.60; lighter butchers, 200 to 220 pounds, $13.75 to $14.10, and shipping hogs, 160 to 190 pounds, $14.10 to $14.25. Pigs of desirable weight and flesh $14 to $14.35, plain Southern kinds $13.50 and down. Sows $11 to $11.25 and stags $10 to $11.

Moderate Sheep Run.

Under a moderate to fair run of lambs at the local yards during the past week the market showed considerable fluctuation and closing deals indicated a prevalence of lower markets. Final prices show a loss of 25c to 50c from the previous Saturday's quotations on lambs with the aged class holding their own, in fact the latter mentioned class went through the entire six days with no change. A peak of $14.75 was reached during the week's high time, butchers paying this figure for some fancy offerings. Packers held their top down to $14.50 but paid this price rather freely during the mid-week sessions. Bulk of sales on lambs for the six days was $14 to $14.50 with a range on desirable offerings of from $13.75 to $14.75. Medium lambs met with no better favor than they have at any time in the past and prices were far from satisfactory to shippers of the same. Sales ranged $11 to $13 largely. Cull and common lambs grouped at $9 to $9.50, few noted as high as the latter mentioned figure. Skips cleared at $5 to $7. Mutton ewes were in good call and desirable light fat offerings sold mainly at $5.50 with medium kinds $4.50 to $5 and heavies around $4. Choppers and bucks sold mainly at $2 to $3 with canners at $2 and under depending on the grade of flesh carried. Following are complete quotations of the different classes: Good to choice lambs quotable at $13.50 to $14.10, medium to good $11.50 to $13.50, plain to medium $10 to $11.50, cull and common $9 to $9.50 and skips $5 to $7. Good to choice mutton ewes $5 to $5.50, plain to medium to good $4.50 to $5, plain to medium $4 to $4.50. Choppers and bucks $2 to $3, canners $1 to $2. Fat goats $2 to $3, thin and common goats $1 to $1.50. Fat kids $5 to $6, thin kids $2 to $4.

Horse and mule receipts during the week were only about 300 head and the market ruled quiet and barely steady. There was a satisfactory clearance, with most of the offering moving South.

WHEAT HIGHER IN TRADE FOR WEEK AT CHICAGO

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, July 10.—The wheat market was nervous today and most of the trade consisted of evening up prior to the Government crop report late today. At the close prices were ¼c to ⅜c lower and for the week ⅜c to 5⅜c higher. July, $1.38⅞ to $1.39; September, $1.37⅛ to $1.37⅜; December, $1.40⅞ to $1.41⅛.

The trend of prices this week has been largely upward as a result of heavy buying, influenced by unfavorable crop news from the Northwest and the excellent demand for cash wheat in the Southwest.

The market today started easier under commission-house selling, based on cooler and showery weather over the Northwest and the disappointing cables. After the opening, there was buying of July by Northwest houses and the current month showed more resistance to selling pressure than the September, a reflection of the strong cash position. A well-posted cash wheat specialist expressed the belief that big mills will take all of the new wheat arriving on this market throughout the month. Private estimates indicate a winter wheat yield of 555,000,000 to 569,000,000 and spring wheat 205,000,000 to 211,000,000 bushels. Shipping sales locally were only 3000 bushels. Southwest had some rain which interfered with threshing. The Winnipeg Free Press crop report said the Canadian crop is about as far advanced as last year, with the outlook for a fair average yield, with 74 out of 304 reports complaining of a need of rain. Minneapolis stocks decreased 75,000 bushels for one day and Duluth decreased 262,000 bushels for five days.

Corn trade was very quiet and mainly local. The only feature was the buying of September and selling of December by cash houses. The action of wheat influenced the prices. Closing prices were ¼c to 1¼c lower and for the week ⅜c to 3c higher. July, 71⅝c; September, 76⅝c to 76¾c; December, 77⅞c to 78c. Shipping sales were only 55,000 bushels, and outside markets were reported underselling Chicago in the East. Crop news is generally favorable. Private crop estimates indicate a yield of 2,725,000,000 to 2,850,000,000 bushels.

Oats were quiet and easier under pressure prompted by desire to even up trade prior to the Government report. Closing prices were ⅛c to ⅝c lower and for the week ⅛c to ¼c up. July, 37⅝c; September, 39½c to 39⅝c; December, 42¼c. Private crop estimates are for a yield of 1,275,000,000 to 1,364,000,000 bushels. Cash sales were only 32,000 and Milwaukee and Ohio points were underselling Chicago in the East.

Provisions were higher early on buying supported by the advance in hogs. Later local selling caused some reaction. Lard closed 2½c to 5c higher, ribs 15c lower.

LOCAL FRUIT MARKET

Little Change in Apple Trade Conditions—Peaches Easier.

ST. LOUIS PRODUCE ROW, July 10.—The local apple market has been demoralized by the heavy receipts of undersized, immature fruit. Yesterday's aggregate Calhoun County receipts were 5187 baskets. Smooth No. 1 hand-picked transparents (2¼-inch and larger) were scarce and readily salable, while the small green, immature stock were a drug on the market. Early harvest, duchess raspberry were dull and neglected. Couple cars apples were loaded to be sent out on sale, but shippers generally refrain from operating. Home-grown boxed apples in large receipt and the small fruit practically unsalable. The range of values on bu baskets Calhoun County apples: No. 1 transparents (graded 2¼-inch and larger) $1.25 to $1.50, average orchard run 75c to $1 and small at 35c to 60c; early harvest, raspberry and duchess (small, green) at 35c to 50c. Week ago, holiday.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Resumption of the board upward movement of stock prices which carried the general railroad average to the highest level in nearly 15 years; sharp advances in wheat and cotton futures and renewed weakness of the Continental paper currencies, all of which crashed the new record low levels, were the outstanding developments in this week's financial and commodity markets.

Rise During Eight Weeks.

The advance in the stock market, which has been under way with a few minor interruptions for eight consecutive weeks, has not been accompanied by any marked increase in public participation, leading to a rather general belief that the buying has been for the account of big financial institutions and wealthy individuals seeking employment for their surplus funds.

Factors in Upturn.

Bullish stock market sentiment has been created by the absence of any serious depression in business, widely predicted a few months ago, by the prospect of large crops this fall and by the maintenance of a relatively high rate of operation of several of the basic industries. While opinion is sharply divided as to whether the advance will continue into the fall months, there is a rather general view that money market conditions will play an important part in determining the future price trend of securities prices.

Advance in Wheat.

Wheat prices advanced sharply on pessimistic reports from spring wheat territory, a relatively low visible supply of the product, and expectations of a big export demand. Cotton also moved up on reports of extensive insect damage but a sharp break of $6.50 in the July option as the week closed, due to heavy switching into the more distant positions, led to some liquidation by holders of long contract in later months, cancelling part of the early gains.

Weakness in Exchange.

Weakness of French, Belgian and Italian currencies reflected the difficulties encountered by those governments in adjusting their post-war financial problems, and stabilizing their currencies. The vote of confidence given the new Briand ministry, while obtained only by a small majority, revived hope that some solution would be found to check the rapidly depreciating currencies of the principal Latin countries.

SPECIALTIES FEATURE OF STOCK TRADE

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 10.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted financial review today says:

"After profit-taking sales had been readily absorbed in the first part of to-day's short session of the stock market, prices developed firmer tone and advances were recorded in all parts of the list. Specialties attracted most attention, but standard industrials received good support. U. S. Steel climbed above 140, American Can got back above 56 and General Motors reached 150. Chrysler, Nash and others in the motor group were sustained around their recent high levels. Southern Pacific featured the rails, while a large group of specialties developed renewed strength. A steady tone prevailed in quiet dealings in bonds. Fluctuations held generally within narrow limits, investment rails receiving good support.

Irregularity in Quiet Dealings.

Trading was fairly active considering the absence from the market of traders who complained of the heat. Selling pressure, which gained some momentum in yesterday's final hour, quickly vanished when buying orders showed an increase in volume today. Rail shares, motors and a wide variety of specialties were in good demand at higher levels. Chesapeake, Ohio, Wheeling and Lake Erie and other rail stocks in the so-called-merger class were well supported. Case Threshing, Cast Iron Pipe, Allied Chemical and Remington Typewriter were among the recently active favorites that forged ahead. Atlantic Refining responded to the favorable court decision in the Superior Oil case with a rise of about a point. Nash Motors moved up more than a point on the extra dividend, but lost a large part of this advance.

Reaction in Cotton.

Stripped of its support by speculators for the decline, the cotton market drifted to lower levels today on renewed profit taking by traders who had bought at lower levels earlier in the week and some renewed selling from the south. A large part of yesterdays advance was quickly lost. Grain prices also showed a tendency to slip back slightly, wheat falling fractionally and corn moving irregularly in narrow limits.

Exchange Market Dull.

"Foreign exchanges were dull and fluctuations narrow. Sterling held steady; but lire again developed weakness and Belgian francs eased off with French rates. Elsewhere changes were unimportant.

Clearing House Statement.

"Prospects of an easier tone in the money market were heightened by an increase in the surplus of the clearing house banks of $24,520,840, this week, bringing the excess in reserves to $30,551,640. Loans, discounts, etc., decreased $142,148,000.

Dry Goods Market Review.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Activity in the cotton goods gray cloth division has been broader in the past three days than for some months. Sales reached half a million pieces, including print cloths, thin fabrics, sheetings and convertibles of many descriptions, deliveries extending into September, and in some instances to the end of the year. Finished goods were in better request toward the close of the week. Yarns showed more firmness. Burlaps have sold at concessions of ¼ cent a yard for spot and nearby delivery. Raw silk was easier, but silk goods were in better demand for fall. Further wool goods openings in men's wear for spring are due next week. Linen inquiries more general than for some time were reported by Belfast mills from the United States.

WEEK-END TRADE SMALL ON CURB

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 10.—It was early apparent in the trading on the Curb Exchange today that interests affiliated with the speculative side of the market had their attention devoted to other pursuits. Price movements showed an even tenor and in only a few instances were offerings sufficiently excessive to produce any material recessions. Business slumped to small volume and lacked any particular point of activity. United Gas Improvement opened off ⅝ of a point at 113⅝ and then yielded 1⅜ points further. Other issues held within a small area around the preceding closing.

Oil shares held steady with a few issues recovering part of the declines made in yesterday's late selling movement. South Penn rose ½ of a point and Standard Oil of Indiana improved slightly.

In the bond department Loew's incorporated 6 per cents rallied a point and Transcontinental Oil 7 per cents sold at the high for the present movement with sales ranging from 98⅜ to 99.

In the last half of the session Tubize Artificial Silk attracted attention with a 4½-point advance. Philadelphia Electric suffered a loss of 3⅛ and Standard Publishing lacked nearby support, selling off 2⅛ points to 6⅞, a new low record for the year.

Lead, Zinc and Copper.

Lead was reported quiet in St. Louis Saturday at $8.15 per 100 lbs.

Zinc was strong at $7.35 per 100 lbs.

Weekly Metal Review.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 10.—The volume of buying in the steel market during the past week was very satisfactory despite the holiday and prices were steadily maintained. Some further curtailment in production is expected as a normal seasonal development. Trade is now confident that the summer reduction in business will not be as great as had been predicted.

Pig iron was active, with some producers well sold ahead for the quarter and prices were steady.

Expectations that the Copper Export Association will begin to function within a short time, appeared to have had a stimulating effect on prices in the copper market here during the past week. A better tone was developed abroad, with some increase of export interest and it is reported that dealers have been moderate, evidently in a belief that the new export marketing plans will have a sustaining effect on values both at home and abroad. Buyers for domestic consumption have remained conservative, but have placed some business on the advance, and producers generally were holding electrolytic for the 14-cent level at the end of the week.

Tin ruled steady to firm in sympathy with the higher trend abroad, but slackness of buying suggested that consumers' needs had been well provided for.

Lead showed a higher tendency in the outside markets with the demand good for July and August shipment from dealers and consumers.

Zinc held strong due to further curtailment of output, firmness in London and the most active consuming demand for a long time. Premiums were asked for future delivery.

Antimony was slightly firmer, with offerings light and a fair consuming interest for July and August arrivals.

Local Traction New Issue Shows Largest Turnover During Week—Cement and Mining Shares Are Next.

ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE, July 10.—St. Louis Public Service, Missouri Portland Cement and Consolidated Lead were the leaders in volume of trade on the local exchange during the past week. The first named gained a fraction and the others more than a point each. The greater number of securities traded in during the six days showed net advances for the period. In fact those showing losses were about a third of the list revealing improvement. Aggregate business was a litle larger than in the preceding week.

There was some trading in the mining shares. Pedigo Weber registered upturn of more than three points. Boyd Welsh rose a point. Johansen Bros. also was sharply above previous transaction.

Foreign Exchange

Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 10.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange review says:

"The last week in foreign exchange found the French, Belgium and Italian currencies pursuing the same downward movement into new low ground in their respective histories that has obtained in the past. Fears over the fate of the Briand-Caillaux regime and financial future of France continue the prime depressing factors. Last week when notes in circulation and advances to the state conjointly marked up almost 1,200,000,000 francs emphasized the seriousness of the situation. Paris drafts started the week at 2.74, the high and subsequently were on offer principally in their foreign markets. On this side but to a lesser extent, French bills were offered with the result that the new lows for all time were established. The bottom was 2.50½. Italian under the influence of French weakness sold down to 3.29¾, also a record low. However, the latter part of the week heavy buying by a large Italian bank and short covering, and the line rallied sharply to 3.57½.

"Belgian documents on the contrary continued weak during the five days. Antwerp remittances touched 2.32½ and ended Friday at 2:35.

"Sterling was easy, receding to 4.85¾. The trend of sterling was a belated reaction to the coal strike in Great Britain and its effect on industry and money in that country. It was reported also that sterling bills were being sold by French and Italian agencies in an effort to stem the downward plunge of the franc and lire. Other major European documents held fairly quiet with but little variation."

Foreign exchanges were dull and fluctuations narrow. Sterling held steady, but the again-developed weakness and Belgian rates eased off with French rates. Elsewhere changes were unimportant.

COAL STOPPAGE STILL DOMINATES SITUATION

Special Wireless to New York Evening Post.

LONDON, July 10.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in Financial Review today, says:

"The coal stoppage continues to dominate the situation in London. The response of the workers to the new wage schedules was small, indicating Thomas Cook's forecast of a 13-week strike possibly will be realized. The period would carry over the August bank holiday.

"Especially interesting is the traffic loss for the group systems. In the half year the loss exceeded 11,500,000 pounds, attributable to lost coal traffic, the general strike and trade depression. Under the railways act of 1921 companies received the right to earn the 1913 revenues plus a certain allowance for capital expenditure made since then by adjusting charges as required.

"Rate schedules were to come into force as interests concerned has thrashed out allowable expenses and distribution charges over various classes of traffic rates.

"The tribunal has been working all this year in the hope of establishing a new basis for next year.

"This year's results are certain to be had owing to the loss of traffic and expenses for fuel substitutes. Drafts upon reserve funds therefore are again probable though the future outlook is not so unfavorable.

"Railway stocks are substantially higher than the lowest prices reached in strike period, but they are below the quotations of the beginning of the year.

"Firmness in gilt-edged securities is somewhat remarkable in view of the absence of any signs of expansion. The total reinvestment resources according to bank figures of clearing bankers deposits in May were £48,000,000 less than at the beginning of the year, but advances were £20,000,000 larger and banks have sold £17,000,000 investments. June figures so far available show slight expansion in deposits in the last 12 months and further growth in advances by London banks, but contraction is reputed in the cotton trade district.

JULY COTTON CONTRACTS TUMBLE $6.50 A BALE AS TRADE IN DELIVERY ENDS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 10.

A RUSH of holders to unload July cotton contracts just before the close today resulted in a sharp drop of $6.50 a bale from yesterday's closing quotation.

The July option closed at 17.59c a pound, after having sold down to 17.50c. As trading in that delivery ended at noon, operators on the long side transferred their interests to more distant options on a heavy scale. The balance of the market closed only 50 cents to $1 a bale net lower.

COTTON GENERALLY LOWER WITH JULY A FEATURE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Recent sharp advances were followed by moderate reactions in the cotton market here today so far as the new crop months were concerned, while there was a very sharp closing break in the price of July contracts. October sold off to 16.98c, rallied to 17.17c and closed at 17.08c, with the general market closing steady at a net decline of 123 points on July and of 10 to 21 points on later deliveries.

Trading in current July contracts ended at noon, and that position was relatively easy during the entire morning under liquidation. The earlier selling was absorbed by covering on declines of about 30 or 35 points, but later in the morning there was another flurry of offerings and the price broke to 17.50c, or 132 points below Friday's closing quotation. There were sales later at recoveries of 9 or 10 points from the lowest, and it was estimated that between 70,000 and 75,000 bales were involved in the evening-up of the July position.

Up to the end of this week about 30,000 bales had been tendered on July contracts and it was expected that the remaining interest would be liquidated by deliveries of about 5000 bales before the end of the month. No fresh developments in the spot situation was mentioned in connection with the break, and the closing fluctuations in July were generally attributed to the final readjustment of the technical position.

The general market opened steady at a decline of 12 to 19 points under week-end realizing and new crop months showed net losses of 22 to 24 points during the early trading, with December selling off. The reiterated reports of insect damage compared with prospects for further showers more or less generally over the south and rather better reports from the goods markets brought in some buying on the declines, however, and December rallied to 17.14c during the middle of the morning closing at 17.07c. Private cables attributed the electric in Liverpool to week-end liquidation and hedge selling.

The amount of cotton on ship board awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 60,000, against 44,000 last year.

NEW CHEROKEE MARKET

1000 Markets Now Serve the Public Better with Brecht All-Electric Refrigeration

THIS week The Brecht Company celebrates a notable achievement. One thousand Brecht All-Electric Display Units have now been built and delivered.

One thousand progressive markets protect their meats and perishable foodstuffs with this new-type store equipment.

And yet, nine months ago it was unknown. A record of nation-wide acceptance without parallel. Despite peak production, the great Brecht factory cannot meet the demand.

WHAT is the explanation? Simply this:

Market owners are quick to acclaim a new standard of value. They know that this is an Electric Age. They recognize in The Brecht All-Electric the first truly modern meat merchandising unit.

The first with automatic electric refrigeration, self-contained. The first with full vision electric lighted display.

The first case to provide the retail store with the same facilities for food preservation that are considered necessary in the well-equipped home today.

THAT The Brecht Company should thus successfully pioneer was to be expected. Embodied in The Brecht All-Electric Display Unit are the fruits of 73 years' experience manufacturing refrigerators; 17 years' experience manufacturing ice machines.

No other maker possesses this double knowledge, so necessary to correctly apply mechanical refrigeration principles to scientific counter construction. The new Brecht completely revolutionizes former "freezer case" design. It is the only Unit designed and engineered from its inception for all-electric operation.

YES, Brecht is making market history.

Mr. Fred Houska installs the thousandth Brecht All-Electric Display Unit—along with two other identical cases—as a means of better serving his trade.

But unit No. 1000 is more than a refrigerated display case. It is a symbol.

It tells that the House of Brecht is passing another milestone in the march of progress. That this institution—upholding a reputation of more than "three score years and ten"—still honors the pledge of its founders, first voiced in 1853:

"We Keep Faith With Those We Serve."

SCORES 293, NOSING OUT JOE TURNESA

With British Open and National Amateur, Atlantan Is First to Hold Three Major Championships at Once.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., July 10.—Bobby Jones of Atlanta tonight is possessor of every supreme golf title in the world, an honor never before mantled on any golfer, as the result of winning the national open championship at Scioto Club here with a score of 293. And he annexed his latest title before a record crowd of 6500, most of whom followed the sturdy southerner through his final 36 holes today.

Good as Jones' score was for the grueling Scioto links, he was only one stroke ahead of Joe Turnesa of New York, who had finished earlier than Jones with 294. To overcome this score, Jones shot one under par on the last nine, finishing amidst a din of applause with a birdie four on the 480-yard home hole.

Among those who tried to beat Bobby on the last round today was an amateur, Chick Evans, who in 1916 won the unique distinction of capturing the national open and amateur titles in the same year, and set a record score of 286 for the open. But Chick failed by several strokes, for he took a 79 for the last round and totaled 302.

Another who was a possible winner during this race was Bill Mehlhorn, formerly of St. Louis, who led the field the first day with a record 68 to Jones 70, and again led the second day with 143, while Bobby had 150, by virtue of a 79 on the second round. But Mehlhorn fell off today, taking 76 in the morning and 78 in the afternoon for a total of 297, which tied him for third place. Mehlhorn lost on the last nine, as he was even with Jones up to the home stretch.

Mehlhorn tried valiantly, but took seven on the long twelfth, where he got enmeshed in the terrific rough that has overcome such noted golfers as Jim Barnes and Jock Hutchison, who failed to qualify, and took seven. His task was almost impossible then, when he got two threes in a row only to fail by going one over par on the sixteenth and getting no better than par on the last two holes.

Catherine Maguire Wins A. A. U. High Jump Title; Pasadena Club Victor

Dolores Boeckmann Third in Discus—Miss Copeland, California Star, With Three Firsts Is Star—Again Shatters Record for Javelin Throw.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, July 10.—Lillian Copeland, of the Pasadena Athletic and Country Club, today defied the rays of a torrid sun and won three championships in the A. A. U. Women's Track and Field Meet, enabling her home club to retain its team title, won last year.

In landing the three individual championships, Miss Copeland established three new American records. She put the 8-pound shot 38 feet 3¾ inches; tossed the javelin 112 feet 5½ inches and threw the discus 101 feet 1 inch. The discus record was established by her yesterday in the trials.

The former records were 106 feet 9¾ inches for the javelin, 36 feet 11¾ inches for the shotput, and 28 feet 2 inches for the discus.

A fourth American women's record was shattered when Catherine Maguire of Pacific, Mo., leaped 4 feet 11¼ inches in the high jump. The former record was 4 feet 10⅞ inches, made by Katherin Lee, Chicago, 1923.

Through the uncanny ability of Miss Copeland to garner points the Pasadena Club won the team point trophy with 26 points. Midwest Athletic Club of Chicago was second with 24 points; Northern California Athletic Club, which was competing under protest, was third, 16 points; Toronto Ladies' Club, 13; Coliseum A. C., St. Louis, 8; Meadowbrook Club, Phidalelphia, 4; Brooklyn Edison, Boston Swimming and Prudential A. C., Newark, N. J., 3 each; V. V. V. Girls' Club, Detroit, 2, and McGill University, 1.

100 Yards in 11.8 Seconds.

Rosa M. Grosse of the Toronto Ladies' Club, won the 100-yard dash by defeating Miss Helen Filkey of the Midwest Athletic Club, Chicago, in the fast time of 11.8 seconds. Miss Filkey, however, was an easy victor in the 60-yard hurdles, her time being 8.7 seconds.

Elta Cartwright, of the Northern Athletic Club, successfully defended her title. She captured the 50-yard dash for the second straight year in 6 1-10 seconds.

The 440-yard relay race was won by the Toronto Ladies Club. In negotiating the distance in 51 seconds it equaled the world record for the distance. The same quartet equaled the record in the trials yesterday. Pasadena Athletic Club was second and Northern California was third.

Frances Keddie of northern California was the winner of the 220-yard dash. She defeated Ellen Brough, of Patterson, N. J., Ethel Nichols, of Pasadena and Edna Sayre, of Brooklyn.

Nellie Todd of Chicago had to jump 16 feet 7⅜ inches to beat Helen Filkey, her teammate, in the broad jump.

Nevers Signed By Duluth 'Pro' Football Team

Brooklyn and Hartford Granted Membership in National League.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, July 10.—Brooklyn, N. Y., and Hartford, Conn., today were granted membership in the National Football League at the annual meeting of the organization. The request of Pottsville, Pa., for reinstatement, and the requests of Los Angeles, Cal., and New Britain, Conn., representatives to be granted franchises will be taken up at meetings tomorrow.

Joseph F. Carr, president of the league, announced that Ernie Nevers of California, All-American fullback, had been signed to play with the Duluth team next fall and that Rody Lamb had been purchased from the Rock Island club by the Chicago Cardinals.

The Milwaukee club was reinstated, but under a new owner. President Carr ordered the Milwaukee franchise sold last December after he learned that school boys were used in the team's line-up. A. L. McGurk, then owner of the club, was given 60 days in which to dispose of his franchise. John Bryan, who purchased it, is here for the meetings and upon his request the club was reinstated.

After a long discussion decision was reserved as to whether the new forward pass rule, formulated by the intercollegiate rules committee, would be adopted by the professional league.

NEW ORLEANS, July 10.—Daniel K. Murray Jr., New Orleans, wrested the southern tennis singles championship from Edward Pfeiffer, Louisville, defending titleholder, in three straight sets here today. The score was 6—1, 6—3, 6—0. Murray was runner up to Pfeiffer last year.

TILDEN AND NORTON WIN SEMIFINALS

Champion and South African Player to Meet in Final for Clay Court Tennis Title.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., July 10.—William T. Tilden Jr., Philadelphia, will defend his honors as national clay court champion here tomorrow against Brian I. C. Norton, San Antonio, Tex., while the doubles title winner will be picked from teams made up of Norton and A. H. Chapin Jr., Springfield, Mass., and L. N. White and L. L Thalheimer, Texas University doubles team, and holders of the collegiate title for the last two years. The holders of the doubles title, Walter Wesbrook and Harvey Snodgrass, did not enter the tournament.

Two titles were decided in the day's play, Berkeley Bell, Austin, Tex., winning the first junior clay court singles title and then continuing, paired with Emmet Pare, Chicago, to win the junior doubles title.

Tilden won the right to defend his title in a hard five-set match against Chapin, a former pupil. The playing-through champion won the first two sets rather easily although Chapin forced the first to deuce. Chapin won the third and Tilden failed to show form in the fourth, but came back to win the fifth and deciding set.

Chapin led in point total with 189 to 181, due to his wide margin in the fourth set. The set scores were 8—6, 6—4, 5—7, 2—6, 6—4.

Norton was at the top of his game against George M. Lott in the singles, winning in straight sets, 7—5, 6—4, 6—2.

Chapin received some measure of revenge for his defeat in the singles when, with Norton, he took the court a few minutes later and defeated Tilden and A. L. "Sandy" Wiener in the doubles, 6—3, 7—5, 6—2.

White and Thalheimer, who have played together for five years, were steady and at times brilliant against Lott and Paul Kunkel, Cincinnati, the collegians leaving few spots on the court uncovered for the brilliant Lott to drive through. The match score was 6—4, 6—4, 2—6, 7—5.

The junior players, in addition to winning first junior clay-court title, added the longest set of the present tournament in the doubles, in which Bell and Pare defeated a pair of brilliant California youngsters, John Doeg, Santa Monica, and H. H. Bancroft, San Diego, 6—3, 13—11, 4—6, 6—2.

Bell previously had attained the rank of the first junior clay-court champion by disposing of Doeg, 5—7, 9—7, 6—2, 6—4.

UMPIRE OLLIE CHILL RESIGNS BY REQUEST

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 10.—Ollie Chill, former American League umpire now in the American Association, announced today that he has resigned at the request of Thomas J. Hickey, President of the league. Chill said Hickey accused the veteran umpire of having deceived him. Hickey said that Chill had stayed at a hotel in Kansas City other than the one picked by Hickey as headquarters for his arbiters while officiating in that city.

The umpire admitted that he had registered at the hotel named by Hickey, but was dissatisfied with his quarters there, and moved to another hotel.

Drewes Pressed To Limit to Win From Weinstock

Title Holder Advances to Finals; Cantwell-Stavenitz Victors in Doubles.

Herbert Weinstock (Forest Park) put up a terrific battle against Ted Drewes before he finally yielded set and match to the defender of the municipal title yesterday afternoon at Forest Park. The score was 7—5, 8—6, 11—9, and indicated the keenness with which the matches were fought. The Washington U. star at many stages of the match had the O'Fallon Park representative confused by his driving.

Drewes' victory puts him in the finals of the muny singles and means that he will meet the winner of the Joe Smith-Chick Sigoloff match for the championship tomorrow.

In the doubles quarter-finals Cantwell-Staventz defeated the Beckman-Owens combine, 9—7, 8—6. The first named team represents Forest Park, the second combination, O'Fallon.

Play got under way in the doubles semi-finals between Stavenitz-Cantwell and Drewes-Schaberg but darkness halted play before the sets were completed. Drewes-Scahberg were leading 6—2, 6—2, 3—6 and 3—1 when play was postponed. The match will be resumed at 2:30 p. m. today, with Joe Smith-Sigoloff the opponents of the winners of this match for the doubles final.

HORNSBY HITS HOMER, AND TEAM AGAIN DRAWS CLOSE TO LEAGUE LEAD

Haines Gains Seventh Consecutive Victory — Triples by Thevenow, Blades and Southworth High Lights in Devastating Attack—Boston Makes Five Errors.

By J. Roy Stockton.

Rogers Hornsby's Cardinals enjoyed a field day at the expense of the tail end Boston Braves yesterday afternoon, scoring a lop-sided victory, 18 to 6 thereby reducing the league leading Reds margin over St. Louis to two and a half games. Jess Haines, pounded for 14 safeties pitched as he pleased, with a big lead all the way and breezed through to his seventh straight triumph.

Everything was as it should have been. The Braves played like tail-enders and the Cardinals, starting a new drive for the lead, now that their leader and premier batsman has returned to duty, performed brilliantly in the field and showed a devastating punch at the plate.

Sixteen safe blows rang off the bludgeons of the Hornsbymen, one of them a home run by Rogers himself, his eighth of the season. Then there was a triple by Tommy Thevenow and one by Billy Southworth and one by Ray Blades.

To help the Cardinals pile up the tremendous total of 18 runs the Braves made five errors, three of them being charged to Gautreau, and the two Boston pitchers issued eight bases on balls.

Hornsby's men started with a rush, scoring four runs in the first inning and were on top all the way. They scored in every inning in which they batted except the fourth and they had three four-run innings.

Blades Starts Attacks.

Ray Blades, back on duty after riding the bench for several days, opened the first inning attack with a single to right. Douthit walked and Hornsby banged a single against the right field wall, scoring Blades and sending Douthit to third. Bottomley fouled to High, but Billy Southworth slammed a triple to left center, scoring Douthit and Hornsby. Southworth then scored on Bell's sacrifice fly to Wilson.

Boston pounded Haines in the second for two runs and for a moment it appeared that perhaps this was not the day for Jess to continue his string of victories. Burrus singled and went to third on Brown's ace to center. Burrus scored on High's infield out and Bancroft's double to right center scored Brown. However, Jess retired Zach Taylor and Bob Smith and the Cardinals added a run to their half of the inning on Thevenow's single, Haines' sacrifice and Douthit's single.

Hornsby Smashes Homer.

Hornsby added another in the third with a home run into the pavilion and because of that lead, Haines was permitted to remain when the Braves again pounded him in the fifth.

Johnny Cooney, who had relieved Bob Smith in the third, started the attack on Haines with a pop single to right. Gautreau flied out, but Jack Smith singled Cooney to third and Wilson punched a single to left, scoring Cooney and sending Jack to third. Burrus punched one to right, scoring Smith, and the stands began to yell for a new pitcher. However, while the yells were still echoing from the stands, Brown lined to Thevenow and Burrus was doubled off first, ending the inning.

Soon the game was safe for the Cardinals and for Jess Haines. Bottomley walked with one down in the fifth, and Gautreau fumbled Southworth's grounder. Bell singled to left, scoring Bottomley.

Rampage in Sixth.

Then the Cardinals started on a big rampage. Haines flied out to start the sixth, but Blades was safe on Gautreau's fumble and Douthit sacrificed. Hornsby and Bottomley walked, filling the bases. Gautreau missed Southworth's easy grounder and Blades scored and the bases were still jammed. Lester Bell kicked in with a line single to left and Hornsby and Bottomley scored.

O'Farrell walked, again filling the bases, and Thevenow singled off Cooney's glove, scoring Southworth.

Four More in the Seventh.

Four more for the Cardinals in the seventh. Blades started with a triple to right and after Douthit

SENATORS GET 12 RUNS IN INNING AND CRUSH BROWNS, 19-

CHESTER FALK HAMMERED IN WILD FRAME

Gaston, Davis and Vangilder Also Fail in Box—Sisler's Men Bat Coveleskie Hard.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The Griffs trampled all over the Browns today, winning by a count of 19 to 4. The champions had two big frames, scoring five runs in the fifth off Davis and 12 in the eighth off Falk, a youthful southpaw.

Joe Judge kicked himself out of the game in the fourth and may draw a suspension as a result. He was called out at second by Umpire Ormby and tossed up a handful of dirt to show his disguest. He was immediately given the gate. Joe Harris replaced him at first.

Gaston was driven out in the third frame and Davis failed to weather the fifth. Gaston yielded four hits and two runs while his successor was found for three hits and five runs.

Coveleskie staggered through five innings. He allowed eight hits for three runs and gave way to Dutch Ruether at bat in the Griffs' big fifth. Covey was anything but a puzzle to the Browns and seemed doomed to defeat when he was yanked.

Marberry had a soft time of it, but Chester Falk, a younger brother of the White Sox outfielder, was slaughtered in the eighth, the Griffs jamming 12 runs over on 10 hits, a walk and two errors. It seemed cruel to punish Falk like that.

Senators First to Score.

The Browns got men on the paths in the first two innings, each time after two were out. McManus, though sent a soft roller to Bluege after Sisler dropped a single to left center in the opening round and in the next, one-basers by Dixon and Gerber were wasted when Gaston popped to the Senator's third sacker.

McNeely strolled to first to start the Senators' initial batting turn, only to be caught later in a side-retiring double play. The Browns executed a two-ply killing in the second session, too, but it did not prevent the locals from pushing a run across.

Myer pried open the inning with a single past Melillo and took third when Goslin crashed the apple against the right field fence. Harry Rice's fast fielding held the Goose at first. A pass to Judge filled the sacks, but Bluege's grounder to Gerber resulted in the demise of Judge and the batter, while Myer counted.

Another marker was chalked up by the Nationals in the third, when Covey surprised everyone present by starting with a sharp single to center. McNeely followed with a double down the left field line that sent Covey to the far corner and Gaston off the slab. Bucky Harris, first to face Davis, grounded to McManus and was thrown out while the pair of running clung to their bases. But E. Rice skied to Durst deep enough to get Covey home after the catch.

Davis Singles in Pinch.

A cluster of three singles with an error by Ruel thrown in hetted the Browns enough tallies to tie the score in the fourth. McManus singled to center and after Miller, trying to sacrifice, fouled to Ruel, a one-baser by Harry Rice moved McManus to second. Dixon lofted to Goslin in short left, then Gerber's stroll crowded the cushions. Davis poked a single to center, tallying McManus. Harry Rice also dug for the plate. McNeely's throw had the Brownie beaten, but the run was registered when Ruel let the runner knock the ball out of his hands.

The Browns checked in with a third run in the fifth. With one gone Sisler singled to right and scampered to the counting block when McManus doubled against the right field barrier.

The ambitious Marty tried to make a triple out of his clout, but found the sphere waiting for him when he slid into third base.

Washington's First Storm.

In their fifth batting turn, the Senators ran wild. Ruel started the merry go round with a single to left center and Ruether, batting instead of Covey, walked. McNeely laid down a bunt good enough for a single, but Davis, who fielded the ball, insisted upon throwing. He heaved past Melillo, who was covering first, letting Ruel get home, Ruether reaching third and the batter second.

The two Senators held their bases as McManus threw out Boss Bucky, but skipped home when E. Rice poled a long single to center. After Rice had swiped second, Myer walked. The pair advanced as Davis cut loose with a wild pitch in making his first delivery to Goslin. Sisler immediately substituted Vangilder for Dixie and Van jammed the stations by passing Goslin.

Then Moon Harris, who took Judge's place after the latter was banished, sent a mighty single to right to tally McNeely and E. Rice. After Bluege had fouled to Dixon, Ruel, up for the second time in the round, walked to fill the bases once more, but Ruether ended the orgy with a roller to Melillo.

The Real Fireworks.

The Browns got a fourth marker in the sixth, which Harry Rice began with a double to left center. Harry took third as Dixon sent a bounder to J. Harris and scored while the Harris boys took care of Gerber.

Then the Senators put on their big splurge in the eighth, chasing Vangilder to the showers and mauling his successor, Falk, unmercifully. Sixteen men went to bat, getitng two triples, three doubles and five singles. These, mixed with a pass isued by Falk, a wild throw by Schang and another by Falk, netted the Senators a dozen runs—a record inning for the season in the American League.

TEXAS U. STAR FIELDER SIGNS WITH SYRACUSE

AUSTIN, Tex., July 10.—Prospects of the Texas University Longhorns for the 1927 Southwest Conference baseball championship took a decided slump recently when Howard Williamson of Texarkana, leading swatsmith of the 1926 title-winning crew, signed with the Syracuse club of the International League.

Williamson was due to play his last season with the Longhorns in 1927. In 1925 and 1926, he was conceded by all sport critics of the conference to be an all-conference outfielder. Williamson in 1926 led the conference with the imposing batting average of .486.

Of sturdy physique and boasting a keen batting eye and excellent form at the plate, Williamson is considered a major league prospect. For two summers he served as secretary of the "knot-hole gang" for the St. Louis Cardinals.

Williamson bats and throws left-hand. He is about 5 feet 11 inches tall, weights about 175 pounds, and is exceptionally fast.

Hack's Home Run in Tenth Inning Wins First Game.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, July 10.—The Cubs took two games from Brooklyn today. They won the first 6 to 4 and the second 3 to 1. The first affair went ten innings. With two down, Freigau doubled and Hack Wilson hit the ball into the bleachers for his twelfth run of the season. Petty was the victim. He had outpitched Kaufmann and Milstead up to the time of the blow-off. Percy Jones was steady in the second game. Douglas McWheeny faltered in the third inning when four hits netted two runs. They were enough to win. Jones went steadily and was not scored upon until the ninth. Before the second game, McWheeny's friends from the Oak Park Council Knights of Columbus gave him a chest of silver and other gifts.

Dempsey Hikes And Plays Golf While Training

No Sparring Partners in Sight Yet but Champion Declares He's Serious.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., July 10.—Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion of the world, is taking his training seriously at the Broadmoor. By 8 o'clock this morning he was out on the road with Jerry Luvadis, his trainer, Gene Normile, "unofficial" manager, and four or five athletes under heavy wraps for a two-hour jaunt into the hills. This is his regular schedule.

On the road Dempsey does 10 miles while the rest are making five, running backward, shadow boxing at trees with a few steps of the Charleston mixed in. He is rounding into shape splendidly; weights 205, 15 above fighting weight. He wants to develop wind and legs now with no sparring partners just now. He enjoys 18 holes of golf in the afternoon and goes to bed early. Does not go with line of business. Will remain until end of July waiting word from Rickard on selection fight site before deciding where to establish next camp.

He will shift quarters to Cheyenne lodge, 45 minutes from the Broadmoor Monday for a few days, 9000 feet high on mountain top.

As a test of his strength, Dempsey lifted his trained, weighing 145 pounds, with one hand by the slack of the trousers, three feet to look into a lion's den yesterday.

When Dempsey was asked if he was serious both the champion and Normile replied, "You bet we're serious."

CAREY AND GRANTHAM LEAD PIRATE ATTACK AS PHILLIES FALL, 9—4

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 10.—Pittsburg made it three out of four by capturing the final game of the series from Philadelphia today, 9 to 4. The Pirates hit two Philadelphia pitchers hard, driving Carlson from the mound early in the contest. Kremer allowed but three hits up to the seventh. Carey led the Pirate attack with four hits. Grantham continued his heavy slugging.

Tumbling Champion Never Tries A Trick He Cannot Visualize

16-Year-Old David Sharpe Concentrates for Weeks on a Stunt Before He Actually Attempts Performance.

By Dent McSkimming.

"I never try a trick without first visualizing it and if I can't get a perfect mind's eye picture of it, I don't try it."

Thus does David Sharpe, twice national champion tumbler, explain his method of perfecting his "double twister" sommersaults, pin wheels, flip flaps, and other intricate body twisting tricks. At the age of 16, David has reached the limit of possibilities in his favorite sport. He has just successfully defended his title of National A. A. U. champion and since there is no Olympic tumbling championship he will now endeavor to become a champion gymnast.

DAVID SHARPE

"Having successfully turned a trick on the first try, I cannot stop practicing it, for I may miss it the second time. In fact, I have often missed the second time, but I believe the reason I missed is that I did not concentrate on my mind's eye picture as I did in making my first effort. I relaxed—and missed."

David Sharpe, son of Harry S. Sharpe, famous boxing authority, was induced to tell of his peculiar habit of training only when it was pointed out to him that his method might assist other young men to become great tumblers. He is stopping in St. Louis before returning to Los Angeles, after having won the national title at Philadelphia about 10 days ago.

Concentration Always an Aid.

"If I were trying to become a good fancy diver, or a swimmer, or a football player or anything else, I think I would practice in the same way," said David. "If a fancy diver can picture himself in the air, making his turns and pulling his legs just so and curving his body just so, he makes his practice much easier. If my instructor explains a new trick to me I do not immediately try to perfect the stunt. I may go for two weeks turning the thing over in my mind until I know to a certainty that I have it. Then I go and try, and half the time I do it right off, especially if it is dangerous. I find it easier to concentrate on difficult tricks because there is greater danger of an accident to punish a misstep.

"One day, not long ago, as I sat at my desk at school, I suddenly became thoroughly convinced that I had perfected a difficult trick, although I had never tried it. I could hardly wait for the class to be dismissed. I went right to the jumping pit, and without changing to my gymnasium costume, flipped into the air and turned the trick. Had I not gone right at it when I had it firmly in mind, I might never have been able to do it quite so well.

Piano Note Spoiled a Trick.

Much depends upon the athlete's ability to concentrate, David believes. One day, in the Los Angeles A. C. gymnasium, he and a clubmate were practicing tumbling. David was half way through a trick, off the mat, when his companion struck a few notes on the piano. "I relaxed immediately and came down all in a bundle," said Sharpe. "Perhaps if the music has rhythm it may be inspiring, but when just a few jarring, random notes are struck sharply they seem to break the thought and the trick is a flop."

Extraneous disturbances are not always a hindrance, however, for David won the national title this year during a driving rain. The competition at Philadelphia was held in the open air. "The rain disturbed us all, for a while, but the competition became so keen and the desire to win so great that I forgot all about spectators, friends and rain. I have sometimes failed to recognize intimate friends close to the mat in competition and they have attributed this to nervousness on my part, but as a matter of fact it was due to my concentration on the trick before me."

Practice Is Unavoidable.

After concentration, perfect timing and co-ordination of mind and muscle have enabled a tumbler to accomplish a trick on his first try; he must go on and practice hundreds and often thousands of times until he has perfected it so that he can do it just a little bit better than any other tumbler.

Although he has only two years in which to do it, Sharpe hopes to become a champion gymnast in order that he may enter the Olympic games at Amsterdam in 1928.

THE ANGLERS who sought out-of-the-way places for their holiday outing met with fair success while those who followed the well-beaten trails were out of luck for, as was predicted in last week's column, the nearby and accessible streams were crowded.

George Ashton and Joe Walker spent their holiday at Montauk and had splendid sport with the rainbow, taking several good-sized ones. Mr. Ashton took the prize trout of the season.

This big fellow, measuring 24 inches in length and weighing five pounds and one ounce, was landed at 6:30 p. m., July 3.

Mr. Ashton used a light dry fly rod equipped with a nine-foot-five tapered leader, and one of his famous dry caterpillar flies, black in color and tied on a No. 10 hook.

Season's Largest Trout.

This is the largest trout taken this season, and the largest ever taken from this stream with a fly, though several have been taken with minnows that were larger than this one.

Walker Hill Jr. and Harry Collins have started out on a unique trip, as they expect to spend a month wandering around through the State, stopping when and where they please, visiting the well-known streams and seeking those which, so far, are not on the fishermen's map.

They started in Walker Hill's Ford coupe loaded with all the necessary stuff and probably a lot that is not. Anyway, we know they will have a good time and will locate many good fishing streams that are practically unknown to our local sportsmen.

We have just learned that there is very good trout fishing in the Robideaux below Waynesville. This is not generally known and is worth trying out.

Party Spears Trout.

Mr. Ashton reports that gigging is at its height on the Current River, while at Montauk he met a party who had speared two trout that weighed over five pounds each.

This tribe of butchers not only capture many fish, but wound many more which they fail to land and which eventually die. (Mr. Ashton found a good-sized fish that had died from injuries inflicted by a spear).

Besides the deadly work done by these men, they frighten the fish to such an extent that fishing is not good for three or four days after the giggers have gone by.

Let us hope that when our Legislature convenes in 1927 our game and fish code will be so changed that it will be unlawful to use a gig at any time. Here's where the Izaak Walton League can help.

Leaguers Go Astray.

Speaking of the league, the writer received a letter a few days ago from a sportsman who has allowed himself to be a bit prejudiced against the league because two of its members were arrested for fishing with flies before the season permitting the use of artificial lures had opened. We are not going to discuss this particular case by condemning or condoning the act, but we feel that no one should condemn the entire league because two of the members have slipped. The writer of the letter mentioned said that he and several friends would not join the league on account of the arrest of two of its many members.

It is only by organizations of this kind that we can conserve our fish and game, so we need more members, so that the Izaak Walton League shall become a power in every state helping our lawmakers enact good and sensible game laws.

I wish to assure the writer of the letter mentioned that there is nothing personal in this article, for his letter was appreciated, but I am trying to set him right as well as others who may be taking the same stand in regard to the Izaak Walton League.

If you want a few days' outing go to Westphalia, where hotel accommodations are good and where you may fish in both the Big and Little Marcus; good bass fishing in both streams.

WRAY'S COLUMN

A Lost Art.

THE stolen base soon will be one with the baseball spendthrift and the foaming stein on the table—gone forever.

If figures do not lie—they do prevaricate sometimes, we admit—there is a steady decrease in the art of pilfering bases that is alarming the old boys who like to see something beside heavy artillery with their ball games.

Take the latest official records, including games of last Thursday. They show that:

Cuyler with 15 steals leads the National League; the Giants, with 55, lead the National League. In the American League the entire Boston Club has stolen only 14 bases.

Washington, the Old Man's Home, leads both leagues in club stealing, with 58!

Records of the Past.

THINK it over. And, while thinking, recall those facts of history:

That Ty Cobb stole 96 bases in 1915—or 16 more than the entire Detroit, St. Louis and Boston clubs have stolen this year!

That William Hamilton, in 1891, stole 115 bases and that Harry Stovey in 1887 stole 156 bases!

Compare the puny 58 of the Washington team with the club record of New York, 423, and of Philadelphia (1888), 638. Double Washington's total to make it equivalent to an entire season and it still looks like a flat tire.

Either the battery watchfulness has become greater and the catcher's throwing better, or the legs and the daring of the runners are growing weaker.

Or, perhaps, a change of baseball policy is under way.

In the meantime the situation leaves the Old Timer a clincher to his argument that the players of today are slipping, instead of advancing.

More Slipping.

THE baseball averages show other features of interest. One is that the Cardinals' hitting is away below par—also far below Cincinnati—with .271 the team's figure.

And individually, Rogers Hornsby is showing the wear and tear of managerial burdens as well as of physical troubles he hitting 89 percentage points below his figure of last season!

A lively reaction will have to take place in the last half of the season in order for Hornsby to become the first "most valuable player" to win a second award from the committee.

Call for Mr. W. B. Wheeler!

THERE is more than a whisper as to the cause of the club's—not Hornsby's—low swat average. Right straight from headquarters comes the statement that the low efficiency of the team's batting eye and the ministrations of a friendly bootlegger are closely related—so closely that steps have been taken to break up the friendship.

On one occasion, it is said, the genial proponent of the theory that Volstead laws were made to be broken, is said to have accompanied the club as a sort of steward-in-ordinary.

It might be well to remember that not only the batting eye but the employer's eye is apt to become considerably clouded after revelations of the sort.

It may be said the barometer has been falling rapidly at Sportsman's Park, with indications of a storm.

CARDINALS SWAMP BRAVES, 18 TO 6

had struck out, Ray scored on Hornsby's single to right. Rogers then retired, permitting Sherdel to run for him.

Bottomley struck out, but Southworth walked and Bell singled to left, and when Wilson missed the ball and it rolled to the fence, Sherdel, Southworth and Bell scored.

In the eighth, Thevenow started a three-run rally with a triple to right center. Haines grounded out but Blades sent a sacrifice foul fly to Burrus, Thevenow scoring. Douthit then doubled to right. Flowers walked and when E. Taylor, who had relieved Bancroft, made a wild throw to second after fielding Bottomley's grounder, the bases again became congested. Southworth singled to center, scoring Douthit and Flowers.

Haines took things placidly in the ninth, working behind a lead of 14 runs, and the Braves [illegible] longed the end while they [illegible] two useless runs on a hit [illegible] a base on balls and a single, [illegible] Cards making no attempt to [illegible] vent the base runners from [illegible] vancing to scoring position.

It was a terrible ball game [illegible] far as competition and [illegible] were concerned, but the [illegible] Saturday crowd of 7,000 enjoyed [illegible] thoroughly, for it meant that the Cardinals were cutting down the margin between them and [illegible] place. Two games just as [illegible] sided will be welcome this [illegible] noon if the Cardinals are on the winning end. The fans [illegible] care how large the margin of victory is if the home team is [illegible] ning, especially when that [illegible] team has a real chance to [illegible] pennant.

With the lead of the C[illegible] Reds now cut to two and [illegible] games the Cardinals will [illegible] chance today further to [illegible] the first place margin and [illegible] climb into second place. [illegible] games are scheduled with [illegible] this afternoon, and while [illegible] Braves will have to rely on [illegible] and Graham, with a pitching [illegible] pretty well shot to pieces, [illegible] Cardinals will have Rhem [illegible] Alexander, two great right[illegible] ers, to shoot at the enemy.

If the Cardinals take [illegible] games they will move into [illegible] place and further reduce the [illegible] margin, even if Cincinnati [illegible] the Giants. Pittsburg [illegible] idle.

of 14 runs, and the Braves prolonged the end while they scored two useless runs on a hit batter, a base on balls and a single, the Cards making no attempt to prevent the base runners from advancing to scoring position.

It was a terrible ball game as far as competition and contest were concerned, but the small Saturday crowd of 7,000 enjoyed it thoroughly, for it meant that the Cardinals were cutting down the margin between them and first place. Two games just as lopsided will be welcome this afternoon if the Cardinals are on the winning end. The fan doesn't care how large the margin of victory is if the home team is winning, especially when that home team has a real chance to win the pennant.

With the lead of the Cincinnati Reds now cut to two and ahalf games the Cardinals will have a chance today further to reduce the first place margin and to climb into second place. Two games are scheduled with Boston this afternoon, and while the Braves will have to rely on Wirtz and Graham, with a pitching staff pretty well shot to pieces, the Cardinals will have Rhem and Alexander, two great right handers, to shoot at the enemy.

If the Cardinals take both games they will move into second place and further reduce the Reds margin, even if Cincinnati stops the Giants. Pittsburg will be idle.

In nine games played with Boston so far this year, the Cardinals have not met with defeat.

BRITONS ARE FIRST IN 7 OF 12 EVENTS

Russell of Cornell Runs 100-Yard Dash in 10 Seconds Flat, Beating Porritt, Oxford Star.

By the Associated Press.

STAMFORD BRIDGE(England, July 10.—Cornell and Princeton track stars for the second time in as many years, today lowered their colors to the combined team of Oxford and Cambridge. The Englishmen, with young Lord Burghley, the crack hurdler registering two victories, captured their international meet 7 points to 5.

Last year, Oxford and Cambridge defeated Princeton and Cornell 9 1-3 to 2 2-3 at Atlatnic City. The slim margin of this year's victory kept the 15,000 spectators on edge especially during the last few events which decided the victory in Great Britain's favor. It was not until the last event—the half-mile—that the meet was decided. As it was, the American representative Joseph R. Gibson of Princeton was only nosed out at the finish.

With the English system of scoring only first places in use, the half-mile race found Great Britain leading six to five. An American victory would have meant a tie, and the meet would then have been decided on second places of which the American college men had a majority.

The trans-Atlantic sections of the grandstand roared wildly as Gibson, with a fine burst of speed took the lead 200 yards from the finish. The American runner pounded on steadily but E. H. Frayer of Cambridge, showing a fine flash of reserve power, forged ahead on the last curve and captured the race and the meet in the time of 1 minute 59 3-4 seconds.

British Win Traditional Events.

As the 12 events were run off the points drifted to the British and American score boards, much in the traditional manner of Anglo-American meets; that is, the British took the middle and long distance events, while the Americans captured the dashes and field events. The only field event that went to Great Britain was the high jump which was captured by C. T. Van Greyzel of Cambridge, a young Dutch colonial who leaped six feet.

Lord Burghley and Henry A. Russell, captain of the Invaders shared the honors of the day, each capturing two events. Capt. Russell, the Cornell star took both the 100 and 220 yard dashes, having the satisfaction of defeating A. E. Porritt of Oxford, captain of the British team in both events. Last year Russell took the 220 race from Porritt but dropped the 100 yard dash to his rival.

Lord Burghley Wins Both Hurdles.

Lord Burghley, showing the same cleverness over the sticks that he displayed in the United States last year, captured the 120 and 220 yard hurdles in easy style. In the 120-yard hurdles his fellow Cambridge student, G. C. Weightman-Smith was leading by a yard when he fell sprawling to the cinders as he tripped over the last hurdle.

In the events which they captured the American trackmen usually outclassed their opponents taking first and second in the pole vault, shot put and broad jump. Stephen R. Bradley of Princeton and Reed V. Bontecou of Cornell had everything their own way in the pole vault. They tied at 12 feet six inches, while the best R. L. Hyatt of Oxford could do was 11 feet six inches.

Many notable figures in the British sporting world attended the meet. Lord Desborough, long a popular figure in Anglo-American sport, presided in a high silk hat and accoutrements unusual at American track and field meets.

Ambassador Houghton, presenting a cup donated by King Alfonso of Spain to Capt. Porritt, said: "This has been an unusually fine meet. Every event was finely contested. We congratulate the winners most thoroughly. I have great pleasure in presenting Capt. Porritt with this cup, but I want to ask you to keep it in good hsape and condition because we are coming back after it."

The best of sportsmanship prevailed throughout the day and the Americans were cheered heartily. The weather was theatening for a time, but rain held off.

Macks Capture Big Parade, 17-14

White Sox and Athletic Reserves Nearly Exhausted in War of Base Hits.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 10.—The Athletics and Chicago White Sox engaged in one of the woozies-woozy ball games ever played in Philadelphia, the Athletics finally winning, 17 to 14, Joe Pate getting credit for the victory and Red Faber the defeat.

Relief hurlers, pinch hitters marched to the box and plate in reckless abandon, the personnel of both teams nearing exhaustion. Home runs were hit by Sheely, Falk and Al Simmons.

Lefty Grove started for the Athletics, but left the game in fifth inning owing to the intense heat.

Ted Blankenship started for the Sox. Then the parade began. Today's victory was the third straight over the White Sox.

RAIN PUTS STOP TO TROTTING RACES

CLEVELAND, O., July 10.—Rain ended today grand circuit meeting at North Randall after the first heat of the 3-year-old trot. The clouds opened up as the horses were scoring for the classified pace, the second event of the card.

Under the rules Guy McKinney was declared the winner of the trot. He led his field from start to finish in the first heat. Miss Orvetta Azoff was second and Wire Worthy third. The time was 2:11 2-5. Other starters were Billy Binville, Red Etawah, Dean Harvester and Royal Guy.

Gehrig's Single With Bases Full Defeats Indians

Police Arrest 16 Gamblers in Bleachers; Lazerri Hits Twelfth Homer.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 10.—The New York Yankees wrested a 4 to 3 victory from Cleveland in 12 innings today. Gehrig's single with the bases full driving home Paschal with the winning run.

Tris Speaker was responsible for all the scoring of the Indians, sending two runs across the plate and registering with a circuit smash.

Lazzeri pounded out his twelfth homer of the season in the seventh inning.

During the game, a police raid on the right field bleachers netted 16 gamblers.

JACOBSON PLAYS HERO ROLE AS RED SOX AND TIGERS SHARE 2 GAMES

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Mass., July 10.—The Red Sox and Tigers divided a double-header, at the Fenway yesterday, the Fohls taking the first game, 6 to 5 in ten innings, and losing the second one, 4 to 2, in the regular time. Both contests were marked by fine fielding and hard scrapping. The Sox came from behind to win, and were always threatening in the second game. Baby Doll Jacobson was the hero of the day. He tied the first game with a homer in the eighth, and came within inches of repeating the stunt in the final. Wingfield and Ruffing did brilliant relief pitching for the Sox. The latter fanned ten Tigers in the seven frames he worked.

BUTCH AND STEADMAN TO FIGHT HERE JULY 21

Arrangements were completed yesterday by Matchmaker Britton of the Business Men's A. C. for a 10-round match between George Butch, local featherweight titleholder, and Paul Steadman, whose string of eleven successive pugilistic conquests within the past ten months has established him as the leading contender for city championship laurels. The bout will be held as the main event of an outdoor glove program at the Battery arena on July 21.

Butch has canceled two engagements with Steadman during the past four months, claiming that an infected jaw compelled him to postpone hostilities the first time, while an injury sustained in a match with Charley "Phil" Rosenberg at Akron, O., temporarily blinded the sight of one eye and forced him to call off the second engagement.

To safeguard the fans against another disappointment officials of the Business Men's A. C. required Butch to post a certified check to cover his weight and appearance forfeit before they would agree to schedule the city title scrap for the coming Battery show.

Jones Wins U. S. Open, His Third Major Golf Title

to overhaul Jones, got a sweet 70 to share third place.

And all the time these stars were struggling over the links, Bobby, almost surfeited with honors, calmly sat in the club house awaiting the verdict. It was only when President Fownes of the United States Golf Association presented the championship cup that the genial champion stepped into a massed circle of admiring humanity amid the plaudits due a hero. His only speech of acceptance was a modest "Thank you."

68 for MacDonald Smith.

It fell to MacDonald Smith of New York, Western open title holder, to make the best score of the day. He burned up the course in the afternoon round with a 68, equaling Mehlhorn's record for the 6726-yard links. But Smith had taken a miserable 82 for his first round and with 75 in the last circuit could do no better than 301. He tied at this mark with Dan Williams, Tommy Armour and Willie Klein.

Tied with Evans at 302 were Al Espinosa and Jack Forrester, while in a tie for sixteenth place was Jimmy Thompson of Richmond, Va., who is only 17 years old. In spite of a poor 82 on Friday young Thompson got a total of 306, scoring 73 and 74 today.

He shared that score with no less personages than Mike Brady, Laurie Ayton and George McLean.

The former champion, Willie MacFarlane of New York, who won at Worcester last year only after a double tie, slumped to an 81 on the last round for a total of 307. He started with a par 72, but got 79 on Friday and was only fair with a 75 this afternoon. He tied with John Rogers of Pittsburg for last place among the prize winners.

Few Upsets in Tourney.

There were no particular upsets except the elimination of some stars in the first two rounds. Bobby Cruickshank, who also once tied with Jones for this title, was expected to do better than his 318, and Cyril Walker, formerly champion, had been looked to for a better score than 321, but they never got going. John Junor of Portland, Ore., Northwest open champion, who startled the experts with a 70 in the first round, slumped to 80 in the second and took two 84s today, totaling 318.

Keefe Carter of Oklahoma City, Western amateur title holder, dropped out during the second round after taking 45 on the first nine.

Jones' Hardest Struggle.

Jones had to work harder for this victory, probably, than for any of his others, for he confessed he was stale from too much competition. He had gone through a hard struggle in Great Britain and had been traveling for weeks. He did not show the effects of this during his first round, except that his fine 70 came of itself, he said. He did not seem to get hold of the ball on many shots.

The surfeit of golf demanded its toll in the second round and after going out in 39, he took 49 for the homeward trip. Even in this round his marvelous ability displayed itself, for he scored par or better on a number of holes.

SCORES BY ROUNDS OF PRIZE WINNERS

J. E. Rogers, Pittsburg, 80-79-75-73—307.

He expressed disgust with the round and hoped he could escape competitive golf for a long time.

Recovering today, he cut one stroke off par with a 71, and was only three strokes behind the leader at the beginning of the last round. He did not start auspiciously on this circuit, taking a five on the first hole and also on the third, owing to faulty approaches. He slipped again on the difficult fifth, where he found the rough, on the double track fairway.

Ninth Hole a Jinx.

Then he bagged a couple of birdies, only to slip to a four on the short ninth, which was his worst spot on the course, for he took three fours and a five on it, always by falling short in a trap.

Jones found his cunning again as he entered the last lap, scoring seven fours in a row, one of them a birdie. In fact, he varied the score on each of the last nine holes only by taking a par three on the baby 17th.

The gallery was all agog by this time, for it was realized that he had to get a birdie four on the 480-yard eighteenth. The wave of spectators swept down both sides of the fairway from the tee to the hole, and they were rewarded for their attentions, for Jones whaled out a splendid drive of 260 yards.

A wild cheer went up when the Atlantan plunked his ball on the green, 220 yards away, with a well-hit iron.

The pellet came to rest 25 feet from the pin and Bobby all but holed the putt for an eagle three. He got down for the desired birdie and then sat down to watch what his trailing competitors would do.

St. Louis' two entrants, Clarence Wolff and Eddie Held, failed to qualify and dropped out after Friday's play.

Murchison Is Offered $500 a Game to Play Pro Football

Loren Murchison, considered the greatest indoor sprinter in the history of athletics and holder of several world's records, told a Post-Dispatch representative today that he was considering an offer from the New York Club of the Professional Football League to play next fall.

"While in the East to attend the national championships I received offers from two sources to play professional football next fall, and I am seriously considering them," Murchison said. "One, from the New York Club of the Professional Football League, calls for $500 a game and 16 games guaranteed.

"I was also told to 'wait until you hear from me' by C. C. Pyle, promoter with Big Bill Edwards, of the new 'pro' football league now being organised.

"I have signed no papers and am not obligated, but the offer is worth thinking over."

Murchison is at present visiting his parents in St. Louis. He has always been known as a sprinter and he did not play football while making a name in athletics at McKinley High School here.

He played football with Paddy Driscoll's Great Lakes team during the days he was at the training school.

Murchison is still an amateur and is loth to sacrifice his amateur standing. At the recent national championships he finished fourth in both the 100 and 200 yard dashes.

Murchison recently married. He is agent for an overall manufacturing company with headquarters in Chicago and is a member of the Illinois Athletic Club.

SARAZEN NEAR RECORD IN WINNING MOUNT VERNON HANDICA

RUNS IN FORM OF LAST YEAR AT EMPIRE CITY

Senelado Finishes Second and Singlefoot Third in Feature—Charade Takes The Whirl Stakes.

By G. F. T. Ryall

Of the New York World Sport Staff

EMPIRE CITY, N. Y., July 10.—Sarazen likes Empire City. Last year he came out of his streak of temperamentality at the Yonkers course and ran to his top form. Today in the Mount Vernon Handicap of $4000 added at one mile and 70 yards, he was the Sarazen of 1924, the horse that swept everything before him.

He picked up top weight of 128 pounds and allowing himself to be rated off the pace to the head of stretch went to the front to win going away—his ears pricking—by a length and a half. Driving behind him Senaldo, second to Mrs. Vanderbilt's gelding in the Metropolitan Handicap, beat Singlefoot, winner of the Brooklyn Handicap, a neck for the place. Sarazen's time for the distance was 1:42-4-5, only two-fifths of a second behind the track record.

There was little delay at the post. Cloudland, on the rail, and Singlefoot, went to the front with Sarazen being rated third and Blondin, Cherry Pie and Senaldo in attendance.

Blondin Goes Into Lead.

Cloudland and Singlefoot fought it out to the turn of the back stretch where Blondin gave one of those bursts of speed of his and went to the front. As they straightened in the stretch he still looked the winner, though Singlefoot was hanging on.

Weiner never made a move on Sarazen until he swung into the stretch, then he let him step and he just stepped down in front like Sarazen of old, with ears pricking.

The race was worth $4845 to the winner.

They ran a fast race, the fractional times being 0:24 1-5, 0:48 1-5, 1:13, 1:38 4-5, 1:24 4-5.

Though the day was a scorcher a crowd of close to capacity proportions attended.

Charade Wins "The Whirl."

James Butler's Charade made a runaway race of the sixteenth running of the Whirl Stakes at five and a half furlongs. Tossed in at 109 pounds, the daughter of Vulcain, which showed such a high turn of speed in the Demoiselle Stakes Thursday, broke with the track and the others never got close to her. She won by eight lengths, in the good time of 1:06.

Witchmount, which carried 125 pounds, was away a bit slowly, but he raced Fantastic, the hot favorite, into submission in the last furlong and took second money. Fantastic, heavily backed because he finished close to Pandera in the Astoria, met no mishaps while Afterglow, stable mate of Witchmount, Cantakerous and Marylander never were in the picture.

The Whirl was worth $5600 to the winner.

Cyclists Ride For City Title

Winner Will Be Determined by Points Made; Officials Chosen.

One of the most important bicycle events of the year is the city championship to be held at Fair Ground Park next Sunday morning under the auspices of the American Bicycle League.

The cyclists start promptly at 9 o'clock on the north side of track near the athletic club house.

The Juniors, riders under 16 years old, will ride a quarter mile, one-third mile and a two-mile scratch race, also a one-mile individual unpaced race.

The Seniors will ride a one-third mile, one mile and a 10-mile scratch race and a 5-mile individual unpaced race.

The winner of each race will score 5 points, second place 3 points, third place, 2 points and fourth place, 1 point. The contestant scoring most points will be the city champion.

The following officials have been appointed:

Referee, William M. Martin.

World's Record Tied by Herman In Hurdle Race

New Mark Was Set Only Three Weeks Ago by Cimaroon Pat.

Special Efforts To Take Care of Regatta Crowds

Power Boat Event July 18 Draws Many Interesting Entries Here.

Officials in charge of the Western motorboat regatta here next Sunday are making preparations for taking care of one of the largest crowds to attend any event in St. Louis this year. Facilities were inadequate for handling the throng at last year's event.

There will be 6000 chairs on [illegible] barges along the river banks to accommodate the spectators who wish to view the races from a place of vantage. The Steamer Cairo will take on a crowd at the shore just before the start of the races and pull out into the river in the center of the course.

The officials will take their place on the Erastus Wells, which will carry no one except those in charge of the event. A starting barge will be fastened to the Erastus Wells.

The fact that last year's races drew only local entries leads the officials to expect a far larger crowd this year, as a very fine entry of noted out-of-town crafs will be here.

Koenig was in touch with Dr. R. H. Daniels of Peoria, president of the Mississippi Valley Power Boat Association, yesterday by phone and was told that a number of boats from Peoria will come down here on a special barge.

A wire from A. T. Griffith, secretary of the Mississippi Power Boat Association, to regatta officials announced that the Eleanor power boat of Chicago, which is now at Danville, Ill., will be sent here.

Harold Bixby has offered his plane, a United States mail plane or a plane from Great Lakes.

Peoria boats are the hydroplane, Miss Peoria, Little Star, the Century Tires and the Mauna Loa, a fast runabout. Daniels and Griffith, will be here for the races.

Of greatest interest to lovers of speed will be th events in which the Hoosier Boy of J. W. Whitlock of Rising Sun, Ind., will compete. This speed sensation, which broke the world's record with a speed of 62.5 miles an hour in the free-for-all race at Louisville is expected to repeat in the event here. There is a $2,000 gold loving cup up as first prize in the free-for-all avent.

Koenik has also arranged for a special time trial over a mile straight-away course for the Hoosier Boy. It is expected that it will make over 70 miles an hour over a straight course.

The races next Sunday will be run off in the following order:

Tug race.
Cruiser race.
725 Class hydroplane race.
Runabout race.
Free-for-all race.
Time trial of the Hoosier Boy.

HORNSBY'S ANSWERS

Runner on third, two out. Batter makes third strike which is dropped by catcher. Runner crosses plate safely, but catcher recovers ball in time to throw the batter out at first. Run scored before the putout was made. Does it count? P. Wagner, 3435 Pennsylvania avenue.

The run was scored in the course of a play in which the last batter failed to reach first base and hence does not count.

In eighth inning A, utility man, bats for B, the left fielder. Unknown to either manager or the scorekeeper, B takes his position again in left field. In next inning A again bats in B's place and no one notices it until the game is over. Did A lose his second bat by not replacing B in the field? Who was the proper batter the second time? H. C. Harris, Springfield, Mo.

Once B left the game, he was not permitted to return and the fact that he did furnishes grounds for protest. Neither could rightfully bat in the ninth because both had left the game.

PETE DONOHUE, REDS STAR HURLER, STEPPED FROM CAMPUS TO MAJOR

1926 SEASON PROMISES TO BE HIS BEST

Cardinals Tried to Sign Him Seven Years Ago but Telegram Went Wrong and Pitcher Went to Cincinnati.

By Herman Wecke.

Some seven years ago, a big, husky right-hander was pitching for the Texas Christian University team. He had chalked up a wonderful record. During his college career, he lost but one game, and that a battle in which he held the opposition without a safety. That right-hander answered to the name of Peter Joseph Donohue.

Branch Rickey, then manager of the Cardinals, heard of the right-hander. Rickey had wonderful success with other players who came direct from college, as witness the work of George Harold Sisler, now manager of the Browns, in particular. So Rickey made overtures to land Donohue. It seemed that everything was settled, that Peter Joseph Donohue would become a member of the St. Louis Nationals.

But at the last minute, when everything seemed settled, something went wrong with a telegram and Peter Joseph Donohue, instead of coming to the St. Louis club, cast his lot with the Cincinnati Reds. And when Pete Donohue went to the Reds, it was a great loss for the Cardinals, for Pete Donohue today is one of the best pitchers in the National League.

He's an Easy Worker.

That's not all. Donohue is not only a winning hurler, but he probably will be in there long after twirlers, now regarded as stars, have passed on to the minors and out of baseball. For Donohue is one of those easy workers, who seems to get by with the least exertion. He has one of those fine, easy motions that kept Cy Young in the game for so long. Withal he has good speed, a fine curve and a pitcher's greatest asset—control.

In this, his sixth season in the majors, and that without any minor league experience, Donohue is one of the main reasons why the Cincinnati club is going along in first place in the National League pennant race. This promises to be the best year of his major league career.

For when Donohue shut out the Cardinals, 4 to 0, in the first half of the Independence day double-header here, he chalked up his twelfth victory of the campaign, against but six losses. Donohue, since he has been a big leaguer, has never gone over the 21 mark in conquests. However, if he continues during the last half of 1926 as he has started, he will shatter this figure.

He Baffles the Cards.

That he will make it seven years in a row over the .500 mark, seems a foregone conclusion. For anyone who can pitch the way Donohue does is a tough man for any club to beat. At one time he was easy for the Cardinals. That was before 1926. However, this season he has beaten Hornsby's men twice in three starts. In one clash he was taken out with his club behind, but the Reds came on to win behind another flinger. Donohue has faced the Cardinals, supposed to be a slugging outfit, in 26 innings. In that time the Cardinals have scored just five runs and connected for 21 hits. That is Donohue's record against a team which is regarded as one of the greatest slugging aggregations in baseball. Instead of slugging "aces," Donohue has made the Hornsbymen look like "deuces."

For the season Donohue has pitched in 152 innings. In that time the opposition has scored 62 runs, an average of 3.69 each nine rounds. This includes unearned as well as earned runs. The hits off him total 144. He has struck out 39 batters. And right here the assertion that he owns control is verified. He has walked but 20 batters. Donohue has pitched just one inning short of 17 full games. Thus he has walked an average of but a little more than one man a game, which is real control.

Two Runs in 29 Innings.

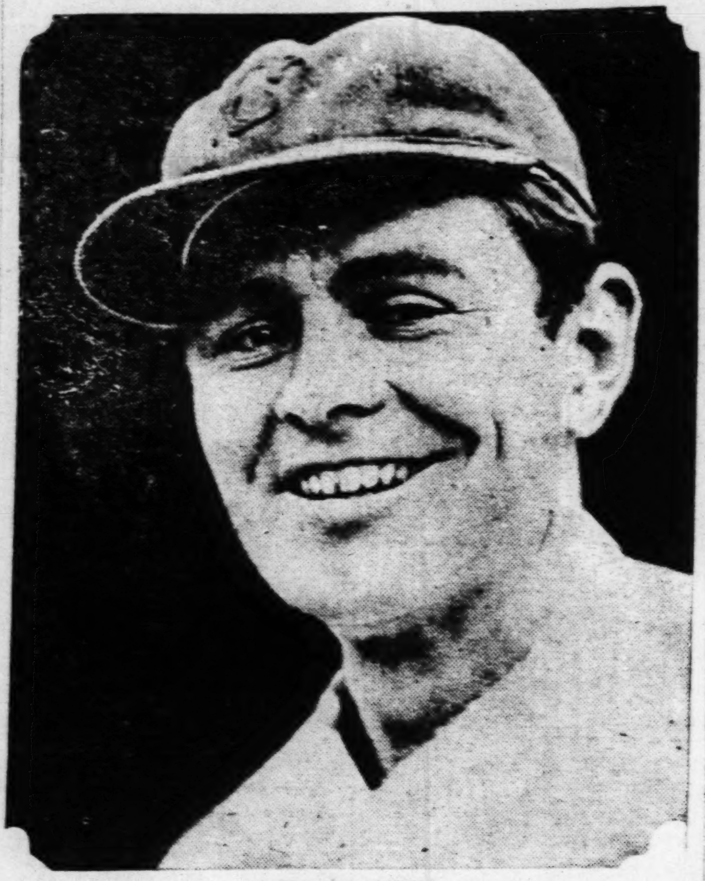
Donohue's best pitching of the year came in his three games of June 27, July 1 and July 5. He hurled 29 rounds and in that time yielded but two runs. Two clashes, those against the Pirates and Cardinals, resulted in shutouts. He lost the other 2 to 1 to the Cubs, because Hack Wilson, the new national hero of Chicago slammed a homer into the convenient stands at the Bruin park in the eleventh round. Donohue, in addition to this, has hurled two, three and four hit contests. He has hurled 11 complete battles, showing that he is able to go the route.

Peter Joseph Donohue was born at Athens, Tex., Nov. 5, 1900, so he will not be 26 years of age until his next birthday. Thus he still has several seasons of major league hurling in front of him.

For his entire career, Donohue has won 95 games and lost but 59 for a winning percentage of .617. Quite a record for a man who never spent a day in the minors.

Donohue is one of those hurlers, who does not try to do it all with his arm. He is known as a "smart" flinger, one who studies batters and never gives a hitter a good ball to swat. That, plus his natural stuff and his control make him a winning pitcher — one the Cardinals could use today had they been able to sign him away back there in the losing year of 1920.

Never Spent Day in Minors



PETE DONOHUE.

Risko, the Baker, Has Found a Surer Way to Make the Dough

Clevelander Who Fights "King" Solomon Here Tuesday, Has Made $50,000 in a Year and One-Half by Boxing and Expects to Add to It Considerably This Summer.

John Risko, Cleveland heavyweight fighter, was raised to be a baker.

At the age of 23, his raising has proved a great success; for John today is making lots of dough. In a year and one-half he has earned $50,000 net by boxing.

And he is going to make some more. That will be at Sportsman's Park next Tuesday, where he is to get several "grand" for opposing "King" Emilio Solomon of Panama, in a 10-round no-decision effort to prove that the boxing game is not altogether a flop. If he wins he will meet the winner of the Berlenbach-Delaney title match.

Risko, at a local gymnasium, sparred three rounds today with his partner Frankie Lennon. Risko stripped like a big bear and moved about like one. There is nothing about John that would ever cause a teacher of esthetic dancing to offer him a contract.

Fighter, Not a Boxer.

Risko is NOT clever. You can't honestly call him a boxer, although in states that are sensitive about how you refer to the profession, they camouflage him as one. But the camouflage don't take.

The element of deception is totally wanting in John. Feinting is foreign to him. He lets the other fellow do the fainting. That happens when the big bear goes into action. Then one knows that John is just a fighter—a personified wallop, with a definite leaning toward left hooks.

John didn't try to remove Lennon from the neighborhood yesterday, but he busted loose with a few that were labeled "T N T—keep away."

Royal Reception Awaits "King."

Enough was seen of John the Baker to know that King Solomon appears to be in for a royal time next Tuesday night.

John's record is quite as convincing as his warmup. He began as an amateur in 1922, and he fairly amazed promoters by fighting three times a week, sometimes two fights a night.

In 1924 he turned professional, and he has done right well at his profession. Neither as amateur or "pro" has he been knocked down; but most of his opponents have hit the canvas by the kayo route.

Nor have they picked easy ones for him. Berlenbach, Delaney, McTigue and others of championship or near-title class have been sent against him.

He had Champion Berlenbach on the floor three times, in their fight, twice for the count of nine. He could not finish the job, but he gained the judges' decision.

G. T. Burdeau Jr. Weds Miss Walsh

THREE weddings of the last few days proved high spots in an otherwise dull week socially.

An interesting ceremony yesterday was that of Miss Eleanor Walsh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas John Walsh of 4372 Laclede avenue, and George Thompson Burdeau Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Burdeau, of 5789 Pershing avenue, which was solemnized at 4 o'clock in the afternoon at the New Cathedral, by the Rev. Father Sylvester Tucker. No announcement had been made of the engagement and the wedding arrangements were simple. The bride was gowned in a sports ensemble of French blue georgette with a felt hat to match, and wore a corsage of pink roses and lilies of the valley. Her sister, Miss Ann Walsh, wore pink georgette, with a green hat and slippers and her flowers were pink roses. John Burdeau was his brother's best man. An informal reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, and Mr. and Mrs. Burdeau departed last night for New Orleans to make their home.

The bride is a graduate of Eden Hall in Philadelphia and Mr. Burdeau of Virginia Military Institute. Mrs. Burdeau Sr., has gone to Europe for the summer and was unable to be present at the ceremony.

Miss Marguerite Kearney McKean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Coulter McKean of 5801 Enright avenue, became the bride Friday of Frederick Franklin Dickmann, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bowen Dickmann of Kane, Pa. The ceremony took place in the Forest Presbyterian Church of Kane and was followed by an informal reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dickmann.

A marriage of interest in St. Louis took place in New York Thursday when Mrs. Mary Frances Joy Bagnell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Joy of Washington, D. C., became the bride of Commander George McCall Courts, U. S. N. The ceremony was solemnized at Grammercy Park Hotel. Among the guests were the bride's parents, and her brother and sister-in-law, Lieut. Duncan Joy, U. S. N. and Mrs. Joy, who recently returned from China to Washington for duty. The bride is a niece of Mrs. Alvin B. Goodbar of St. Louis.

Many Notables Will Stay in Washington During Hot Months

Secretary Kellogg Holds Reins of Government—Mrs. Champ Clark a Visitor—Secretary Mellon and Son to Visit in Rome.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 10.

WITH the departure of President and Mrs. Coolidge for their summer home, the National Capital was not deserted of social notables, for the business of State will hold many officials here during the heated term and there will be much gayety although of an informal nature.

Speaker of the House, Nicholas Longworth went to Cincinnati on Thursday, Baby Paulina and her retinue of nurses and servants having preceded her father. Mrs. Longworth followed on Saturday and they will spend a happy fortnight in the Speaker's old home there.

Secretary of War Davis left Washington, Friday for Dark Harbor, Me., where he will spend the week-end with his wife and children. Secretary Davis will spend most of the summer in Washington, however, except for a short trip which he will make to St. Louis early in August.

Secretary Kellogg Holds Reins.

Other members of the Cabinet are talking vacations, the leaving of the President giving them an opportunity for some play time of their own. The reins of government are in the hands of Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg, who is acting President, as it were. Mrs. Kellogg is spending the month in Washington with the Secretary.

Washington is looking forward with much pleasure to the arrival of the two new members of the Little Cabinet, the new Assistant Secretaries of War and the Navy for aviation. The Assistant Secretary of War F. Trubee Davidson is a member of the New York Four Hundred and has the splendid record of his father, the late Henry P. Davidson, the Morgan financier behind him. The new Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Prof. Edward P. Warner is also a very charming man and a bachelor. Prof. Warner is only 31 and already the belles of the Capital are preparing to charm this eligible new member of the Little Cabinet.

Mrs. Clark Entertained.

Many entertainments have been given during the past week for Mrs. Champ Clark, widow of the late Speaker of the House of Representatives who arrived here from Bowling Green, Mo., on Monday.

Luncheon for Senatorial Candidates Tomorrow

THE senatorial candidates' luncheon which the League of Women Voters has planned for tomorrow at the Hotel Statler at 12:15 p. m. has attracted interest on the part of both men and women voters. Three of the candidates on the Republican ticket—Blodgett Priest, State Senator David M. Proctor and Senator George H. Williams, and three of the four candidates on the Democratic ticket—Judge Ewing Cockrell, Harry B. Hawes and Willis H. Meredith, are to speak. In addition to the city league wards and seven county leagues, the following organizations have engaged tables: Advertising Club, Board of Religious Organizations, College Club, Council of Jewish Women, Chamber of Commerce, Civic Council, Overseas Service League, Junior Democratic Club, Women's Chamber of Commerce, Town Club and the Rotary Club. The hostesses are: Mrs. J. E. Allen, Mrs. Roscoe Anderson, Mrs. Alvin L. Bauman, Mrs. Louis J. Brooks, Mrs. Nat Brown, Mrs. F. B. Clarke, Mrs. W. A. Chamberlain, Mrs. J. B. Comstock, Mrs. A. Smith, Mrs William S Specht, Mrs. J. P. Thomy and Mrs. Vertrees Young.

An innovation in things social is an out-of-door fete in honor of Harry B. Hawes at Forest Park Highlands, July 15, prior to the August primary. The affair is being sponsored by a group of women, some of whom will serve on the Executive Committee, others on a Reception Committee and still others in charge of some of the concessions. Mrs. James M. Franciscus, Mrs. Samuel W. Fordyce and Mrs. Frank C. Bielock will serve on the Reception Committee.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cooper Whiteside of 5137 Washington boulevard, are planning to visit at Spring Lake, N. J., later in the summer.

Vice President Dawes spent the Fourth with friends at Kennebunkport. After reviewing the parade, the Vice President made a brief speech. Upon the platform with the Vice President was Booth Tarkington, whose summer home is at Kennebunkport, and Kenneth L. Roberts.

Secretary of War Davis and family have taken the Sears cottage on the west shore as Islesboro. They have been summer residents at Dark Harbor for several years. The Samuel C. Davis family of St. Louis will also be at Islesboro for the summer. Mr. Davis is a brother of Secretary Davis. Their daughter, Miss Alita Davis, was presented at the Court of St. James last week, and with her mother will return soon to Islesboro.

Secretary of War Davis of St. Louis was the recent guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Moore of St. Louis at their summer home, Taurento. It was noted at the Misquamicut Golf Club that Secretary Davis played tennis with his left hand and golf with his right.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Gives Surprise Dinner.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 10.—The visit of the New York Yacht Club fleet was the occasion of much entertaining in the cottage colony. Prominent among the affairs was the dinner which Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt gave as a surprise for her husband, Gen. Vanderbilt, who has just returned from a South American cruise.

Miss Margaret F. Upton of St. Louis was the guest of her mother, Mrs. Winslow Upton of Providence, before sailing last Saturday for Europe. Miss Upton made the trip east with Miss Frances Babcock, who was returning from a winter in Arizona and California.

Mr. and Mrs. John Shapley Lionberger and family of St. Louis are occupying the Caswell cottage at Saunderstown.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, July 10.—Le Touquet, the new social club at the Pier, was formally opened last Saturday night under the management of M. M. Hayward of the Club Lido at Miami and New York.

The Point Judith Country Club, to which many of the villa colony belong, opened the middle of June. The links and tennis courts are in constant demand. Among those frequently seen on the courts are George and Lea Lambert, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bond Lambert of St. Louis, who came the latter part of June to their cottage Sagamore, on Kentara Green.

WHO KNOWS?

Men and women of prominence in all spheres of action, newspapers, magazines, as well as other sources are giving vent to their views on numerous topics.

Their opinions, on the same subjects, ofttimes vary greatly, thereby creating a perplexing situation for the mass of people.

THAT SHOULD BE A SPLENDID REASON FOR DOING OUR OWN THINKING! OUR CONSCIENCE WILL DO THE REST.

The greatest good for the greatest number should be the aim of all those sincerely interested in the welfare of the public.

Conscientious action can accomplish this!

Super-Highways for Super-Touring

TOURISTS—Clip the above map. It will direct you to all places of interest in Detroit

Super-highways—smooth paved thoroughfares 204 feet wide—that is the type of road Detroit is building for the motorist.

Foremost is Woodward Avenue, passing through town after town—so wide you have the whole road to yourself.

Take the Huron River drive—a broad pavement that follows the winding course of an historic river, through a beautiful valley.

There's a new trip for every day. You can make a complete circuit of the woods and lakes region without once leaving concrete.

Stop at a comfortable downtown hotel and enjoy super-touring on these wonderful highways—in the city and around it—to Belle Isle, to Grosse Pointe, the Great Lakes, Bloomfield Hills, the art plaza and the automobile industries.

Skin Youth

Brought Back by New Tonic

A famous Beauty Expert has just discovered a new kind of Face Powder which quickly stimulates the skin to health and vigor, renewing skin youth.

This tonic powder is almost magically healing and soothing—it has an immediate effect upon pimples, blemishes, roughness, and enlarged pores. Even blackheads disappear.

This new powder is marvelously adhesive—it clings until washed off. Yet it is not absorbed by the skin (blackheads are often caused by the pores absorbing inferior powders). Use this magic tonic powder and watch your skin grow young and healthy again—pimples, blackheads, oily skin, enlarged pores and age signs disappear

U. S. BUILDING 80 PER CENT OF CARS MADE IN WORLD

[illegible] Motor Car Exports 69 Per Cent of Total for All Countries Making Automobiles.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Automobile manufacturers of United States accounted for 80 per cent of the world production of motor cars last year, according to figures compiled by the Department of Commerce.

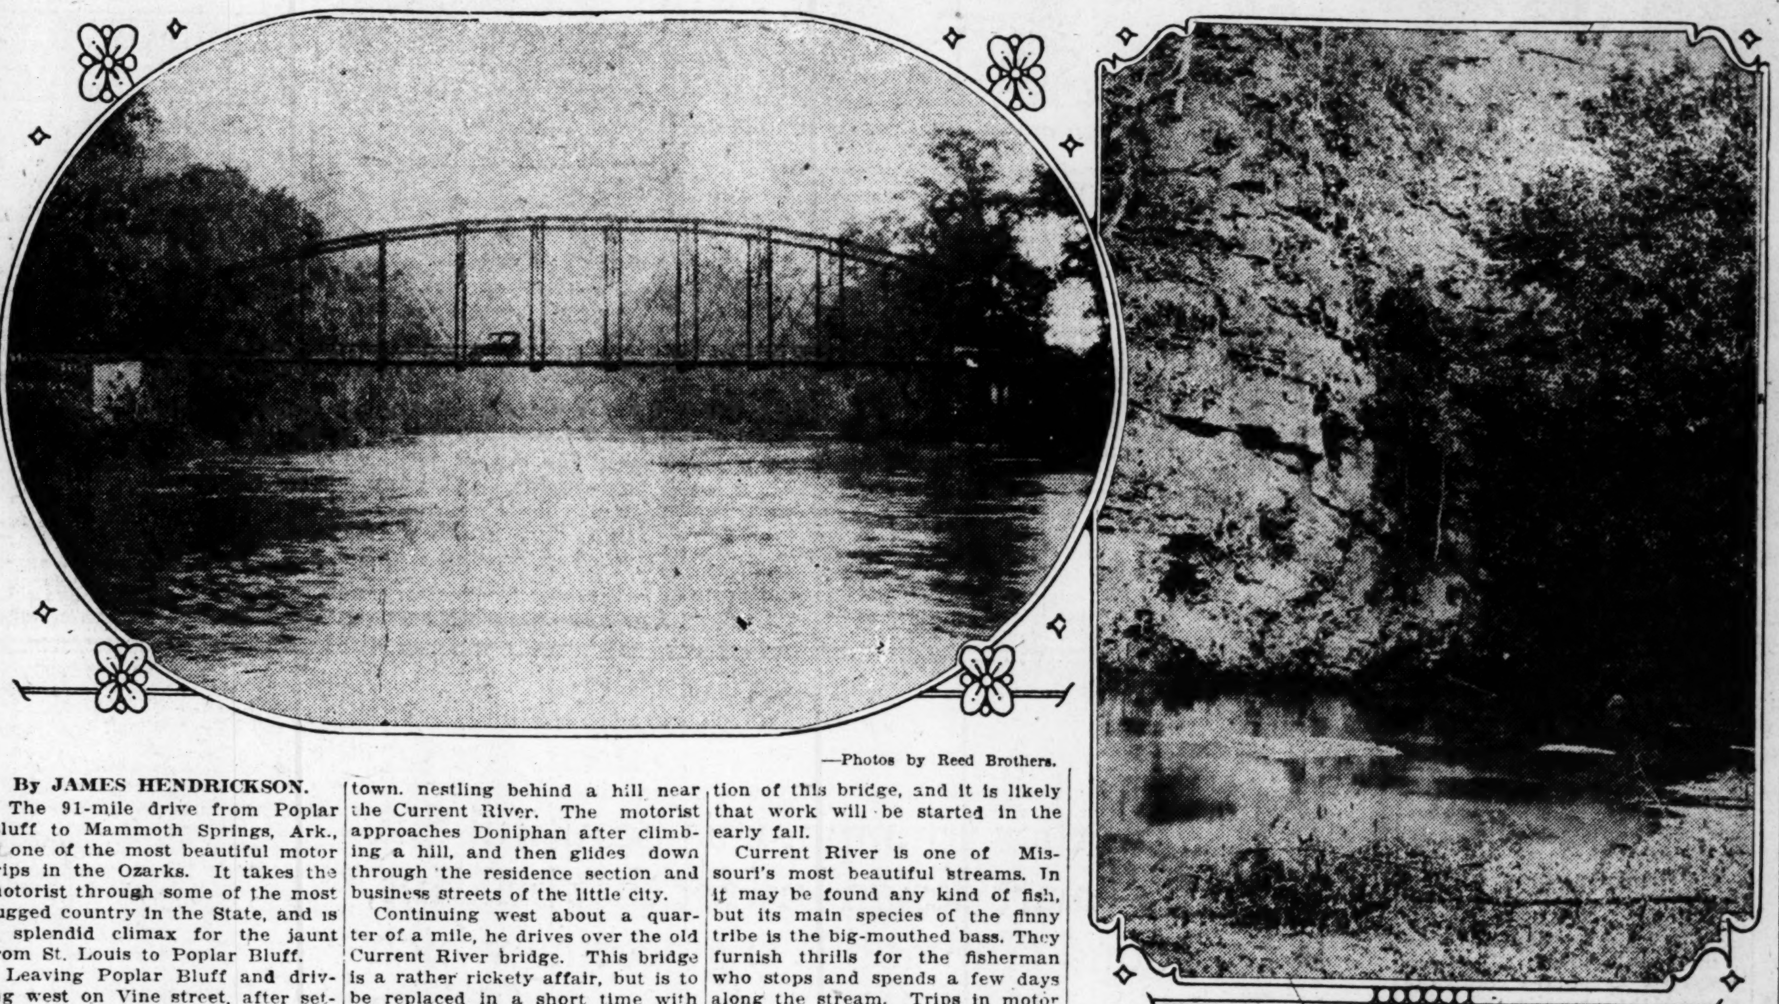
Substantially all automobiles were manufactured in the United States, Canada, France, Italy, the United Kingdom and Germany. Of the 4,763,428 cars produced in these countries, 4,154,269 were manufactured in the United States.

The United States in the year exported 498,427 automobiles—61 per cent of the combined exports from the rest of the world.

In 1924, the production was 3,[illegible] cars, 88 per cent of which came from American factories. In that year America's export was 55 per cent of the combined shipments, disclosing a gain in automotive foreign trade.

Of the six countries mentioned only the United Kingdom exceeded the United States in its 1925 percentage increase over 1924 in passenger car exports. France made the lowest gain. German exports increased 2 per cent, notwithstanding that country's large production gain in automobiles from [illegible] in 1924 to 55,000 in 1925.

Tour to Current and Eleven Point Rivers



—Photos by Reed Brothers.

Left—Bridge spanning Eleven Point River on highway No. 42. Right—The "Narrows" in Oregon County.

By JAMES HENDRICKSON.

The 91-mile drive from Poplar Bluff to Mammoth Springs, Ark., is one of the most beautiful motor trips in the Ozarks. It takes the motorist through some of the most rugged country in the State, and is a splendid climax for the jaunt from St. Louis to Poplar Bluff.

Leaving Poplar Bluff and driving west on Vine street, after setting the speedometer at the Butler County Courthouse, the motorist goes to Eleventh street, then turns south on Highway No. 23. At 11.8 miles leave No. 23 and continue in a westerly direction on No. 42. The entire distance from Poplar Bluff to Doniphan is over rolling country and past prosperous farms. Doniphan is 31.7 miles from Poplar Bluff. It is a typical Southern town, nestling behind a hill near the Current River. The motorist approaches Doniphan after climbing a hill, and then glides down through the residence section and business streets of the little city.

Continuing west about a quarter of a mile, he drives over the old Current River bridge. This bridge is a rather rickety affair, but is to be replaced in a short time with a new structure that will cost $200,000. The bridge will be one of the modern type, extending from the hill on the sotuh side of Current River across the stream and over a strip of lowland to the northeast of the river, connecting with the hill, in order to place the structure above any probable high water. Plans and specifications have been approved for construction of this bridge, and it is likely that work will be started in the early fall.

Current River is one of Missouri's most beautiful streams. In it may be found any kind of fish, but its main species of the finny tribe is the big-mouthed bass. They furnish thrills for the fisherman who stops and spends a few days along the stream. Trips in motor boats can be arranged at Doniphan. One of the most enjoyable trips is north on Current River about 15 miles, then float back down, using rod and reel. Cliffs, first on one side, then on the other, cause the fisherman to forget his toil to gaze at the massive rocks, caves and pine-topped bluffs. Here and there is a swift place in the stream where it takes a man good with the oars to prevent upsets.

Leaving Current River, the motorist travels over high ridges to the west, getting an occasional glimpse of a mountain far in the distance, made attractive by the purple haze typical af the Ozarks. Rabbits dash across the highway in front of the car and every now and then the motorist sees squir-

Tour North to Hannibal From St. Louis Feasible Despite Work Under Way

Interesting 262-Mile Round Trip Via Louisiana Offers Picturesque Scenery—Rough Road Stretches Are Few.

Misguided, probably, by rumors that Federal Highway No. 61 from St. Louis to Hannibal is virtually impassable because of construction work, many local motorists and tourists from all parts of the country have refrained this year from making the trip, thereby denying themselves a picturesque journey north out of St. Louis.

Few Rough Stretches.

As a matter of fact, the route to Hannibal, while not to be characterized as excellent, is one on which rough stretches are few and far between, and in pleasant weather it is at least a 40-mile per hour road. These facts were ascertained by Robert H. Hall of the Press Bureau and George E. Drummond of the Touring Bureau of the Automobile Club of Missouri, who have just completed an investigation tour of this part of the State for the Joint Touring Bureau of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and the Automobile Club of Missouri.

Little of the highway proper is traversed, detouring being necessitated by construction work. But were it not for the detour signs, one would scarcely realize that he was not traveling on the highway. The Highway Department engineers have been careful to make these detours all-weather roads, and in many places graveling and grading make the road preferable to concrete.

At Louisiana, which is about two-thirds of the distance between St. Louis and Hannibal, some of the most picturesque river scenery on the Mississippi River can be seen. This also holds true at Hannibal, where, besides the river scenery, there are many other points of interest.

Possibly the roughest stretch on the trip is encountered 22 miles north of Louisiana, where, for a mile and a half, a prime gravel detour is left for the new grade of Federal No. 61 now in the process of construction. It is best that this stretch be negotiated with caution and running in first or second gear is advisable because of the ruts.

At this point the motorist also catches a vivid glimpse of the strenuous activities of the Highway Department. Within the space of one mile were seen more than 20 four-horse teams and no less than 50 laborers at work on the new road.

Starting on the Trip.

The distance between St. Louis and Hannibal, according to the speedometer reading of the scout car of the Automobile Club of Missouri, is 131.1 miles, speedometer from Auto Club headquarters, 4228 Lindell boulevard, to Auto Club division headquarters, in the Mark Twain Hotel, on Main street, Hannibal.

One leaves St. Louis over St. Charles Rock road to St. Charles. This road, out of St. Louis, is now officially designated as both Federal Highways No. 40 and No. 61. By the way, when purchasing tickets for the toll bridge over the Missouri River at St. Charles, one would better buy round-trip tickets at a reduced rate.

West out of St. Charles one fol-

What's Newest in Motor Cars

New Oakland Models Show Refinements

THE Greater Oakland Six, introduced throughout the country this week and shown here by the Mississippi Valley Motor Co., embodies 77 refinements, including new Fisher bodies in new two-tone Duco finish, engine developments of a vital nature and a rubber silenced chassis, which is said to eliminate noises and rumbling so as to prolong the life of the chassis and permit the passengers to ride in quiet, cushioned comfort. A rubber impregnated joint, attaching the front universal joint of the drive shaft to the rear of the transmission, insulates the transmission. Noises, which without it, are telegraphed up through the drive shaft, are now absorbed. The forward end of the shaft is cushioned to produce a noiseless drive.

Although the new bodies by Fisher are characteristically Oakland, they have been refined. All cars have double beading and are finished in two-tone Duco.

The touring car has been discontinued and in its place is a five-passenger sport phaeton, completely equipped. The other cars in the line include sedan, four-door sedan, landau sedan, landau coupe and sport roadster.

Double filament, depressible-beam headlights are so designed that the driver can depress the beam to a point which eliminates glare to the approaching driver's eyes without reducing the light intensity. A feature of these new headlights is the foot control on the floor board at the left of the clutch pedal, which enables the driver to keep his hands on the driving wheel at all times. By pressing on the foot control he depresses the light and with the same foot pressure raise them again to driving position.

Smoother and quieter operation of the engine itself results from the use of a new camshaft and new valve spring retainers.

Greater engine general efficiency is also accomplished through a new oil drain piston ring, a new carburetor with single adjustment and new oil relief and pressure valve.

Comfort has been increased by use of chrome vanadium steel rear springs. Easier handling is assured by new steering gears with a 15 to 1 ratio and a new steeering wheel.

A new center cross-member section further reduces frame distortion on rough roads. Because balloon tires running at high speed are affected by unbalanced conditions in wheels, tire valves, cap, etc., are balanced by a small counter weight on the felloe of the wheel.

The sedan and four-door sedan are upholstered in new wool velour. A footrail has been placed in the sedan and a robe rail and footrail in the four-door sedan. The sedan is finished in Dundee gray, with wheels of the same color, black upper structure and straw-colored striping on body, louvres and wheels. The color of the four-door sedan body and wheels is gray, with black upper structure and red striping on body, louvres and wheels.

The landau sedan and landau coupe are blue with blue upper structure, gold bronze striping and natural wood wheels. The instrument boards are of inlaid walnut finish with walnut window garnish rails. New luxurious mohair upholstery was selected for the landau sedan. Regulators are fitted to the rear quarter windows of this body type for comfort in summer driving. The front floor mat is covered with felt in this car and the rear compartment with carpet, while front bumpers and rear guards are standard. The landau coupe body has been lengthened four inches, while the rear deck is constructed to give more room and more graceful lines. The rear deck door may be removed entirely. A package compartment door is now provided. Upholstery is Spanish leather. The quarter windows are built in "D" shape.

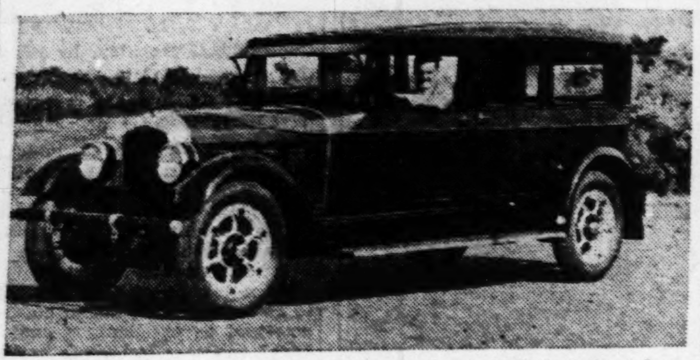
The two sport cars, the phaeton and the sport roadster, are the most colorful cars in the line and most completely equipped. The four-passenger sport roadster may be obtained in optional Duco color combinations, the standard color scheme being maroon and tan, while those desiring a car with less striking colors may have gray.

The phaeton has a two-tone Duco color combination of beige and green. It is finished in gray Spanish leather of a shark-grain finish over hair pads and cushion springs. A folding top is standard.

Windshield wings of plate glass, nickel plated front bumpers and rear guards, rear view mirror, windshield cleaner, walnut steering wheel and nickel-plated headlights are added features on both these cars.

All the closed cars have Fisher VV one-piece windshield, windshield cleaner, regulators on all side windows, shades, dome light, nickel-placed door handles, cowl lights, door locks, visor, rear view mirror and luxury type cushion springs.

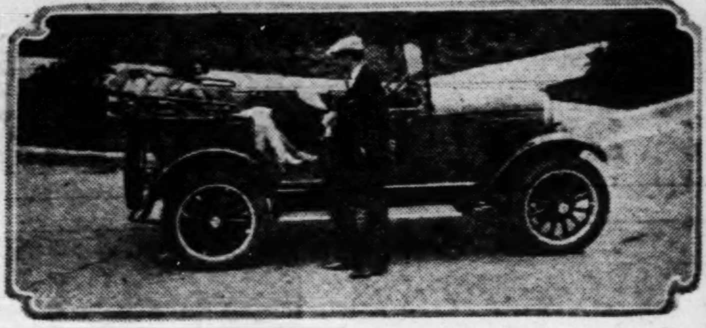
Five-passenger sedan model of the new Oakland six. It is being shown in St. Louis by the Mississippi Valley Motor Car Co.



The new Auburn eight 7-passenger sedan, which is being shown by the Mound City Automobile Co.

Adjustable Seat on 2 Chrysler Models

AN adjustable front seat, adaptable to persons of all sizes and affording exceptional comfort and convenience, is a new standard equipment feature of all Chrysler "70" and imperial "80" phaetons. The front seat frame is free of the sides of the car, is mounted on rollers, and locks in position by substantial pins in a metal plate at each side immediately beneath the seat frame. There are six holes in these plates, providing for locking the seat frame in position at any desired distance from the foot pedals over a range of three inches forward and two inches backward from the neutral position. The pin locks are actuated by a single trigger near the driver's heel as he sits behind the wheel. By stepping on this trigger and pushing back or pulling forward, he can move his seat forward or backward as easily as moving a chair on casters. The hinged back of the seat is adjustable to any position from vertical to horizontal and is held in position by heavy leather straps at the sides. The adjustable feature of the seat frame enables any driver to choose the exact distance from the pedals at which he prefers to sit.



Showing the low lines, yet roominess, of the touring model of the new Overland Whippet.

Two New Jordan Models Shown Here

TWO new Jordan models, both on the "Great Line Eight" chassis—a custom style sedan and victoria—are being shown by the MacCarthy-Archer Motor Co. The sedan is in two-tone maroon or brown, while the victoria model is in two-tone green or gray. The custom style sedan has features of comfort, vision, convenience and safety, with finish and appointments, hitherto restricted to custom built cars of high price and great weight. It is for five passengers. The victoria, which is for four passengers and also finely appointed, is especially well adapted for women's driving. Both models are on the 125-inch wheelbase with four-wheel brakes, balloon tires and elaborate equipment.

Hup Adds Berline Sedan

LATEST addition to the Hup eight line is a berline sedan which is being exhibited by the Weber Implement and Automoble Co. This is a chauffeur-driven model seating five passengers in the rear compartment, which is upholstered in fine broadcloth whereas the front compartment is done in leather. There is a glass partition between the compartments. Exterior finish is in Larchmont blue.

TOUR TO HANNIBAL FROM ST. LOUIS IS FOUND TO BE FEASIBLE

lows the concrete to a point 1.3 miles west of Gilmore, where Federal Highway No. 61 separates from Federal No. 40 and turns north. This point is 37.4 miles from Auto Club headquarters.

The entire highway thus far has been of concrete. Now, turning north on No. 61, the concrete is left for a wide semi-gravel road. This goes through Flint Hill, 41.3 miles from St. Louis, and continues in a northerly direction for 5.7 miles more upon which a detour is encountered. Following this detour, which is of gravel, for 6.6 miles, one arrives at Troy, 53.6 miles from St. Louis. Three miles farther on, the Cuivre River, an excellent fishing stream, is passed. In quick succession the towns of Auburn and Eolia are left behind.

Calumet, scarcely more than a cross-roads community, 8.5 miles south of Louisiana, marks the beginning of a hilly country, cut by deep valleys hemmed in by cliffs which, farther toward the northeast, end in the Mississippi River bluffs.

At 88.3 miles, one arrives at Louisiana, a picturesque Mississippi River town under the bluffs.

Splendid Views.

Just north of Louisiana, on the road to Frankford, the road winds around two rugged hills, and there are panoramic views of the river and the limestone bluffs that hem it in on the Missouri shore. Then the road swings away from the river and goes in a westerly direction toward Frankford. This stretch is of good gravel, except for the last four miles into Frankford, which is dirt, but in good condition.

At Frankford, the route turns north and from a point one mile and one-half outside of town and for the remainder of the way to New London is under construction. Four detours are encountered. The first three, of gravel, follow the old road. The last detour is 8 miles in length, 6 miles of which is dirt, and two of excellent gravel, ending at New London. From New London one finds a good gravel road to Hannibal.

Picturesque Hannibal.

Hannibal has many attractions not usually found in a town of its size. In the south end of town, easily reached over good streets and gravel roads, is Lovers' Leap, a bluff at the river's edge, Mark Twain's Cave and Cameron Cave. The climb to the top of Lovers' Leap is repaid by the beauty of the view. Mark Twain's Cave and Cameron Cave are worthy of exploration. Guides are obtainable at the former.

Riverview Park, at the north end of town, is similar in character to Chain of Rocks Park in St. Louis. It is on the bluffs of the Mississippi River, with splendid views to north, east and south. Excellent gravel drives wind through the grounds, some skirting the edge of the bluffs. At points of vantage along these drives, lookouts have been erected. From one lookout may be seen the automobile and railroad bridge spanning the "Father of Waters," and, farther down the river, Lovers' Leap. At the east lookout, there is a statue of Mark Twain.

Riverview Park is reached over an excellent concrete street. On the way, at the foot of Cardiff Hill, is the newly-erected statue of Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn. The statue depicts the last meeting of the boys on the occasion of Tom's leaving to go out into the world. It was designed and built by Frederick C. Hibbard, and the sympathetic treatment with which it has been executed is perhaps due in part to the fact that the sculptor himself was born and reared in Canton, Mo., but a few miles from Hannibal.

The following log of the trip was compiled by Drummond:

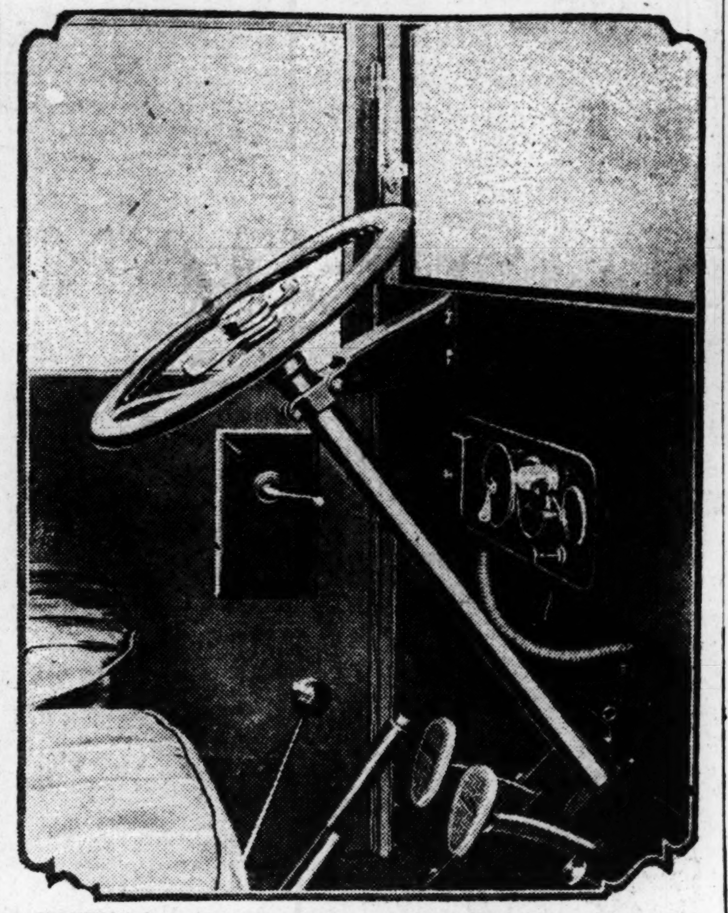
Fine for Reo Speed Wagon Driver



SHOWING how the cab of the new improved Reo Speed Wagon has been fitted so that this speed truck is as comfortable and easy to drive as a passenger car. Gear shift and braking are standard and operate just like those on a passenger car. The seats are comfortable. The gasoline tank is under the seat now. The windshield is one-piece. The door windows are raised and lowered by a crank as in a regular sedan. The steering wheel is adjustable, and instruments are grouped under a light on the instrument board, while there is also a cowl ventilator. "It actually is as comfortable driving a Speed Wagon now," says H. W. Kardell, of the Kardell Motor Car Co., "as it is in a high-priced sedan."

A DODGE BROTHERS SEDAN

$895!

F. O. B. Detroit

People are surprised to learn that this beautiful and sturdy car now sells for $895.

Moreover, the Sedan possesses all the roominess and character of closed cars that call for a much greater investment.

It is substantial in appearance because it is substantial in fact. And serves its owners far beyond the period usually expected of a car at any price.

The body is all steel—safe, sturdy, fireproof, and smartly finished below the belt line in coolie blue lacquer, with cartouche yellow stripe—upper body in black lacquer—shields and fenders in black, oven-baked enamel.

Blue Spanish genuine leather upholstery, removable rear seat-back, and optional wood or steel wheels are included among many other features that commend themselves forcefully to the buyer.

Many who expected to buy a cheaper car, now find that Dodge Brothers product is well within their means. Many who had expected to buy something more expensive, now find everything they could possibly desire in these smart and dependable vehicles.

takes the motorist through other sections of the Ozarks may be made

A side trip of unusual interest from Alton is to Greer Spring. This spring is in a gulch, 8.7 miles northeast of Alton. Other scenery of special interest can be found in the vicinity of Thayer, including the "Narrows" and the Grand Gulf, which is a cave under a natural bridge 200 feet high. A trip that takes the motorist through other sections of the Ozarks may be made by following No. 19 north from Alton to Birch Tree, then No. 16 east, with side trips to Alley Spring, Round Spring, Sinking Creek and back to Van Buren, near which is Big Springs State Park, and over No. 16 to Garwood, then No. 21 north through Ellington, Centerville and Glover, to Ironton and then via Doe Run to Farmington and over No. 2 to St. Louis.

"SOMETHING IS HAPPENING IN THE AUTOMOTIVE WORLD"

ALMOST A YEAR AGO the industry began to say: "Something is happening in the automotive world".

The public had found itself suddenly presented with a car that fulfilled beyond all expectations its conception of what a car should be and what a car should do.

It was powerful. It performed with dash and spirit. It was at home in any traffic. It was easy to drive and easy to park. It was beautiful. It offered comfort and luxury .... yet its price was low.

Immediately great interest focused upon this car. Day by day that interest grew more and more intense. It doubled and redoubled as the weeks and months rolled by. On thoroughfare and highway this car asked no favors, feared no road.

Then, when endurance took first place among its proved qualities, in the hands of thousands of owners—the final proof of excellence was established.

Today public preference stands at a new peak of enthusiasm for the car that won its place by right of merit.

This public preference confirms the fact that something, indeed, was happening a year ago.

With the greatest year in Oldsmobile history now a highlight in the history of the industry itself; with thousands of owners lavishing their praise upon this car; with a record of performance and stamina established....

Now what was happening may be freely told:

* * *

GENERAL MOTORS was mustering new hearts and heads and hands to the service of Oldsmobile. A new staff of leaders was taking command.

From distinguished service, in all phases of the industry, they came, bringing with them a new appreciation of public wants and needs, a new will to serve, new pride, new vigor and new skill.

They shared a common vision, cherished a common aim, held firm to a common purpose which they were determined to achieve.

And with Oldsmobile each man recognized the opportunity to achieve that common purpose. Shoulder to shoulder with him stood others just as earnest, just as capable as he. At their absolute command were the envied facilities and veteran craftsmen of one of the pioneer manufacturers of the automobile world. Back of all this, at their disposal, lay the vast resources of General Motors.

Seizing these facilities, they bent to their task with a will.

United in their purpose they dedicated to its achievement not only heads and hands but hearts... their whole-souled ambition to perform a public service, to fulfill a public need.

How well they succeeded, everyone now knows.

Why they succeeded is this:

* * *

DEEP-ROOTED in the mind of every man who plans or builds or tests Oldsmobile is the unwavering determination that his knowledge and skill and resources shall render constant service....

.. that the American family may have, at a moderate investment, a car that gratifies their finer tastes as well as satisfies their every need....

.. that Oldsmobile shall not be wanting in a single essential factor that contributes to performance, comfort, beauty or long life....

.. that in the design, material and manufacture of every detail the strictest standards shall be rigidly maintained....

.. that their boundless resources and matchless facilities shall be utilized to the utmost to provide these qualities at the lowest possible cost....

This is more than a purpose; it is a creed.

It is accepted as a trust, with the firm determination that nothing shall ever deflect the loyalty of Oldsmobile from this ideal.

This—our steadfast pledge—is your firm assurance.

25TH ANNIVERSARY OF FRANKLIN AUTO

Many Tributes of Air-Cooled Engine Feature of Celebration at Motor Car Factory.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 10.—In the 100-mile low gear test which was carried out last week as a feature of the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Franklin air-cooled automobile, 185 Franklin cars in 185 distribution centers successfully completed the 100 miles in low. The average time was 8 hours and 6 minutes. Average gasoline consumption was 6.85 miles to the gallon, equivalent to 24.83 miles to the gallon in high gear. Oil consumption averaged only 1.46 pints for the 100 miles.

Wire From Polar Aviator.

A feature of the celebration, which was participated in by nearly 2500 employes of the Franklin factory, was receipt of numerous congratulatory messages from leaders of the industry, such as H. H. Rice, assistant to the president of General Motors; Charles Clifton, chairman of the board of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Co.; R. E. Olds, chairman of the board of the Reo Motor Car Co., and Alfred Reeves, general manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. Reeves wired, in part: "I know I voice all those now in the industry as well as those who have gone out in sending congratulations on the enviable record you have made as an outstanding industrialist doing business on most honorable basis contributing many new things to the art and always offering the public a product of the highest possible merit."

A treasured telegram came from Commander R. E. Byrd, whose polar flight was made in an airplane powered with an air-cooled motor. Byrd's wire said, in part: Regretted that he could not "express in person my faith in the air-cooled motor, which certainly did a great job for Bennett (his companion on the trip to the pole) and myself."

A number of telegrams from airplane manufacturers expressed faith in the air-cooled engine and said that they are replacing water-cooled motors in aircraft, because of manifest advantages.

Story of Franklin Co.

The Franklin Co. is the sixth oldest manufacturer of motor cars in America, and is the outgrowth of the H. H. Franklin Manufacturing Co., organized in 1893 by H. H. Franklin to produce die castings. In 1901, John Wilkinson, an engineer, was employed to develop an automobile, the power unit to be patterned after the engine which he designed and built in 1898. Incidentally, the latter was the first four-cylinder air-cooled, valve-in-head engine ever built in America. The first cars were ready for the public in 1902. The very first car produced was later repurchased by the Syracuse manufacturer, and is now held as a priceless relic.

Four years passed before the industry generally took over the four-cylinder idea which Franklin engineers perfected, and about the time that the industry generally was taking up the four-cylinder engine Wilkinson perfected and introduced the six-cylinder type.

The growth of the factory is shown by the company's production figures—in 1907, 1509 automobiles twere shipped; in 1910, 1920 cars; in 1914, 2502; in 1916, 3804; in 1917, 8987, etc. The best year in the history of the local firm was 1925, and executives state that 1926 to date, in point of retail deliveries, is going well ahead of 1925.

The company's plant has grown from a few square feet to a thoroughly up-to-date plant occupying 31 acres of floor space.

There are Frankin sales representatives in 500 cities and towns in the United States and 12 in foreign countries. The firm has authorized capital stock of $15,000,000 preferred and 600,000 shares of common stock.

The Franklin Co. is one of the few automobile companies among those who started 25 years ago which is still headed by the officials who organized it. It never has undergone a reorganization.

NEW ENGINE FEATURES IN OVERLAND WHIPPET CAR

More Than 2,000,000 Persons Said to Have Viewed Car in First Week.

A feature of the engine of the new Overland whippet is its compactness. It is noticeably short and high, the shortness being due to the small bore, the cylinders being only 3⅛ inches in diameter, while the height is necessary because of the length of the connecting rods and of the cylinder walls.

"A feature of the cylinder wall and piston construction, not found in any other light-car motor, is the operation of the pistons in the cylinders," says Willys-Overland, Inc. "In the usual motor, the skirt of the piston drops below the lower edge of the cylinder walls and the completion of the down stroke. In the Overland Whippet motor, the skirt of the piston is never below the bottom of the cylinder wall. The reason given for this type of construction is the elimination of piston slaps.

The pistons themselves are unusually long and the connecting rods are 9½ inches from the center of their small ends to the center of the large ends. This is a length of connecting rod most unusual in light-car construction in this country and never before used here on stock motors of equivalent size.

"The weight of the crankshaft is 27 pounds, which is fully 50 per cent heavier than that of crankshafts in other stock production light-car motors.

"The crankshaft bearing surfaces are unusually large in diameter and noticeably short in length, this being in line with modern type of construction in motors of the finest quality."

Approximately 2,000,000 persons are said to have inspected the Whippet dealers' showrooms the first week, 62,000 entering the New York salesroom the first three days.

CHANDLER SALES CONTEST ENDED AFTER 100 DAYS

The Chandler factory started in March a retail sales contest to which all Chandler salesmen were eligible, offering $20,000 in cash and a Chandler car as prizes. Some 700 salesmen entered. The contest period was 100 days, with special lap prize features each fortnight. Salesmen in small towns were not handicapped in contesting against salesmen in the larger cities. There were four competitive groups. The first was limited to salesmen in cities of 50,000 to 250,000 population. The third and fourth groups were open to contestants in cities over 250,000 in population.

By far the greatest proportion of the $20,000 cash prize money was won by salesmen in cities below 250,000 population. The final prizes for compiling the greatest number of points were won by salesmen in Jamaica, N. Y.; Bronx, N. Y.; Akron, O., and Patchogue, L. I.

More than 75 contestants won portions of the $20,000. T[illegible] amounts won varied from $[illegible] the Jamaica contestant, to $[illegible] won by a contestant in [illegible] N. Y.

DIANA DOES 15094 MILES IN 30 DAY RUN IN WISCONSIN

Back at the factory two months and six days after passing the Moon final test division and after being turned over to John Karel, chief test pilot of the Milwaukee Sentinel for that paper's 30-test run, a Diana roadster is creating interest in Wisconsin. The log of the test run kept by Karel shows that the car ran 15,094 miles in 30 days, averaging more than 503 miles per day. It further shows that the car consumed 821 gallons of gasoline, averaging 18.38 miles to the gallon. The oil in the crank case was changed 27 times or on an average of once every 559 miles.

No mechanical repairs or replacements of any kind were made during the run though all sorts of roads were covered. Incidentally the figures and data as contained in the log of the trip are supported by an affidavit. No repairs or adjustments were made on the trip other than the ordinary ones, the car being given the regular greasing and attention any driver would give his car. The car used on this run was strictly stock.

The run started from the Elks Club in Milwaukee on May 17 and had as its object the breaking of the 1925 run of 12,105 miles in 30 days.

TOTAL OF 173,373 DODGE SALES IN FIRST HALF OF YEAR

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., July 10.—Dodge Brothers' dealers in the United States delivered 173,373 cars and trucks in the first half of 1926, a gain of 52,669 cars, or 43.6 per cent, over deliveries of 120,704 in the first half of 1925. These figures set a new high record in the company's history.

NAMED BRAKE DISTRIBUTOR

The Wagner Electric Corp. announces the opening of the Busy Bee Motor Car Co., 4465 Manchester avenue, as its authorized Lockheed hydraulic four-wheel brake distributor in the West End. This company will operate as a branch of the central service station at 3029 Locust street. The company is equipped with all facilities to handle brake service through factory-trained men.

RUN OF 22,095 MILES IN 31 DAYS BY PEERLESS SIX

A run of 22,095 miles in 31 days by a Peerless six sedan, without once stopping the engine or changing the Pennzoil oil used, is reported by the Seattle Peerless Motor Co. The car was driven 24 hours a day, three men alternating at the wheel in eight-hour shifts. The starter motor was removed and the crank soldered and sealed, as also was the hood. Only 10 quarts of oil were added during the run, oil consumption averaging only 2200 miles per quart.

SCREENS HIS AUTOMOBILE

Matt F. Morse, general manager of the Automobile Club of Missouri, is said to be the first motorist in Missouri who has fitted his automobile with screens. The screening on Morse's automobile, which is a Buick sedan, is on a demountable frame, which permits removal or erection at the driver's discretion.

Morse says he first thought of equipping his automobile with screens when on a recent touring trip, during which it was necessary to drive at night. A myriad of bugs greatly inconvenienced him, so he decided on the screening.

NEW PROCESS CAR PAINTING

The Nash Automobile Painting Co., 3845-47 Easton avenue, has announced a new process which enables it to paint a motor car for much less than the usual price. J. D. Weakley, manager, said the process included removing all old paint and painting with a durable finish that would not chip, crack or deface by weather. The cost, he said, ranged from $10 to $14.50, according to type of car, and $5 extra for two-tone work.

PONTIAC SIX

CHIEF · OF THE · SIXES

At a time when price had been made the chief inducement to the purchase of a low-priced six, the Pontiac Six was introduced into that field.

Yet it won instant acceptance—first as a quality car and then as a car at a price that could only be achieved by an organization enjoying the gigantic resources and purchasing power at the disposal of the Oakland Motor Car Company, a division of General Motors.

Entirely disregarding price, the Pontiac Six would be an outstanding car by the grace of its Fisher body and the smartness of its Duco finish, by the size, power, and flexibility of its engine, by the exceptional ruggedness and "heft" of every unit, from the dashing radiator cap to the tail light—

—but a price of $825 literally throws this high-quality Six into bold and impressive relief against the entire industry.

Oakland Six, Companion to the Pontiac Six—$1025 to $1295. All prices at factory. Easy to pay on the liberal General Motors Time Payment Plan.

FOREIGN AUTO RACERS SAID TO PLAN INVASION

Hot Competition by Europeans on American Speedways Next Year Predicted.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ATLANTIC CITY, July 10.—An invasion of European motor car drivers next year is predicted by J. M. Hewitt, president of the Atlantic City motor speedway. Hewitt says that many of Europe's best drivers will bring special cars to this country for entry in the American speedway events, beginning with the 500-mile Indianapolis race.

Here is the story, which may or may not be over enthusiastically related:

"Recently certain famous Europeans have come over ostensibly to race here, but it is now known that they had little intention of trying to win, their main purpose being to study American racing methods which are greatly different from European.

"Some of them may compete in the Sesqui-Centennial race of the Atlantic City Speedway on July 17, but the big attack will be made next year.

"The cars which are coming include a team of Puegeots, a Deloge, which won the European championship last year; a team of Hispano-Suizas, the first that have been turned out for racing in eight years and the first real racing Hispanos that have ever been sent to the Uited States: a Bugatti of the new type which recently won the Targe-Florio race; a Ballot and a Roland Pilain. This is the French contingent.

"England is preparing to send a team including Sunbeams, Talbots and Vauxhalls.

"Italy's entry in this invasion will consist of Fiats, Italas and Alfa-Romeos, the car which on one except the Alfa-Romeo drivers and mechanics has ever been permitted to examine.

"The list of drivers will include the great Viscaya, Rene Thomas, Count de Marguenat, who was here before but did not race; Jules Goux, Constantine and Guyot, from France.

"Bordino and Belli-Perri will drive the Fiats and Italas.

"J. G. Parry-Thomas, Seagrave and Eldridge will handle the wheels of the British racers. Parry-Thomas it was who recently drove his 400-h. p. car at the rate of 172 miles per hour on a beach on the shore of Wales.

"The only German driver whose coming is known in advance is Loudenschlager, who will probably drive a French car due to the edit of the German Government forbidding a German racing car to leave the country for the next two years

"Baron de Rachewesky, the Russian champion, who drove a French Bugatti here in the opening race of the Atlantic City Speedway, will be back with his own Roland-Pilain which he has had built for American racing after learning the way of it during his last trip."

THEFT PROTECTIVE SYSTEM ADOPTED FOR STUTZ CARS

All Stutz automobiles are now protected from theft by the Fedco system whereby a special number plate is set into the instrument board of each car.

This plate is permanently fixed to the car and cannot be removed without being mutilated beyond repair or so damaging the instrument board that the injury is obvious. The plate cannot be counterfeited, nor can a single figure on it be altered without detection. Even attempts to tamper with it are immediately apparent.

In addition, the cars carrying the Fedco plates are protected by an elaborate system of police and detective agencies. A thief must risk being caught with an obviously stolen car or by removing the plate puts the car under suspicion with all who see it.

GOODRICH TIRE PRICES SUBSTANTIALLY REDUCED

A dispatch received by Charles A. Cornell, manager of the St. Louis branch of the B. F. Goodrich Co., announced a large reduction in tire prices which restores price levels of two years ago. This new lower level of prices has squeezed out the so-called price inflation and in a majority of cases Goodrich tire prices today not only match the prices of two years ago, but figure in percentage 25 per cent or more below the peak prices of last year. Motorists who use balloon tires will profit a great deal by this change in prices as the reduction in balloon tires is not only a substantial one, but insures continued economy in balloon tire equipment.

TESTS ENAMEL ELASTICITY

An ingenious machine has been devised to test the elasticity of the film on an automobile made by the use of Steelcote rubber auto enamel, for which a 28 per cent elongation, or stretch, is claimed. Two coats of the enamel are applied to a strip of zinc. Muriatic acid is used to eat away the zinc, leaving a film of enamel which is stretched in the machine until it gives way.

Road dust is made up of over 40 different substances, so to meet this condition the paint on a car must be proof against everything from water, oil and tar to acid. On the other hand, it must be flexible and elastic and so easy to apply that the amateur can get good results.

STAR SIX AVERAGES 32.7 M. P. G. ON 1711-MILE RUN

Newspaper Men Check Car on Trip From Vancouver, B. C., to Tiajuana, Mexico.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, July 10.—An average of 32.7 miles to the gallon of gasoline was made by a Star six touring car on the 1711-mile run from Vancouver, B. C., to Tiajuana, Mexico. The Star was driven by Julius Dusevoir of the engineering staff of the Star Motor Co. of California. The car was under observation throughout the run by newspapermen.

The Star was driven at average touring speeds, the distance made each day being around 250 miles. There was no night driving and speed was not held down to the point of maximum gasoline economy.

HUP PRESIDENT SEES TREND TOWARD THE STRAIGHT EIGHT

In the fine car field, the trend is undoubtedly toward eight-cylinder cars, in the opinion of Charles D. Hastings, president and general manager of the Hupp Motor Car Corporation. In support of his conclusion, Hastings points out that sales of eight-cylinder cars in 1925 more than doubled, and that more than five times as many straight eights were bought in 1925 as in 1924. Their sales to date for 1926 are more than twice their 1925 level. "Buyers last year invested more than $150,000,000 in eight-cylinder cars," he says. "This year they are actually in the process of doubling that investment, of which at least half will be for straight eights."

MAN WITH CRIPPLED LEGS NOW DRIVES AUTOMOBILE

Eddie Turner of Wichita, who lost the use of his legs in an accident in childhood, is no longer confined to his wheel chair, which for years was his only means of locomotion, and is driving his own car, a "New Day" Jewett, contracted entirely by hand.

O. G. Overturf, a salesman for the Paige distributer at Wichita, devised for him a control system, consisting of a hand lever welded to the brake pedal, which is connected with the clutch pedal by a rigid cross member. Moving the lever forward disengages the clutch, so that the gears may be shifted. Pushing the lever still farther forward applies the four-wheel brakes. With this arrangement, Turner operates the car with more than ordinary skill.

TOTAL OF 26,943 HUP CARS SHIPPED IN 6 MONTHS

With shipments of 26,943 cars in the first six months of 1926, the Hup Motor Car Corporation broke all its sales records. Both its first and second quarters were the largest in its history. Shipments in the first half of the year surpassed those in the same period in 1925 by 39 per cent and in the corresponding period in 1924 by 54 per cent. The company's shipments of cars in June had a value in excess of $7,500,000.

NOLAN REPUDIATES THE ESSEN MACHINE

Candidate for Prosecuting Attorney Says Support of Boss Is Pretended.

Repudiation of the political support of the Essen machine in the St. Louis County primaries was made in a statement issued yesterday by John A. Nolan, Republican candidate for nomination for Prosecuting Attorney.

Nolan charged that the Republican machine, headed by Fred Essen, county boss, had pretended to support him in an effort to alienate from him the voters who are opposed to the Essen faction, and by the same move bring votes to Fred E. Mueller, another Republican candidate who has twice been elected to the office in the past under Essen auspices.

"I am and will continue to be unalterably opposed to the so-called machine, the so-called Essen leadership and any other boss controlled ring, machine or faction and the influences they represent," Nolan said. "I want no support from any such source."

Nolan declared that Essen henchmen are busy working for Mueller, who is now Prosecuting Attorney, and against the Nolan interests. Nolan was an unsuccessful candidate against Mueller at the 1924 primaries in which he was opposed by the Essen machine.

"I have not retreated since then from the conviction that the county machine is responsible for the rottenness in the county," Nolan said. "And I know the machine has not retreated from its opposition to me. It is working for Mr. Mueller secretly and at the same time is hoping he will win the votes of those who are not tied up with the Republican organization."

DOUMERGUE IN A DILEMMA

French President Must Pass on Death Sentence for Woman.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 10.—President Doumergue is faced by something of a dilemma due to the death sentence passed on a woman nurse, Scierri, for killing several of the invalids whom she was attending—how many was not exactly established at her trial.

The woman was condemned to death by a jury of the Gard Department, from which the President hails. The Court of Cassation has rejected the woman's appeal, and nothing but presidential clemency now stands between her and the guillotine. The President will examine the case soon.

For her Especially for Her, You Want a Car Like This

> Here's a car to make a woman very happy.
> It's the Reo Six Special Sedan.
> It's just a little nicer, somewhat bigger, just a little more finely finished, and a bit better in every way than the price leads one to expect.
> Come in and see it and bring her with you.

The New Reo Six Special Sedan

The Reo Six Special Sedan is the finest model of America's longest-lived car.

Hidden by its charming lines and distinctive body is the same sturdy chassis, the same hushed power plant that have carried Reo into the lead in long life. Yet both have been improved here and there, as it is always Reo policy to add refinements and make changes when they have proved worthy.

No picture here could reproduce the lines, the color choices, the appointments of the Special Six Sedan.

Words of ours could not tell the story of its good looks and luxuriousness as your own eyes, the touch of your fingers to the upholstery, the relaxing ease experienced by riding and driving in it, will reveal its worth to you.

That She May Turn Balloon Tires Quickly and With Ease

With Reo Split-Second Steering you can turn balloon tires in half the time that the ordinary steering gears demand.

Some cars now require two and a half, others three complete turns of the steering wheel to turn balloon tires from extreme left position to extreme right position.

Split-Second Steering does this in one and a half turns.

Not only does this mean quicker steering in dangerous situations—it means far easier driving.

There's a deal of satisfaction in driving a car whose appearance and performance make others say, "There's a Reo"

Her Choice of Brakes

Many women do not like the usual method of applying brakes, especially in emergencies, because it means taking the eyes off the road and one hand off the steering wheel.

For them, a Reo provides Split-Second Braking Plus Standard Control. The standard control is independent of the Split-Second System, not actuated by it, but at hand for use if wanted.

Or you can have your Reo equipped with Standard Braking Control only—just as you will find it on other cars.

For the Man Who Wants HER Driving to Be Safe

A Reo is an exceptionally safe car for a woman to drive. Most noticeable to the woman who first drives a Reo is the extraordinarily easy steering, so swift and easy that only a trial can show you the truth about it.

There's the faster acting Split-Second Braking Plus Standard Control and Standard Gear Shift to make stopping, starting and driving easier.

The long springs, even distribution of weight, deep cushions, and balloon tires make Reo wonderfully comfortable to ride in.

For keeping the driver free from care, pulling through tough spots on the road, minimizing car troubles, there is the same sound Reo construction that has made Reo the longest lasting car in America.

The three extra years of life built into each Reo —for it has been proved that Reo's average life is more than three years above the average life of all American cars—means a very high re-sale or trade-in value.

That cuts down the largest single cost of owning a motor car, the loss due to depreciation.

Come in and See this Finest Model of America's Longest Lasting Automobile—and bring her with you.

How to Put in a Week In and Out of Theaters On a Visit to New York

With Baseball, the Movies, Matinees and Evening Shows the Stranger Can Keep Busy Looking for Entertainment—and Finding It. Wells Root Lays Out a Sample and Reasonably Simple Program to Follow.

By WELLS ROOT.

NEW YORK, July 10.

AN infuriated visitor wrote in last week to correct the impression that New York is the greatest summer resort in the world. We who labor in its vineyard through the heat of summer days are bound to agree with him. All the swimming holes are done in white tile and infested with uncles taking Turkish baths. Moonlight is confined to slits in the canyon tops of buildings by the roads. We have never heard of a haunted house inside the city limits.

YET since visitors insist on disturbing the sweltering peace of metropolitan days and nights with insistent cries for amusement we will endeavor to arrange a week's amusement program. We do this under protest. Schedules are the scourge of New York. Fun has to be put down in writing at least four days ahead of time. If all the engagement books and all the telephones were thrown away there would be 0,000 suicides a week. In Manhattan loneliness is the forbidden luxury.

Yet it is unfair to subject a stranger to a week in town without a list. He will be happily imposed upon by speculators, night clubs and chauffeurs. True, most strangers enjoy the imposition. They would probably be hurt to arrive and find no one glad to see them for their money alone. The list we have compiled is, itself, no outline of an inexpensive outing. There are no simple pleasures any more.

MONDAY—Sleep till noon. There is one duty which every American might just as well face and have it over with at once. That is watching Babe Ruth. Mr. Ruth knocks home runs while you wait at the Yankee Stadium every afternoon from 3:30 until 5. Mr. Ruth is, unfortunately, not infallible. It has not been figured out how many times he strikes out a season as compared with how many home runs he makes. At present, too, he is unwell. Under favorable conditions, however, he is an exhibit of the utmost importance. Monday evening we suggest "The Scandals" at the Apollo Theater. This will be expensive, and worth

TUESDAY—Sleep till noon. If this is a particularly hot day and it will be, there is nothing like an ice-cooled movie theater. The strange part of it is they really are ice cooled. The best of current pictures is "Variety," a German film, running at the Rialto. You will find that the crowds are least dense late in the afternoon.

At night take a taxi to the City College Stadium. There the Philharmonic Orchestra, with Willem von Hoogstraten conducting, gives the best performances of the best music available in Manhattan through the summer. The stadium is itself a gray and graceful oval against the stars. Except when the fire engines go by there is no flaw. Except, also, raindrops. In that case the concerts are given indoors.

WEDNESDAY — Sleep till noon. Through the afternoon there is probably no more notable amusement than "Sunny." "Sunny" has run all season and become one of the things one must inspect. Tickets $5.50 and up.

Wednesday night we ruthlessly suggest a prize fight. Perusal of the weekly lists will indicate what fights are likely to be most entertaining. If the best battle is on another evening this schedule may be rearranged accordingly. Attend one of the outdoor fights by all means. The square of harsh white light set in the center of the restless living darkness of a huge crowd is memorable. Likewise the cries from the gloom. The ecstatic climb up the back of the man directly in front of you to see the knockout is one of the rarest of moments.

THURSDAY—Sleep till noon. "Lulu Belle," the off-colored drama, gives Thursday matinees. That night "At Mrs. Beam's" will take the dark brown taste out of your mouth.

FRIDAY—Sleep till noon. This is no light command. If you summer and wander about the streets you will be so hot and irritable by nightfall that even "The Cocoanuts," a slightly insane revue with the Marx Brothers, will not divert you. During the afternoon you will have done well to see the races at Empire City.

SATURDAY—By this time you will probably be so tired you will sleep until noon without being told. That afternoon you can see "What Every Woman Knows" at the Bijou, and that night "Iolanthe" at the Plymouth. Then you may be excused.

There is one school of thought that holds a visit to Coney Island imperative. Ten years ago before the days of an amusement park in every village the trip to Coney was probably a compulsory feature of a July visit to Manhattan. It is still the largest and loudest of all tinsel cities. It is also the most crowded. It is our opinion that all good roller coasters are about the same, with the exception of the one in Salt Lake City. There the descent is made from a spot just under the moon down the lake in one horrible swoop. But women are stern in Utah. We saw one whole carload of wives, shepherded by a huge husband, descend this wicked chute without so much as a whimper. One of them even dozed off to sleep.

Golterman to Give "Carmen" August 23

"CARMEN," the colorful opera built by Bizet about Prosper Merimee's short story, will be presented in English at the Municipal Theater for one week beginning August 23 under auspices of the Grand Opera Association.

The production will be under the direction of Guy Golterman, one of the founders of the open air theater in Forest Park, and will be presented, according to advance announcements, on a scale eclipsing that of Golterman's "Carmen" of two years ago, which was one of the greatest artistic successes in the Municipal Theater's history.

Mayor Miller has been made honorary chairman of the committee. Other prominent St. Louisans will fill in the places in the Board of Governors, and will take all the boxes on opening night. Five boxes each have already been ordered by Mayor Miller, former Mayor Kiel, Edward A. Faust, Benjamin Gratz, Mrs. Newton R. Wilson, former Circuit Judge Daniel G. Taylor and Aaron Rauh.

Plans are also being made to allow the Chamber of Commerce to sponsor one night, while the Optimist Club has reserved all the boxes for Tuesday night, Aug. 24. The Real Estate Exchange has reserved a section for Friday night.

The cast, composed of Metropolitan and Chicago Civic Opera Company members will be announced within a few weeks.

FISCHER ARRANGES SCORE FOR SESQUI SPECTACLE

Frederick Fischer, associate conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, arranged the musical score, from the works of the classical composers, and also conducted the performance of the stage spectacle, "Liberty," produced for the first time Saturday night, July 3, in the Municipal Stadium, Philadelphia, for the Sesquicentennial Exposition. The spectacle employs about 5000 persons and is produced on a stage of 300 by 200 feet. R. H. Burnside is the producer. The book is by William W. Matos of Philadelphia.

The evolution of human freedom from earliest times to the fall of the Bastile forms the first section. In the second part the story of American freedom is presented. The third section is featured by the ballet of the cities, with a musical setting by Sousa. Miss Belle Story is the prima donna and De Wolf Hopper speaks the prologues.

At the Movie Houses

MISSOURI—"Padlocked" with Lois Moran, Louise Dresser and Wallace Beery. On the stage: Tom Brown and his minstrels, and John Murray Anderson's "The Grecian Urn."

GRAND CENTRAL—Conway Tearle in "The Sporting Lover" with Barbara Bedford. On the stage, "Venetian Nights."

LYRIC SKYDOME AND CAPITOL—Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes in Sir Phillip Gibbs' "High Steppers."

LOEW'S STATE—"Up in Mabel's Room" with Marie Prevost and Harrison Ford. On the stage: Irene Franklin, Rubinoff and other presentations.

NEW ST. LOUIS—"Hell-Bent for Heaven," with Patsy Ruth Miller, and five acts of vaudeville, featuring Joseph E. Howard and his "Broadcasting Revue" and Herman Berrens and Mlle. Fifi.

KINGS AND RIVOLI—Reginald Denny in "Rolling Home."

Behind the Screens

IT appears certain now that Charles Gilpin, Negro actor who starred in "The Emperor Jones," will play Uncle Tom in Universal's screen version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Contracts are to be signed this week and Mr. Gilpin will start for Universal City, Cal., within a fortnight.

Warner Bros. are completing "Broken Hearts of Hollywood" this week with a cast which includes John Barrymore, Syd Chaplin, Monte Blue, George Jessel, Irene Rich, Dolores Costello, Willard Louis, Louise Fazenda, Rin-Tin-Tin, Patsy Ruth Miller, Louise Dresser, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Jerry Miley, Stuart Holmes, Barbara Worth, George Nichols, Emile Chautard, Dick Sutherland and Anders Randolph. "Broken Hearts of Hollywood," is a dramatic version of Hollywood, its studio life and people.

Priscilla Bonner has been chosen as Harry Langdon's leading woman for his second First National feautre comedy, "The Strong Man," and still in course of production ni Hollywood.

Thomas Meighan and his "Tin Gods" company, including Director Allan Dwan, Renee Adoree, Aileen Pringle and Hale Hamilton have returned from Ausable Chasm, N. Y., where they went for several days to film exterior scenes for Meighan's latest picture.

Gilbert Roland who appeared with Clara Bow in "The Plastic Age," has been given the part of the sophisticated college boy in Bebe Daniels', "The Campus Flirt," which Clarence Badger is directing.

Lois Moran, whose first year in motion pictures proved to be a success, has been assigned one of the principal roles in "The Ace of Cads," starring Adolphe Menjou. This was announced recently at the Paramount Long Island studio, where Michael Arlen's story, adapted by Forrest Halsey will be brought to the screen under the direction of Luther Reed. Alice Joyce, who has the other important part in the Menjou film, will be seen as Miss Moran's mother.

Ruth Roland has returned to the screen. The serial queen again has succumbed to the lure of the shadow drama. Miss Roland will be seen in the cast of the June Mathis production, "The Masked Woman," directed by Balboni, in the featured part of "Dolly," an American chorus girl. Her appearance in this production will mark the first screen effort of the star for several years, her entire time of late having been occupied by the management of realty holdings, amassed during the earlier years of her screen successes.

Theatrical Calendar

MUNICIPAL THEATER—The Municipal Opera Company in Victor Herbert's operetta, "Sweethearts."

GARDEN THEATER — The Goodman Players in Shakspeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," which will be given for the second time this season.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE—"A Night in Buenos A'res," a song and dance revue with the Ramos Serenaders; seven other variety turns and "S. O. S. Perils of the Sea," a picture, with Elaine Hammerstein.

'Sweethearts' Is Municipal Theater Bill

After Highly Successful Week of "Il Trovatore" Forest Park Company Returns to Lighter Music—Garden Theater to Repeat "Midsummer Night's Dream."

THE temporary reign of grand opera at the Municipal Open-Air Theater in Forest Park will come to an end tomorrow night when the Municipal Theater Association revives Victor Herbert's operetta, "Sweethearts," as the attraction for the seventh week of the current al fresco season. This piece was previously produced by the association in 1922 and 1923.

At the Garden Theater, starting tomorrow night, the Goodman Players will remain over for another week to again present Shakspeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," which they gave delightfully a week or so ago. The coming week will end the engagement here of this organization and the following week the Garden Theater will be given over to "Varieties," a musical and dance revue.

TOMORROW night's performance will mark the return of the association's light opera cast to the Forest Park stage. In "Sweethearts" roles are provided for the nine principals—Dorothy Maynard, Irene Dunne, Bernice Mershon, Robinson Newbold, Thomas Conkey, Edward Molitore, Detmar Poppen, William McCarthy and Roland Woodruff—and also for eight members of the chorus.

"Sweethearts" was originally written expressly for Christie McDonald when "The Spring Maid" had outlived its usefulness as a starring vehicle for the noted prima donna. The prolific Smith Brothers—Harry B. and Robert B.—were detailed to write a new libretto and with the aid of Fred de Gresac, they concocted a plot from the sixteenth century adventures of a certain Princess Jeanne of Navarre, but modernized the story by fixing the locale in the city of Bruges and the time, in the year 1910. The first performance of the operetta took place at the Academy of Music in Baltimore March 24, 1913, and was presented in New York the following September at the New Amsterdam Theater. It remained a full season on Broadway and served to entertain the rest of America through the two following years. The piece has always been a favorite with light opera repertory companies and when presented at the Municipal Opera it ranked with the leaders in gate receipts and attendance.

A week from tomorrow night "Iolanthe," the only Gilbert and Sullivan piece in this summer's repertory, will be offered at the Municipal Theater.

AMERICAN JAZZ HAS ITS VALUE, FRENCH VIOLINIST SAYS

Jacques Thibaut Declares It Is Art for Which Works That Will Last Can Be Written.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 10.—Jacques Thibaut, violinist, has returned from his last American tour with a high opinion of American taste in music compared with 15 years ago. It is no longer possible, he says, to offer a program of mediocre works. He, like Messager, tells the French they know nothing of jazz, and that in condemning it they condemn a thing they have not really heard.

"The reputation of the American as a lover of no music but jazz," he says, "is as false as such generalizations always are.

"But don't scoff at jazz. We in France don't know what it really is, we judge by inferior specimens.

"The day I arrived in New York, I heard Paul Whiteman's orchestra interpret 'Circus,' a work specialty written for him by a great symphonist, Deems Taylor. You cannot imagine what new and exquisite sounds it gave. Its orchestration is admirable. Like everything done with taste and entrusted to great artists, it has its value.

"Jazz is an art for which works that will last can be written."

Apollo Club Wants More Singers.

At a meeting of the officers of the Apollo Club, held yesterday at the Jefferson Hotel, policies of the club for the season 1926-27 were outlined, and the secretary authorized to announce that there were a number of vacancies in the ranks of the club. Several first and second tenors are needed. Applications to fill these vacancies may be made by writing to the president of the club, L. E. Young, room 400, Union Electric Co., or to the secretary, Scott R. de Kins, 511 Locust street, after which applicants will be notified where to appear for the testing of their voices by the Music Committee, of which Charles Galloway is the chairman.

ST. LOUIS ARTISTS AT THE STATE FAIR

Exhibit of 100 Works Prepared by Art League for Exhibition at Sedalia, Mo.

An exhibit of 100 paintings and other works by St. Louis artists has been arranged by the St. Louis Art League for the Missouri State Fair, Sedalia, next month. This exhibit is now installed for an advance review at the Public Library, Thirteenth and Olive streets, where it will be on free public display during July.

Among the pictures are "Mist Dreams," by Prof. Edmund H. Wuerpel; "Birches," by Gustav F. Goetsch; "Departing Morning Mist," a harbor scene by the same artist; "The Blue Mirror" and "Ipswich Village," by Kathryn Cherry; "Fishing Boats," by Carl G. Waldeck; "Autumn," by Edward A. Luchtemeyer; "Autumn in the Ozarks," by Frank Nuderscher; "Winter Cold," by Paul Berdanier; "Winter," by William Bauer; "Midsummer," by Robert Wright; "Forest Park Idyl," by Blanche Skrainka, a still life by Tom P. Bernett, a figure picture by Warren Ludwig.

Apparently a liberal selection of paintings will be in the running for the purchase prize of $250 offered by the State Fair Board for a picture to be added to the permanent State art collection of Missouri. This feature was started with the selection of a picture by Tom Barrett from last year's Art League exhibit. Besides this, there are offered at Sedalia prizes of $75, $50 and $25 for art work.

The St. Louis artists to be represented at Sedalia, besides those named, include Fred Rushing Roe, F. H. W. Wooldych, Paula Fenske, Takuma Kajiwari, Fred G. Carpenter, Oscar Thalinger, Philip A. SPHINX RESTORED AND CHANGED IN APPEARANCE

Head Patched, Neck Reinforced and Flanks, Legs and Paws Exposed to View.

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News.

CAIRO, Egypt., June 10.—Work on the Sphinx is now complete. The head has been patched up, the shoulders and neck reinforced and the whole of flanks, legs and paws exposed from the sand which hid them for 100 years. It is a strange Sphinx, immaculate and almost indecently exposed, which faces the visitor now. Part of the grandeur and mystery undoubtedly is gone. Formerly only the giant head rose from a shroud of sand. Now the whole thing looks like a statue.

F. G. DAVIE INSPECTS LOCAL SCOUT OFFICE

E. W. Beckman of St. Louis Chosen Business Manager of National Conference.

Fred G. Davie, former Associate Scout Executive of St. Louis, and now Regional Executive of Region 8, Boy Scouts, which includes Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Arkansas, returned to St. Louis last week to inspect the local office and confer with Scout Executive Earle W. Beckman on matters pertaining to the Fourth National Biennial Conference of the Boy Scouts of America at Hot Springs, Ark., September 22 to 29.

The conference will be one of the largest ever held by the organization. Several thousand Scout officials from all over the United States and some foreign countries are expected to attend, including 1000 delegates from almost every city in the country with a population of 25,000 or more. Through the efforts of President Clarence Howard, President L. W. Baldwin of the Missouri Pacific, and Beckman, arrangements have been made for a majority of the delegates to proceed to Hot Springs by way of St. Louis, spending one day here and one day at the Scout Camp at Irondale, Mo.

Beckman Chosen Business Manager.

Beckman will represent the eighth Region on the Executive Board of the Conference Committee, and has also been appointed business manager for the conference.

In addition to matters incidental to this meeting, Davie outlined with Beckman plans for the National Training School for Scout Executives, to be held at the Irondale camp from August 28 to Sept. 21. Approximately 200 men, representing nearly every state in the union, will be present at this camp, qualifying themselves for positions as Scout Executives in the various cities throughout the country.

Some of the leading educators on the National Office staff will be members of the faculty of the school, including Dr. John H. Finley, associate editor of the New York Times; Drs. E. K. Fretwell and B. Smith of Columbia University, James E. West, chief scout executive of the Boy Scouts of America; Ray O. Wyland, educational director of the organization, and others, not yet selected, but who will be of national prominence.

Railroad Aids Scout Work.

After a conference with O. J. Williams, Missouri Pacific scout executive, who, through the courtesy of the railway, has been made available for the purpose of organizing Boy Scout troops in the towns along their lines. Davis congratulated the railroad on at least one outstanding accomplishment through the organization of these troops.

"In promoting this work," he said, "the railway is bringing to the attention of the other railroads of the country the possibilities of a new plan for promoting safety. Heretofore it has been the policy of railroads to have their safety engineers spend much time and money telling boys to stay off their depot platforms and box cars—in other words saying what they should not do. But President Baldwin has reversed the situation, and is now sending Williams up and down the lines telling boys what to do, by organizing Boy Scout troops, and the records of the Missouri Pacific Railroad show that the new plan is bearing worthwhile results."

Girl Scouts to Conduct Day Camp Near Clayton

Sycamore Hollow to Be Open From 9:30 A. M. to 4 P. M. for Nature Study and Campcraft.

A new Day Camp furnishing a place for outings for every one of the 1200 Girl Scouts in St. Louis will be opened next Wednesday by the local Council at Sycamore Hollow, on the country estate of Mrs. Hugh McKittrick, on the McKnight road west of Clayton. The purpose of the camp is to supplement the regular week camp at Jefferson Barracks, Aug. 9 to Sept. 6, which is not large enough to accommodate all of the girls, and to enable the girls to make outdoor trips during July as well as August.

The camp will be open from 9:30 o'clock in the morning to 4 o'clock in the afternoon every day except Sundays and Mondays from July 14 to Aug. 1. Girls wishing to attend are supposed to meet at the Skinker boulevard end of the Clayton car line, where chaperones will be ready to conduct them to the camp, at 9 o'clock. They will arrive at Sycamore Hollow at 9:30 a. m.

Will Undertake Project Work.

After an opening ceremony, the girls will be divided into patrols, and project work will be undertaken. The projects include pioneering, under Miss Margaret Taylor, hiking and nature study under Miss Eleanor Piper, and campcraft and work in first-class scouting under Miss Mary Clark. Following this will be an hour devoted to special woodcraft work.

After lunch, which must be brought individually, an hour will be devoted to stories and songs. This will be followed by "Hobby Hour," for which several surprises have been planned, and which will be occupied by the girls following subjects of their own choosing. The remainder of the afternoon will be given over to games and stunts.

Although the camp does not open officially until Wednesday morning, a meeting of the St. Louis Girl Scout Leaders' Association will be held there Tuesday evening, in order that the officials may familiarize themselves with the site. As one of the purposes of the camp is to give the leaders a place to bring their troops for troop meetings and hikes, this first survey will be made that they may plan their future trips more intelligently. An outdoor supper will be served. Reservations for this must be in to local headquarters before noon Tuesday.

Troops coming in a body, with their captain or lieutenant, will not be subject to the regular camp program unless they so wish.

Day Camp Idea Is New.

The idea of a Day Camp for Girl Scouts is new, St. Louis being one of the first large cities to follow the lead of Providence, R. I., where the plan originated last year. One of the reasons Miss Piper, the local director, attended the local directors' training camp the last three weeks, was to confer with the eastern officials about conducting a camp of this type, and to study the methods used in the few towns which already have them.

The use of the site has been donated by Mrs. McKittrick, who is on the local council, for use when wished, and Mrs. Frank Mayfield, who lives nearby, has promised to furnish water for the campers.

Miss Eleanor Piper, director of the St. Louis and County Girl Scouts, returned last Monday from a three weeks' stay at the Local Directors' School at Camp Edith Macy, New York. The school was conducted by National Girl Scout Headquarters to help the leaders improve the Girl Scout work in their localities. About 30 women and girls from all over the United States and Porto Rico attended.

Miss Natalie Tirrell, assistant local director of Orange, N. J., returned with Miss Piper. Miss Tirrell will have charge of the Nature Study work at the Girl Scout camps at Sycamore Hollow and Jefferson Barracks this summer.

Arrowhead Troop 7 met on the lawn of Miss Eckelman, their captain, a week ago Friday, making a campfire and roasting weiners and marshmallows. The girls gave a party in honor of Conia Troop 56 last Friday.

Troop 43 is negotiating for a camp site near Normandy, and plans to mage a several days' stay there the latter part of the month. To obtain something toward the expenses of the camp, the troop held a cake sale recently, clearing $4.79. All cakes were baked by the girls.

'FORD OF THE RADIO' ON ST. LOUIS VISIT

Powel Crosley Jr. Predicts Great Growth of Industry Through Service to Farmer.

Indications point to 1926-7 being the biggest season in the radio industry, according to Powel Crosley Jr., president of the Crosley Radio Corporation of Cincinnati, who will make a tour of some of the cities in the Middle-West, in the coming week. He will be the guest of five local campanies during his brief stay in St. Louis tomorrow. He will address distributors, dealers and representatives at the Mayfair Hotel.

The great interest in radio may be gauged by the fact that during the year 1925 the American public spent $500,000,000 for radio receiving sets, or 10 times the amount spent for that purpose in 1922. A big portion of these sets were purchased in the great Middle Western states.

"This ten-fold increase within three years gives an idea of the rapidity with which the nation is adopting the radio as a means of education and entertainment," said Crossley in a recent interview.

"No other factor in our present-day civilization has gained such wide popularity in such a brief time as has the radio.

"As an example, take the automobile, which is regarded by many as the wonder of the age—a thing of marvelous growth. Statistics compiled by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce show that during the fifth year of the automotive industry, 3200 automobiles were operated in the United States.

"The radio industry is five years old and 5,000,000 receiving sets now are being used throughout the country. In other words, at the end of the first five-year periods in the respective industries, radio and automotive, there were 1562 radio receiving sets in operation for every automobile.

"And the end is not in sight because the field for radio receiving sets merely has been scratched. The 25,000,000 families in the United States maintain 18,000,000 automobiles and yet have only 5,000,000 radio sets. The next few years will witness a remarkable change in the latter figure.

"This will come about not only through the growing popularity of the radio as a means of entertainment, but through its economic value to the farmer. At present farmers are using only a half-million receiving sets. They are learning, however, that a radio set may be of as great dollars and cents importance as their farm machinery."

BROADCAST OF PAGEANT A BIG RADIO EVENT

Seven Stations in Southwestern Chain Aided in Celebration of Missouri Pacific Diamond Jubilee.

What is said to have been the largest chain of Middlewest and Southwest broadcasting stations ever used on a similar occasion was "hooked up" in connection with broadcasting the remote control from Washington University stadium here on the night of July 5 of "Service—A Pageant of Progress," an historical spectacle presented by 1000 employes of the Missouri Pacific lines. Telegraphic reports received here indicate that the entire two-hour program was handled without interruption and was put on the air at each of the seven broadcasting stations with exceptional clarity and technical excellence.

Stations included in the Middlewest and Southwest chain were KSD, St. Louis; WDAF, Kansas City; WBAP, Fort Worth, WOAI, San Antonio, KPRC, Houston, WMC, Memphis, and WOAW, Omaha.

Direction of broadcasting was handled by Gerald Chatfield, program manager of Station WEAF, New York, while announcing and interpretation of the pageant pantomime sections, was the work of James Haupt, assistant musical director of the same station. Both Mr. Chatfield and Mr. Haupt spent several days here making preliminary preparations for handling the program from Washington University stadium, where complete pick-up and control equipment was installed and thoroughly tested before July 5.

Owing to the immense size of the stage and to the fact that speeches and musical numbers which were to be broadcast had to be picked up from widely varying places, an intricate system of microphone locations and switchings had to be worked out. Nine microphones were used, some of which were portable, being placed in their proper locations during the scene shifting by means of cords and attachment plugs situated in the floor of the stage. Placing portable microphones was a touch-and-go proposition and their handling was "cued" just as were the entrance of actors. One difficult problem which was solved, and which illustrates the unusual manner in which the microphones were handled was the broadcasting of a Negro quartet of cotton pickers who sang from back-stage, surrounded by a large group of pickaninnies. It was impossible to keep the pickaninnies from knocking over the microphones in rehearsal, so a member of the broadcasting staff was made up in black-face and a Negro costume so that he might mingle with the characters unnoticed. At the proper instant he plugged in his two "mikes" and held them on his knees during rendition of the quartet numbers. Another unusual microphone location was necessary in connection with Helen Gould's address delivered from the observation platform of her private car, the car moving off the stage at the close of the scene.

The stage was connected by two telephone circuits with the seven broadcasting stations. One circuit served the station direct, with an emergency or co-ordinating line held in readiness in case of mishap or necessity. The remote control and transmission arrangements were carefully worked out under the direction of H. C. Read, special service supervisor for the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. of New York, and a corps of five assistants.

The direct telephone communication from the stage at Washington University to the seven broadcasting stations aggregated 2500 wire miles, which with the co-ordinating line of the same length made a total of 5000 miles. A Morse telegraph wire which also connected the stage with every radio station used increased this wire mileage to approximately 7500 miles. Special service men from the American and Southwestern Bell Telephone and Telegraph companies were stationed at various points along the route of the seven circuits in order to maintain the highest point of efficiency in transmission.

The largest control installation ever used on a similar event was housed in an especially constructed building erected on one wing of the stage. One-half of this building was occupied by the radio control equipment, while the other side held the public address system control apparatus. Seated at a table directly to the edge of the stage near the control station, but obscured from the audience, Mr. Chatfield directed the fading in and out of the various microphones, while Mr. Haupt, through the announcer's microphone, and using the music and songs as a background, painted on the air word-pictures of the pantomime, completely describing the pageant as it progressed step by step.

As an example of the difficulties under which they worked, and the care with which the signalling system was worked out, the manner in which the "interpreter" was put on the air is interesting. The "interpreter" was, so to speak, the historian of the pageant. He was seated high in the air to one side and in front of the stage, and could neither see the stage nor be seen from it. Proceeding each episode he explained the significance of the scene to follow. His cue from the stage director was the spotlight, which was thrown upon him, although this cue did not always coincide with the broadcasting cue. A signal circuit installed by Mr. Chatfield, and also controlled by him from his station on the stage, flashed a tiny red light in an obscured position near the interpreter's chair, indicating that the microphone was cut in.

Special precautions were taken in arranging the public address horns which conveyed the spoken part of the program to the audience of some 20,000 persons seated in the stadium. Operation of the public address amplifiers at the front of the stage was handled in such manner as not to conflict with the broadcasting microphones, a series of preliminary tests and adjustments being made prior to the pageant performance to insure against interference between the two systems.

As a further insurance against mishap, and to prevent disappointment of the entire seven radio broadcasting stations and their countless thousands of hearers, the Missouri Pacific Lines provided an auxiliary station in the gymnasium room of Washington University from which the program could be handled in case of adverse weather conditions. Fortunately, prevailing weather conditions on the night of July 5 were very favorable for broadcasting.

Interpretation of the pageant pantomime sections, although difficult at times because of their exacting historical nature, was handled by Mr. Haupt through a careful perusal of the pageant script, the unspoken parts being filled in with the spoken word to illustrate the part being presented.

Officials of the Missouri Pacific Lines in charge of the pageant production, which depicted in a most vivid manner the growth and development of the Middle West and Southwest, country served by rails of that system, were highly pleased with the success of the chain broadcasting accomplishment. Hundreds of telegrams and letters from all sections of the South, Middle West and Southwest, in which the program was highly complimented, were received at the general offices of the Missouri Pacific Lines here and at Station KSD.

TWO ARTISTS IN CONCERT

In the Atwater Kent concert tonight Edmund Burke, bass baritone, formerly with the Metropolitan Opera Company, will sing as guest artist with Allen McQuhae. The Atwater Kent Orchestra will play the accompaniments under the direction of Nicholai Berezowsky, conductor.

The program will be broadcast through Station KSD and eight other connected stations at 7:15 p. m., Central time, as follows:

Opening air, Mr. McQuhae and orchestra.

Invictus (Huhn), Mr. Burke and orchestra.

Vale (Kennedy-Russell), Mr. McQuhae and orchestra.

Great Awakening (Kramer), Mr. Burke and piano.

"Ombra 'mai fu" (Largo), Haendel, Mr. McQuhae and orchestra.

Duet: "Solenne in quest Ora" (Swear in This Hour), Verdi, Mr. McQuhae, Mr. Burke and orchestra.

"Now the Day Is Over" (Barnby).

Dust Checks Efficiency of a Set.

Dust in a radio set is often the cause of a large loss in efficiency. This is especially true in wet weather, when the dust becomes damp and allows the feeble currents to leak. The worst place for dust to be allowed to collect is about binding posts and terminals and between the plates of rotary variable condensers. It may be removed from between wires and around terminals with a small brush about two inches wide. Use pipe cleaners, the same as employed for cleaning the stems of ordinary pipes, for removing dust from between condenser plates and from otherwise inaccessible places. Make a rule to clean the set as often as once a month.

RADIO SALES IN ENGLAND

The sale of high-grade radio parts of American manufacture has increased considerably in England. There is a growing desire among British electrical dealers to become agents for American radio manufacturers, according to H. D. Butler, Acting Commercial Attache, London.

A wider range of programs is wanted in England, also, including more news and matters of an educational nature, as well as entertainment and sports. It also was pointed out that there should be some central agency with powers to deal with technical matters and to regulate special wave lengths for different subjects.

The British are awake to the vast possibilities of broadcasting, and figures presented at the hearing showed that already 10,000,000 persons listened to the services now being provided, and that 85 per cent of the population of the British Isles could listen in on the simplest of receiving sets. Reduction of the number of stations, on account of the wave length question, and operation of the others over much wider areas were suggested.

Correct Filament Voltage.

A vacuum tube will not be destroyed if the voltage is too low, but there is danger when this voltage is too high. Therefore, the correct filament voltage as called for by the manufacturer should be applied to the tubes. The type used for radio frequency amplification does not require burning as bright as those used for audio frequency amplification. In the former case they should get the correct filament voltage for best results, and this will depend on the wave length the set is adjusted to. The longer wave lengths usually require the radio frequency tubes to be burned a little brighter.

MUNROE'S MOTIVE IN BUYING LACLEDE STOCK DEFENDED

Brief Filed With State Commission Says Chicagoan Made Purchase as Investment.

PLAN TO INFLATE VALUE IS DENIED

Company Contends It Would Cost More Than $70,000,000 to Replace Local Equipment.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 10.—A defense of Charles A. Munroe, chairman of the board of the Laclede Gas Light Co. of St. Louis, is contained in a brief filed by the company's counsel here today before the State Public Service Commission, which will place a valuation on the company's properties for the purpose of determining rates to consumers in St. Louis.

The city, on June 24, told the commission that the valuation should not exceed $40,000,000 and argued that the company sought a $70,000,000 valuation in order to increase the speculative profits of Munroe, who, with others, purchased a working control of the gas company in 1924. The reply brief filed today insists upon a valuation of not less than $70,000,000, and says:

"Counsel for the city has laid stress upon the fact that Mr. Munroe is and has been since 1896 a resident of Chicago, Illinois. That is true. But is a diversity of citizenship ground for injustice?

"They charge him with being a speculator. That statement is wholly unsupported by the evidence in the record.

Counsel Called Reckless.

"They say he instigated these proceedings for some purpose of his own. That statement is so obviously untrue as to indicate that counsel have either grown reckless in their desire to inject prejudicial matter into the case, or are wholly ignorant of the record of the case during the eight years which it has been pending.

"They have insinuated that Mr. Munroe's purchase was not made for the purpose of acquiring an investment and enabling him to help in the management and development of the property, but that he bought with the idea of having a large value established for the property and then selling out his holdings at a profit and 'moving on.' These statements and insinuations with respect to Mr. Munroe's purposes are not only unjust and unfair to him, but they are entirely refuted by the record. Mr. Munroe testified:

"'All my life I have been interested—in all my buisens life—in the purchase of gas and electric properties. I am still an owner in the first one I ever purchased. I have never sold but one property and in that I am stockholder, and this investment in this stock was made for the sole purpose of furnishing an investment. There has been no disposition or intention to sell this property. I made the investment for the purpose of keeping it and so did my associates.'"

Four Points Claimed.

The brief, filed by the law firm of Taylor, Chasnoff & Willson, St. Louis, continues:

"We think that the record in this case conclusively establishes the following propositions:

"1. That it would cost more than $70,000,000 to reproduce the properties of the Laclede Gas Light Co. used and useful in the public service as of Sept. 30, 1925.

"2. That the original cost of these properties cannot be accurately ascertained.

"3. That estimates of the original cost of these properties are not useful as a guide to their present fair value, in view of the enormous changes in construction costs since the properties were originally built.

"4. That the condition and operating efficiency of the properties are such as to make these properties just as valuable as new reproductions of them would be.

"5. That the present fair value of these properties is not less than $70,000,000."

History of Syndicate.

The circumstances under which a syndicate headed by Munroe bought control of Laclede Gas are reviewed as follows:

"The city contends that the fact that Laclede Gas and Electric Co., a holding company, of which Charles A. Munroe, chairman of the board of directors of the Laclede Gas Light Co., is president, purchased in May, 1924, certain shares of stock—less than a ma-

STUDENTS' AUTOS BARRED BY ILLINOIS U.

Order, Sent to Parents, Says Cars Lower Scholastic and Moral Standing.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL., July 10.—The Council of Administration at the University of Illinois, declaring that the operation of automobiles lowers the scholastic standing of students, causing constant and serious waste of time, and contributes to moral delinquences, has adopted a new rule which will bar student automobiles at the university, starting Sept. 1. The only exceptions will be those who hold permits from the council.

Five reasons for barring cars are cited in a letter being mailed by the council to the parents and guardians of all students scheduled to re-enter school this fall, and to those prospective freshmen students who are applying for admission.

The reasons advanced are:

"The scholastic standing maintained by the majority of students owning or operating automobiles has been below the average scholastic standing of the University.

"The owning of automobiles has involved a constant and serious waste of time.

"There have been numerous accidents involving considerable damage and serious bodily injury.

"There are constant violations of local and State laws governing motor traffic and a wholly unnecessary and dangerous congestion of traffic in streets adjacent to the campus.

"The use of cars has contributed to moral delinquencies which have resulted in the dismissal from the university of the students concerned."

The letter declares "students in general have absolutely no need for an automobile during their residence in the university" and further points out the fact that at the beginning of the school year for the last three years a letter to parents and guardians has referred to the dangers involved in students having cars, but that conditions have caused the council reluctantly to come to the belief that it is necessary to pass the regulation which it has adopted.

Sir John Foster Dead.

By the Associated Press.

ROSTREVOR, County Down, Ireland, July 10.—Lieutenant-Colonel Sir John Foster George Ross-of-Blandensburgn, K. C. B., K. C. V. O., is dead at the age of 78. He served in the Egyptian campaign in 1885, was aid-de-camp to Earl Spencer and Earl Carnarvon, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, from 1882 to 1885, and chief commissioner of the Dublin metropolitan police from 1901 to 1914.

MUNROE'S MOTIVE IN BUYING LACLEDE STOCK DEFENDED

jority—in the Laclede Gas Light Co. at about par, is some evidence of the present fair value of the company's property. The company contends that that purchase was of such a character and made under such circumstances as to have no relation whatever to the present fair value of the company's property.

"The facts, as disclosed by the record, are these: About the time stated Laclede Gas and Electric Co. purchased through Harriman & Co., New York brokers, 58,813 shares of the common stock of the Laclede Gas Light Co., out of a total issue of 107,000 shares, at $104¾ per share, and 434 shares of the preferred stock out of a total issue of 25,000 shares, at about $85 per share.

Stock Bought From Dividends.

"The purchase of these shares was made by the brokers from hundreds of stockholders scattered throughout the country, each acting independently and without any consideration at all on the part of the sellers of the value of the property of the company.

"The price which was paid to the stockholders who sold their common stock was offered to the holders of the remaining 48,187 shares of the par value of $4,818,700, but they declined to sell.

"The private purchase by the Laclede Gas and Electric Co. of the holdings of the minority stockholders certainly cannot be made to bind or in any way affect the company or the holdings of the other stockholders. Such would be the effect of the city's contention."

Stock Now Sells for $160.

The $40,000,000 valuation proposed by the city coincides almost exactly with the price at which Munroe and four or five out-of-town associates obtained control of the gas company in 1924. The city estimates a rate of $1.40 a thousand cubic feet of gas in St. Louis, compared with the present rate of $1, would be required to yield the company a fair return on a valuation in excess of $74,000,000, which the company has previously claimed. The company disavows any intention of asking for a rate based upon that valuation. However, a $74,000,000 valuation would make it difficult ever to reduce the price of gas over the company's objection.

Laclede Gas stock now is selling over $160 a share. If Munroe and his associates could sell on a basis of $74,000,000 valuation, their stock would be worth $350 a share, which would yield them a speculative profit of many millions of dollars.

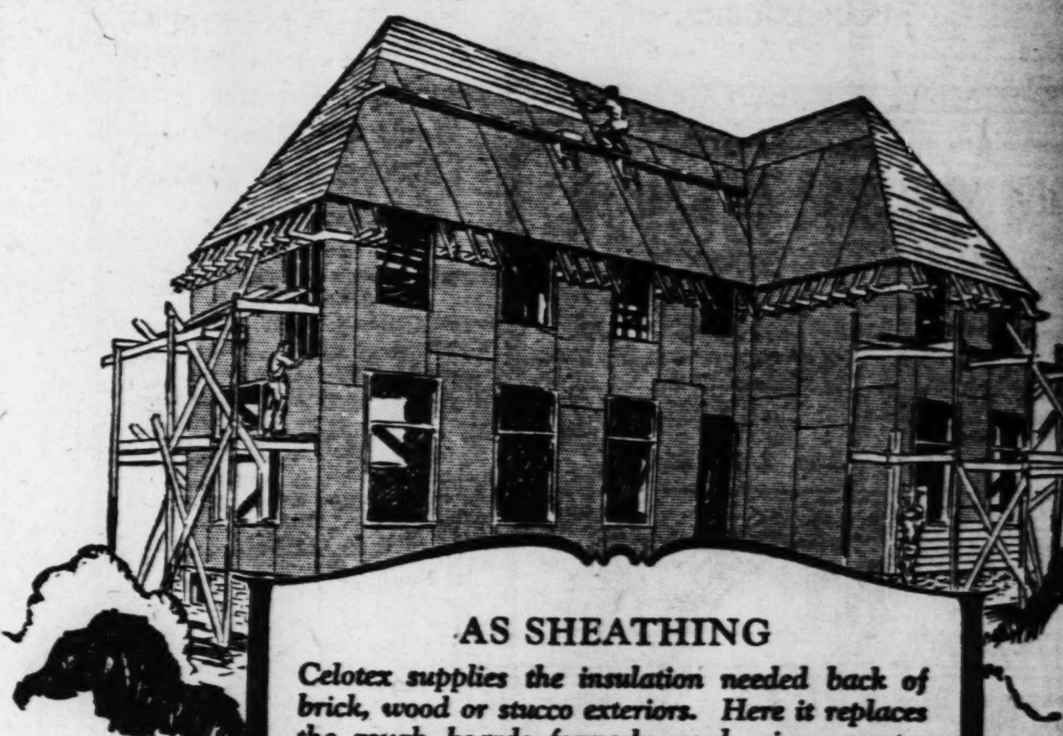
Amazing Lumber

{NOT CUT FROM TREES}

As sheathing . . .
provides insulation at no extra building cost
. . . many other uses



AS SHEATHING

Celotex supplies the insulation needed back of brick, wood or stucco exteriors. Here it replaces the rough boards formerly used, gives greater strength to the house walls and makes building paper unnecessary.

NO home built today need be too hot in summer, too cold in winter, noisy, damp, or wasteful of fuel!

An amazing heat-stopping lumber now enables you to enjoy the great comforts and advantages of insulation without adding one cent to building cost.

Its success has been tremendous. More than 90,000 homes have been erected with it. Everywhere, progressive builders are adopting it. They say it has set a new standard of American building practice.

This amazing lumber is Celotex. It is not cut from trees, but is manufactured from the long, tough fibres of cane into broad, strong boards. Thus, unlike ordinary insulation, Celotex is not an extra item in building. It insulates while it builds . . . insulates better . . . builds stronger walls.

AS SHEATHING (the boards that cover the outside of the house framework) Celotex simply replaces the rough wood lumber formerly used. Here, it provides the insulation needed back of wood siding, shingle, brick or stucco exteriors at no added building cost.

It gives you very important advantages over wood sheathing.

In addition to providing insulation, Celotex makes your house stronger. A wall sheathed with Celotex is many times more rigid than one sheathed with wood lumber.

This is because Celotex is applied in broad boards which afford a greater angle of bracing than the narrow wood lumber.

It saves labor costs, too. The big, broad boards are easier and quicker to apply than wood sheathing. No special tools or extra framing are needed. Any type of exterior finish may be applied over Celotex.

OTHER USES. Elsewhere, Celotex costs a trifle more than ordinary construction, at first, but is a great economy.

Under plaster, replacing lath, it costs a few cents more per yard, but gives added insulation, greater strength, and less upkeep expense because of no lath-marks, fewer cracks.

Moreover, with the walls and roof of your house covered with Celotex, a smaller, less expensive heating plant and smaller radiators will keep you comfortable.

And year after year, Celotex will save from 25% to 35% of your fuel bill.

NEW COMFORT for old homes. In houses already built, a big measure of this comfort and economy is being secured by lining attics and basements with Celotex. That helps a lot and costs but little. These great advantages are available for everyone who builds or buys a home right now!

IF YOU ARE GOING TO BUILD talk with your architect, contractor or lumber dealer about Celotex. Leaders in these lines advise its use. All lumber dealers can supply it.

IF YOU ARE GOING TO BUY see that Celotex is used before you put any money into a house. Now that Celotex has made insulation practical, heat-leaking houses are a poor investment. The authorities say that such houses are becoming obsolete: hard to sell, rent or borrow money on.

Meanwhile, send for the free Celotex Building Book. It explains fully this great improvement in building. Just mail the coupon below.

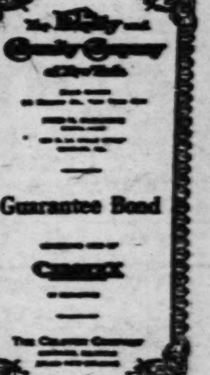
NOW . . . Celotex Houses are BONDED!

To help buyer and seller, this Gold Bond is issued to prove that insulating lumber was used.



A nation-wide demand has come for insulation, now that Celotex has made insulation practical. People refuse to put up with living in old-time heat-leaking houses. They want the new standard of home comfort and economy which Celotex brings.

But Celotex is usually hidden in the walls and roof.

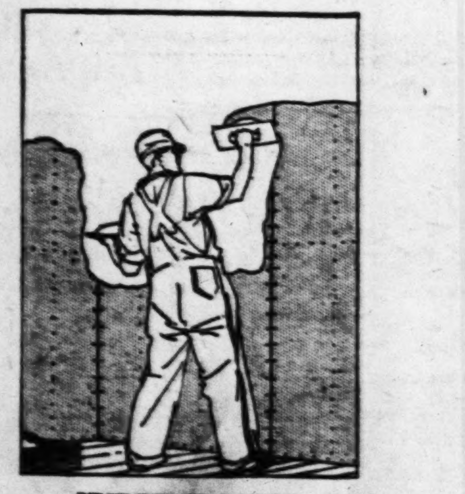
To protect the buyer . . . to assist the seller . . . to provide insulation evidence for every owner to use in transferring property or transacting loans, The Celotex Company now issues a Gold Bond, signed and sealed by the Fidelity and Casualty Company of New York—a certain guarantee!

Before buying a house or any building ask to see this bond.

Before building arrange with your lumber dealer to supply it to you.

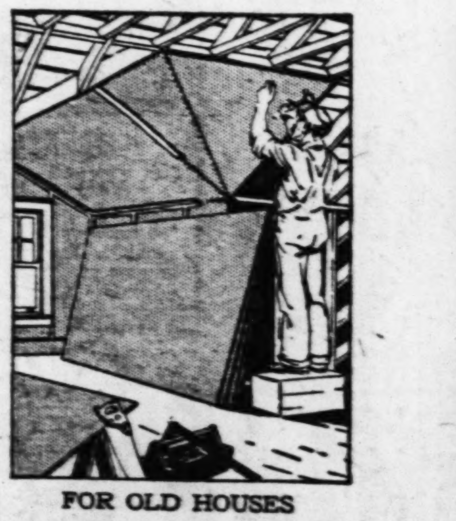
Some day it will prove very valuable. For it will prove to buyer or banker that your house provides all the comforts and economies of Celotex insulation . . . winter-warmth . . . summer-coolth . . . easy and economical heating . . . protection against wind and dampness, colds and sickness.

And a few years from now, unless your house is insulated it will be far below the standard—out-of-date, hard to sell, rent or borrow money on.



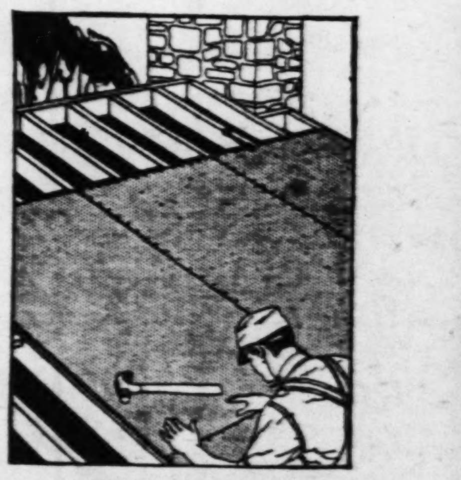
UNDER PLASTER

On inside walls and ceilings, plaster is applied directly to the surface of Celotex. This eliminates the use of lath and gives stronger, insulated walls: less apt to crack and free from lath-marks.



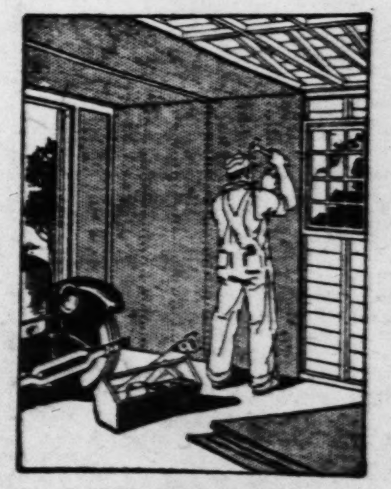
FOR OLD HOUSES

In homes already built, a big measure of Celotex comfort and economy may be secured by lining attics and basements with it. In the attic an extra finished room can be made by nailing Celotex to the roof rafters. In the basement line the ceiling with Celotex.



IN THE ROOF

Most heat beats into houses through roofs in summer, causing hot attics. Most heat leaks out through roofs in winter, causing high fuel bills. Celotex applied over or under roof rafters gives the needed protection. Both uses are recommended.



FOR GARAGES

The heat of your car itself, after running, will keep a Celotex garage warm unless the weather is way below zero. It costs but little to build a garage of Celotex; and anyone can line a garage already built, quickly and easily, as shown here.

A nation-wide demand has come for insulation, now that Celotex has made insulation practical. People refuse to put up with living in old-time heat-leaking houses. They want the new standard of home comfort and economy which Celotex brings.

NEGRO SPIRITUALS FALL FLAT

Audience in Pekin, China, Fails to React to Such Ditties.

By the Associated Press.

PEKIN, July 10.—Negro songs and sentimental ballads of Grandmother's day find little appreciation in China, if the reception given Miss Mary Jordon's offerings is an indication.

The largest audience that has assembled here for a musical event in many months was cold to the American contralto's Negro spirituals and American folk songs. The metropolitan audience granted that she has a beautiful voice, but it couldn't react to "Waterboys," "Deep River" and other songs.

'MESSAGE' FROM LATE CZAR

Psychic Congress Reports Communication "Very Interesting."

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 10.—The recent session of the International Psychic Congress in Paris produced a message from the "unknown" the Grand Duke Alexander of Russia being the medium, according to current report. The message, presumbaly from the late Czar, was delivered at a secret session and was stated to be "very interesting." Nothing more definite than that was announced.

The public meetings abounded in lengthy treatises on how to transform lead into gold or how to find water by means of divining rods.

BASTILE DAY SINGER

MADAME ALICE DU PERREZ.

FRENCH NATIONAL HOLIDAY TO BE OBSERVED WEDNESDAY

Program of Songs and Addresses to Be Given at Marigold Garden.

Madame Alice du Perrez, coloratura soprano, will sing "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "A Thrush's Love Song" at the celebration Wednesday night by the Associated French Societies of St. Louis at Marigold Garden, Hamilton avenue and Delmar boulevard, of the 137th anniversary of the fall of the Bastille. Mrs. Gabriel Ferrand will sing "The Marseillaise."

Among addresses following a banquet will be those of Marc Seguin, French Consul here, and Ernest A. Green, president of the St. Louis Bar Association, who will discuss French antecedents of St. Louis and the Louisiana territory. A motion picture depicting the storming of the Bastille in the French Revolution will be shown.

Afterward the assemblage will be carried in motor busses to Davis Place, in Clayton, to witness fireworks in typical French observation of the national fete day, and to dance outdoors.

PERSIAN OPIUM SURVEY COMMITTEE'S REPORT DELAYED

League of Nations' Secretarian Permits Government to Survey Board's Finding.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. Copyright, 1926.

GENEVA, July 10.—Announcement is made that the report of the special commission named to evolve a plan for reducing poppy cultivation in Persia has been delayed indefinitely as a result of the League of Nations secretariat's acquiescence in the request of the Persian Government that it be given an opportunity to scrutinize the report before it is made public.

The commission, headed by Frederic A. Delano, well-known American railway executive, and including a French agronomist and an Italian economist, toured Persia from March to July, studying the country's resources. Although under the auspices of the League of Nations, the inquiry was financed by the American Bureau of Social Hygiene. The commission hopes to complete its report before Delano sails for America on July 22, but the report will remain a secret pending Persia's decision.

The report is expected to say that Persia cannot curtail her opium production, which is drugging the world, until she is capable of marketing other revenue producing crops. Four types of public improvements, requiring outside assistance, are suggested to accomplish this result. They are:

First, highways, enabling team traffic to replace the pack trails

Second, railways, including a trunk line giving access to the Persian Gulf.

Third, extensive irrigation works, reclaiming the semi-desert portions of the country.

Fourth, introduction of modern agricultural machinery and methods.

LONDON TAKES TO JOKING FAD

Young Society Set Abandons Treasure Hunting.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 10.—London's bright but restive society people have given up the game of "treasure hunting" so popular last season, as being somewhat stale. They have substituted practical jokes as being more exciting.

The jokes being staged are quite harmless but rather elaborate and at least one has come off as the originators evolved it. This was worked successfully on a certain Cabinet Minister who met with some strange happenings on his way home from one of the leading hotels. He took it all in good part and is not even now aware that his own daughter was one of the party responsible.

MANY PRINCESSES IN LONDON

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 10. — Young Princesses from many foreign lands have been flocking to London this summer and adding much zest to the social season.

The newest arrival is Princess Kira, daughter of the Grand Duke Cyril of Russia, known as the "uncrowned Czar," who makes his home in Germany. Among the Princesses already here are Princess Ingrid of Sweden, Princess Ileana of Rumania and the Infanta Beatrice of Spain. Princess Kira is not quite 18, and is as musical as her mother, who is a cousin of King George. In St. Petersburg prior to the revolution Kira and her sister, Marie Cyrillovna, used to sing duets day after day to the wounded soldiers in the hospital.

Constipation! How to Keep Bowels Regular

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated men, women, children, and particularly old folks, had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all headaches, biliousness, indigestion and stomach misery, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even for those chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens, or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

REED AS NEWS MAKER, AND WANING POWER OF COOLIDGE, FEATURES OF 69th CONGRESS

Survey of Failures and Accomplishments of Session Just Ended and Possible Effects on Next Election.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 10.

IT was an excellent show. From the start to the battle over the World Court, through the revenue bill debate and a variegated succession of other acts, down to the fall of the curtain on the Cameron filibuster in the Senate, the first session of the Sixty-ninth Congress was a histrionic triumph.

To say that it had no dull moments would be going too far. All sessions of Congress sink at times to a level of incredible dullness. But with Jim Reed performing more brilliantly and effectively than ever before in his life, and performing in more different roles, the session just ended had an extraordinary number of dramatic scenes.

Reed was not, of course, the only factor in its artistic success, but he was the main one. The accuracy of this estimate can be tested by a glance at the front pages of any city newspaper for the last seven months. Seldom has any public man, over a similar period, been so often and so conspicuously in the headlines as Reed has been since the opening of the Congress. The coming inquiry into charges of excessive expenditure in the recent Illinois Republican primary will put him there again.

Reed, the News-Maker.

Through his speeches on the Senate floor and his work in the campaign fund and prohibition hearings, the Missouri Senator has made news—significant news—to an amazing extent.

But what of the session apart from its purely dramatic values? Was it something more than merely a good show?

In certain important respects it was a great deal more. On both the affirmative and the negative side it wrote a record that will have long-continued and far-reaching results. The five principal items were ratification of the World Court statute, with drastic reservations; the passage of the so-called nonpartisan tax bill, estimated to reduce taxes by $320,000,000 for the current fiscal year; the approval of the debt settlement agreements with Italy, Belgium and four other nations, bringing the total of the funded indebtedness of the foreign nations to $7,362,075,205; the defeat of both the McNary-Haugen and the administration plan for farm relief, and the impeachment of Federal Judge George W. English of East St. Louis.

The World Court Fight.

The World Court resolution was brought in by a Democrat and put through with the aid of Democratic votes. Reed of Missouri fought it bitterly. The two-thirds cloture rule, which had lain unused since the celebrated League of Nations fight, was invoked to bring the resolution to a vote. On the showdown 76 Senators voted for adherence to the court protocol and 17, including two Democrats, against it.

Reed, in a subsequent speech, called upon voters everywhere to "smack the heads" of those who voted for the World Court. The Court issue played some part, though a part subordinate to that of farm relief, in the Illinois primary, where Senator McKinley was defeated for the Republican nomination by an anticourt candidate. The President's failure to do anything in aid of McKinley, who had stood by him on virtually every issue, was the subject of sour comment among administration followers.

Reacting to the anticourt agitation fomented by Reed and Borah, the administration let it be known, through an inspired statement by Ambassador Houghton, that it was keeping close watch on European intrigues and did not intend to be dragged into them. Thus the President, having gained in favor among the friends of international co-operation by his support of the court proposal, tossed a sop to the other side. It was a characteristic maneuver.

Many Pressing Issues.

What effect the Court issue will have on the coming primaries and the November election remains to be seen. Senator Lenroot's pro-Court vote is being used against him in Wisconsin, but both there and elsewhere there are issues of more pressing interest.

The farm relief question, the renewed Democratic demand for tariff revision, the packing of independent agencies of Government with disciples of the Coolidge-Mellon economic theories, the use of excessive sums of money in elections—these issues and others of a domestic nature have thrust international affairs into the background.

The possibility, or even, as some competent observers believe, the probability, that the American reservations will not be accepted by the member nations has also operated to lessen interest in the Court.

The Democrats threw away an issue by joining with the Republicans to pass the Coolidge-Mellon tax bill, the chief benefits of which, as was shown on the floor of the Senate in brilliant speeches by Senator Norris, insurgent Republican, and Senator Reed of Missouri, went to taxpayers in the highest brackets. Norris estimated that the bill effected a saving of $120,500,000 in the tax of 5694 persons with incomes of $100,000 and more.

The bill reduced the maximum surtax rates from 40 to 20 per cent, cut the estate tax rate from 40 to 20 per cent, wiped out the gift tax and eliminated the publicity clause of the 1924 law. It carried also a provision, sponsored by Senator Simmons (Dem.) of North Carolina, which resulted in large refunds of the tax assessed against estates under the old law. This became known during the debate as the "Duke's Mixture amendment," because of its saving to the great estate of the late James B. Duke, the tobacco manufacturer.

In one of the memorable speeches of the session, Reed lashed his Democratic colleagues mercilessly for their "disgraceful surrender" of the taxation principles they had advocated two years before.

Reed was again at his fiery best in attacking the foreign debt settlements. His principal fight was against the $2,042,000,000 Italian settlement, which went through the House by a vote of 257 to 133 and the Senate by 54 to 33. In each branch there was larger opposition to the Italian funding agreement than to any of the others. The Mellon-Berenger arrangement for the funding of the $4,304,122,277 French debt was approved by the House, but was laid over by the Senate until the next regular session.

In Behalf of the Farmer.

Intricate political maneuvering marked the long fight over farm relief. Millions of words on the plight of the farmer were spilled into the record, but the only tangible result was the passage of a bill creating a co-operative marketing division in the Department of Agriculture—a gesture that did not allay the Western farm discontent

Politics, Crossing the Path of Religion, Brings Clash of Arms in Philippines

Melanoo Moros on the Warpath 23 Years After W. H. Taft, then Governor-General, Thought He Had Settled Their Grievances Permanently — They Understood and Were Satisfied With Military Rule, But Congress Passes Their Understanding.

Christian Office Holders Rule Mohammedan Tribesmen, Ignoring Their Ancient Customs and the Pledges the Military Ruler Gave—Story of Pigs in a School-book Causes Killing of Teachers—Humiliation of a Sultan Brings Guerilla Warfare.

FURTHER light on conditions in the Philippine Islands, a general outline of which appeared last Sunday on this page, is given in the following article just received from a special correspondent in Manila.

MANILA, P. I., June 6.

THE kris of the Malanao Moro is once again red with the blood of the hated Christian, and under the American Flag. Sultan sa Raya is on the warpath. Sultan sa Boisan is with him, with many followers, and with them are dato Ilio and Amai Kalungan.

"Gen. Wood," wrote Governor-General Taft in 1904, "sent out expeditions to march along the shores of the lake (Lanao lake), which were immediately attacked; and, thereupon, assuming the aggressive, he reduced several of their cottas and gave them a salutary and much needed lesson. These events occurred several months ago, and since that time there have been no overt acts of hostility on the part of the Moros."

Taft, adding that "order and quiet prevail, and the great mass of people have now settled down and are engaged in their ordinary vocations," thus 23 years ago wrote "finis" below the account of the struggle with the Malanaos. Gen. George W. Davis said "what Spain was not able to do in 350 years American troops have done in a few months."

Refused to Stay Conquered.

Why have these people not remained conquered? Why are they again in arms, terrorizing, robbing and murdering?

The story involves no little bungling on the part of the United States, together with some honest mistakes. To the Malanao it involves perfidy on the part of America, whose word, he feels, has been broken. Therefore he has resorted to arms. He has slain where he could, ambushed, stolen away under cover of darkness, and he lives to ambush and slay again. A score of constabulary are dead at his hands.

To the fanatical Malanao there is no law but Allah's. This law, he fancies, he has embodied in his customary laws, which are rigid. When Captain (now General) Pershing came, in 1899, calling him brother and (in the name of America) speaking of the sanctity of pacts between soldier and soldier, gave assurances that these laws would be respected by America, the Malanao believed and surrendered his arms to a man whose courage and honor he respected.

The Malanao is an industrious farmer. His fields had been neglected while he defended his borders against an enemy. Now this enemy had become his friend, even his brother; so he would abandon fighting and get back quickly into his neglected fields. His brother would send him teachers for his children, who should read the Koran and many strange tales and be as wise as Christian children. All should be well with him and his. His brave white brother had said so.

And his white brother meant, too, every word of it. In the campaigns he had come to regard the Malanao with thorough respect.

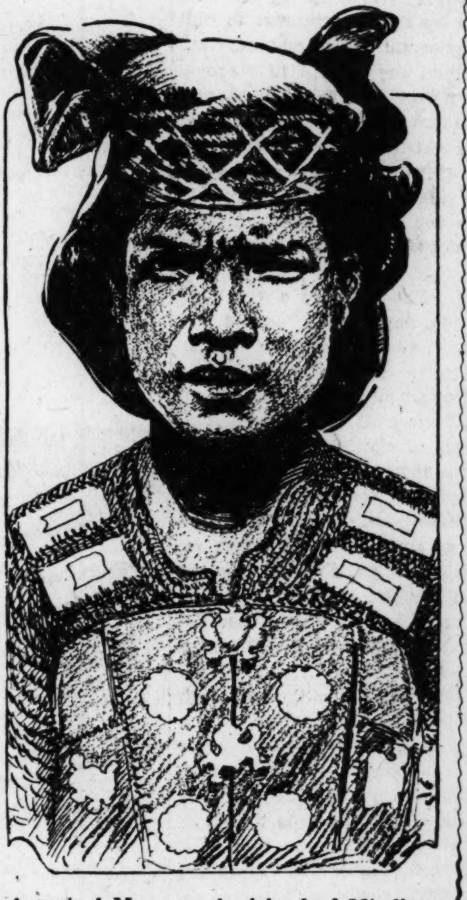
The Army's Pledge.

This confidence probably would have died before it was born had the Malanao understood the organization of the American Government. But he did not know that its officers could not speak with authority. He had yet to reckon with the American Congress, the instrument by which the pledges made on the field of battle would be fulfilled or broken.

Briefly these pledges were that America would not interfere in the exercise of the Malanao's religion or the upbringing of his children in that religion; that Government would be through councils of native elders and chiefs, supporting by this means the native respect for rank and inheritance; and that native customary laws would continue. The Moro was assured repeatedly that his subjugation to native Christian administration would not take place under American authority.

Koran Taught in Schools.

Such a Government the American military quickly established. It opened schools presided over by American teachers, and the Koran was taught in Arabic. Courses for the training of Moro teachers were established, and it appeared that education would advance among the Moros in the same manner as it would among the Christians. The Moro position in respect to women would, it seemed, not be infringed upon. All family laws would be respected, and the polygamy permitted, if not enjoined, by the Koran would be tolerated.



A typical Moro on the island of Mindinao. The turban head dress indicates the Mohammedan allegiance. Of seemingly boyish figure, they are fierce and fanatical warriors once they take the field. In times of peace they farm their lands in ancient fashion.

With the grant of $150,000 from the congressional relief fund it appeared that economic development would occur. The army was building roads and telegraph lines, and laying cables under the sea to connect all points with the capital of Mindanao at Zamboanga. There was no hint whatever of a gradually extending native Christian hegemony. Fair promises had been made and fairly they seemed to be carried out.

This period, however, was short-lived.

The first American Government the Moros and other peoples of the Philippines knew was the Government imposed by President McKinley as commander-in-chief of the Army and Navy of the United States—a Government, therefore, of general orders that were brief, clear and to the point. Such a Government the Moros could understand, for it was nothing but an extension of their family laws and tribal customary laws; it had the directness of the dicta of sultans and dattus and panditas.

What McKinley did was confirmed and ratified in the Civil Government Act of 1902, but by that act government passed from the military into the hands of civil servants; Congress assumed its constitutional responsibility over the new territory.

Civilians Take a Hand.

Generals who knew Moro-land recommended that the military regime continue there for a long period. It must be assumed they did this because they knew America's lack of a colonial office. They knew the tortuous route of civil administration would not serve in dealing with a people accustomed to look for authority among persons of rank, to harken to the word of authority thus personified and to obey that word.

But their recommendations did not prevail, and civil government absorbed Moro-land—Mindanao, Sulu and Palawan, and archipelago and two of the largest islands in the Philippine group, an area roughly a third of the total area of the Philippines.

Events moved rapidly forward to the creation of the Philippine assembly, provided for in 1902. It was soon apparent that government in the Philippines must defer to this body, pre-eminently a Christian native body, with Moros not counting at all.

Slighting the Moros.

In 1916 the full legislature was created by the Jones Act. This gave Harrison, then Governor-General, the right to send nine Moros and Americans to the Lower House and two to the Senate. He might have named 11 Moros; he might have named 11 Americans jealous for the rights of Moros and interested in their welfare. He actually named one Moro, Hadji Butu, to the Senate, two or three to the Lower House, and native Christians to all the other positions.

The army was withdrawn from Mindanao and native Christian constabulary put in its place. American constabulary officers resigned. The service filled up with young, ambitious but inexperienced native Christian officers, who, in addition to their commands, sat as civil officials—Governors of Provinces, Deputy Governors and Justices of the Peace.

The purpose of conducting schools acceptable to the Moros had long before been abandoned. The schools filled up with native Christian teachers. Normal schools, colleges and a university were provided for the Christians, nothing for the Moros. Public improvements the American army had undertaken and largely completed were left neglected.

Christian Schools—Then Murder.

School books issued by the Government in Manila would not tend to make the young Moros staunch in the ancient faith. Astounding as it may seem, the primer had stories about cute little pigs in it. This for little Mohammedans to read. There was trouble with the schools, and teachers were killed. Moros were outlawed, hunted down and shot by the Christian constabulary. Though far in the majority, they had hardly a word to say in affairs vitally concerning themselves. The Moro and his civilization were placed where they would perish.

Today the Christian hegemony is all but complete. In municipal districts the elective officials may be Moros, and many are. But no Moros are fitted by education to be Justices of the Peace, so Christians hold these important posts in the little rural communities. Christians command and man the constabulary; Christians are Judges in the courts of first instance; in the larger towns the councilmen are Christians.

Moros Neglected.

This is the tragedy which has been visited upon the Moro. The public lands have not been surveyed, and Christian migration, encouraged and financed oftentimes by the Government, encroaches upon lands the Moros believe they legally hold by inheritance from their ancestors. The country is deliberately left unimproved. This year there is not a centavo of appropriation from Manila for roads or wharves in Lanao, a province as large as an important European state, but with only 31 kilometers, 20 miles, of roadway. Seventy more kilometers, 43.5 miles, of roadway built by the United States army from coast to coast is today but a trail over which it is hard and dangerous to go afoot.

The United States has seen fit to leave affairs in the Philippines to the custody of a local legislature which is prosecuting a peaceful revolution against her own power, and this is the way that legislature has dealt with Moros who believed the promises made in the name of the United States by American army officers 25 years ago. The Moro sees himself the subject of men whose ancestors were taught by Moros the art of making gunpowder, of casting cannon and ball and of navigation on the high seas.

Moro administration is under the bureau of non-Christian tribes, the chief of which is a Christian native.

Humiliating a Sultan.

The recent disturbance, the pursuit of Sultan sa Raya and his followers, began two years ago and was precipitated when a native Christian Judge decided that a farm given as part of the dowry bestowed by her fiance upon Sultan sa Raya's daughter—a Princess, let it be borne in mind—should not pass to sa Raya, the engagement having somehow been broken off. Sa Raya believed this violated customary law. It humiliated him as well as his daughter, and he had no alternative but the warpath if he wished to retain power.

"Rank alone," says Gen. George W. Davis, "though respected socially, carries no weight politically unless sustained by an adequate number of followers." If a Sultan's dignity is infringed, these followers fall away from him like rats leaving a sinking ship.

Sa Raya defended his dignity two years by fortifying his cotta. It was reduced by the constabulary, an action tantamount to planting dragons' teeth. Today there are more cottas than ever, more followers than ever. The torch of the incendiary threatens the rice field, the knife of the mutilator is at the lips of the suspected spy. Lanao lives in terror.

CAPITALISTS HOPE 8-HOUR LAW WILL END BRITISH COAL STRIKE, LLOYD GEORGE SAYS

Union Confident Bribe of Old Pay With Longer Hours Will Fail—Fumbling of Government Prolongs Struggle.

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE,
War-Time Premier of Great Britain.

LONDON, July 10 (By Cable.)

TO all outward appearances, the mining struggle seems further from amicable settlement than ever. The end must, of course, be nearer but whether it will come through starvation and despair or through some unforeseen intervention of Parliament or public opinion, no one is in a position to foretell.

There is a general expectation in "capitalist circles" that as soon as the eight-hour day bill becomes law there will be a disintegration of resistance on the part of the miners.

(Since this was written the eight-hour day bill has been enacted into law.)

With an extra hour's work, many if not most of the mines can afford to pay pre-strike wages without reduction. Some districts might even pay the same wages for a seven and a half hour day. The whole strength and influence of trades unionism will be concentrated on opposing piecemeal surrenders on these lines. If, notwithstanding the appeal of the union, whole districts give way to this tempting offer of undiminished wages, the Miners' Federation, which is the largest and most powerful union in the world, will be shattered and for the time being destroyed.

Likely to Prolong Conflict.

Trade union leaders are very confident that this bribe will fail. If it does, then the only effect of this measure will be to prolong and embitter the conflict. The mine owners are in no mood to negotiate until this experiment as to extension of hours has been given a fair trial. They were very angry with Mr. Baldwin's last invitation to the miners to settle on terms of acceptance of the report of the Royal Commission.

They felt that if negotiations were reopened on that basis, the effort to return to the eight-hour day would have to be abandoned, for the commissioners unanimously condemned that proposal. Pressure was at once brought to bear upon the Government to explain away this offer and the Prime Minister was thrown over by his reactionary colleagues—not for the first time. He lost control of the situation the moment he broke off negotiations on the eve of the general strike at the instance of the die hard majority in his Cabinet and he has not since recaptured the direction of affairs.

Had he shown any firmness at that critical moment, he would have had the nation behind him. The business interests would have supported him and all the trade unions—with the possible exception of the Miners' Federation—would have been bound to give him their support and the mining leaders would, in a very short time, have seen the wisdom of accepting a settlement which their fellow workers in other trades considered fair.

A Choice of Evils.

At best, some time must elapse before the parties to the struggle are convinced as to the effect of the eight-hour act. There must be at least a full week's trial given to the dangling of its provisions before the miners ere the contestants can be persuaded of its success or failure as a means of bringing the strike to an end. If it succeeds, the strike will be over but the men will return to work disgruntled and disaffected. On the other hand, if it fails, the strike will then be in its twelfth week and the men will have achieved a notable victory that must necessarily encourage their resistance.

Still, there must be a limit to the endurance of these most stubborn fighters in the ranks of labor. They claim that they are receiving better support than in any previous struggle in which they have been engaged. Mr. Cook says: "We have had much more public sympathy and we have had twice as much money as we had in 1921."

Russia's Cash Support.

Russian trade unionists have been munificent in their subventions. They have already subscribed 500,000 pounds ($2,500,000) to the miners' relief fund. There is no reason to believe that this money has not come straight from the pockets of the Russian workers, of whom 3,000,000 are registered union members. No doubt this money could not have been collected without the assent and approval of the Soviet government, which has also given the necessary legal sanction to the forwarding of the cash to this country. To that extent, the Russian Government is associated with this pecuniary assistance. It is very probable that the motive for these collections was not altogether sympathy for distress but a desire to aid comrades in other lands who were "waging war on capitalism."

Still, if men see their families in danger of starving, they cannot be expected to scrutinize too narrowly the motives of those who supply them with bread.

Local Taxes Aid Miners.

The greatest help to the miners, however, has come from municipalities in the mining areas. The children are being fed under the Feeding of School Children Acts and, in some districts, the guardians are making allowances out of local taxes to relieve distress amongst the miners' families. In spite of all these agencies, there are areas where suffering and privation are acute.

The other unions squandered their resources on the futile general strike and are not in a position to render substantial assistance. Whether, in all the circumstances, the miners are prepared to go on fighting many more weeks is more than even their own leaders can tell. One of the sanest said to me that if they did not settle in a fortnight, the stoppage would continue into September. A general mining strike has never yet gone beyond a three months' limit. It remains to be seen whether this stoppage will prove an exception to the general rule.

The fooling and fumbling of the Government has undoubtedly prolonged matters. No one quite knows what they will do next. It is not impossible that Parliament may intervene if and when it becomes clear that the eight-hour act has not succeeded. The mine owners are not popular. They have shown a refractory, obstinate and narrow spirit which alienates sympathy. There is a universal feeling that they have mismanaged their business and that a good deal of the trouble in the mines has arisen from their inefficiency. This impression is confirmed by reports of a succession of commissions and committees, official and unofficial.

Loss $50,000,000 a Week.

The effect of the stoppage on British trade and industry is temporarily calamitous. Mr. Hannon, M. P., who is a well-known Midland industrialist, computes the present loss to British industry at £10,000,000 (about $50,000,000) a week. As the weeks go by that loss will grow, for the reserves of coal in most trades are getting

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM.

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

"Back to Jefferson!"

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

A PLEASING contrast to the usual campaign speech made so far this year was furnished by candidate Hawes at Excelsior Springs, Mo. It rang with the quality of true statesmanship, of the thinker, of the student, of the practical Democratic leader and it was the convincing expression of the honest political fundamentalist.

"Back to Jefferson," was his party's battle cry—back to that broad and safe road of concrete fundamentals that had led the Jeffersonian hosts to overwhelming and consecutive victories up to the time of the Civil War, which rent that grand old party in twain along the Mason and Dixon line—merely, in view of the issues of today, a geographical cleavage.

Believers in Jefferson's fundamental principles of government are to be met with about as frequently in the Republican as in the Democratic party. Today, as in the days of old, the main body of American voters are Jeffersonians.

Both Republican and Democratic parties are afflicted with radicalism of the wings—with different forms of so-called "Progressivism," Socialism, Hamiltonism or other "ism" tending towards oligarchy. The independent voter springs to the ballot box when his party drifts too far from his cherished fundamental principles—too far from the middle of the road or too far from the wings, as his point of view may be. "Back to Jefferson," consequently, would not only be helpful to the Democratic, but also to the Republican party—for the latter, in its first national platform of 1856, affirmed its adherence to the principles of Washington and Jefferson and was wholly silent on Hamiltonism, Socialism or other political principles (See article on "Republican Party, Encyclopedia Britannica, 11th Ed.)

We see in print and hear frequently the statement that there is very little difference between the two leading parties, which is true when the Jeffersonians are in control in both parties. The true alignment of American political parties should be Jeffersonian vs. Hamiltonism or vs. Socialism, as these two are paternalistic and their object is class rule.

So in the opinion of an humble Jeffersonian, "Back to Jefferson" under the gallant leadership of Major Hawes, bearing aloft the "Declaration of Independence," would do much toward curing all our ills.

Our Foreign Debts.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT is a great relief to read in your issue of July 4 the long and able protest made by Mr. Peabody against the American insistence on payment of foreign debts.

As an American citizen I am more ashamed and distressed by our demands for them every day. It may be that for the safety of future needs for credit the actual amount borrowed should be repaid, but certainly not a penny more, instead of double or more the amount we loaned as is now required. If we would cancel the debts so much the better. Every citizen should do what he can to hold up Mr. Peabody's arms and yours for your action in this matter. Therefore this note.

LEONORA B. HALSTED.

Wilhelm and the World War.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

REFERRING to your editorial captioned, "Hoch der Kaiser," in last Sunday's issue of the Post-Dispatch, it strikes one as odd to see a rejoicing over a failure of democracy to reach its goal in Germany over here. The man "whom history will likely charge with having precipitated the greatest of all cataclysms" is congratulated because "justice was on his side," justice in this instance meaning the sacredness of private property without regard as to either its volume or the manner in which it was acquired. The man above referred to could hardly have earned it in his lifetime, unless he did earn it by and in his "twenty years of saber-rattling," mentioned in your editorial.

As to what history will say, well, history is written by different historians, each writing it more or less from his particular angle, some allowing more and some less of their prejudices and pet theories to color it. Notwithstanding this fact, there have been even by now voices heard, from the allied side, at that, taking much of the blame off the Kaiser and placing it against certain Russian and French statesmen, citing documentary proof for it, too. But trifles like that must not be allowed to detract from the enjoyment of the glory we achieved, settling that little argument. All the war-time claims and assertions must be kept alive, lest this or the next generation become sobered up from our feeling of omnirighteousness, omnimightiness, etc. Some historian in the days to come may even point out that but for the timely activity of our own Morgan and Schwab in supplying funds and materials, the war may have ended, as Mr. Wilson once said it should, in a draw about six months after it started, instead of lasting four years and then having to be finished by us in order to save—democracy (?)

A PLEA FOR CANCELLATION.

The letter published in the Sunday Post-Dispatch from Frederick W. Peabody to President Coolidge was a passionate plea for cancellation of our war debts. It was more perfervid than convincing. It ignored certain old historical facts and circumstances in connection with the assistance given to us by France in our early day of need and similarly ignored salient historical facts of the World War.

The cancellationists will not, in our opinion, get very far by endowing our late allies with all the shining virtues and heaping malediction on Uncle Sam's cruel, usurious head. That sort of argument may tickle the emotions, but it does not appeal to reason. It does not happen to be true.

Great Britain, France, Italy and Belgium never consciously fought our battle. They fought for themselves. They fought magnificently. But, even so, their prodigies of valor, their whole Iliad of sacrifice had been in vain except for our contribution of wealth and manpower. That much is undeniable, and it may be said without jingoism but in the spirit and letter of truth.

When finally the war ended, what was the attitude of the victors? The Versailles treaty is one answer. What was Woodrow Wilson's experience, after the tumultuous homage of popular demonstrations had ceased, and the business of negotiating a just peace was begun? The American idealist was a Don Quixote. His knight-errantry amused when it did not vex his fellow confrerees. The foundations of a just peace did not engage the talents of those architects. They were concerned with the division of the spoils. They brought ravenous appetites to the task.

Nor has the subsequent conduct of those nations been such as to inspire confidence in their purpose. Those are unpleasant things to say, but those are the realities upon which the world's post bellum psychology has been fashioned.

Statesmanship everywhere bungled the job of the world's moral reconstruction. We do not know that any order of genius were possible by which American sentiment could have been won over to the entire cancellation of the war debts. But we do believe that incomparably more generous terms could have been secured by a policy of breadth and vision on the part of our associates. If we have failed in magnanimity, they, too, have failed, and grievous for them has been that failure.

Mr. Peabody in his letter quotes Frank H. Simonds as doubting that the debt settlements will be carried out. The Post-Dispatch shares that doubt. But before the terms are revised downward our late allies will have to prove that they deserve, as well as need, such consideration. Until that proof is given cancellation pleadings are so much rhetoric.

METHUSELAH AND CARTER COUNTY.

It must have been in some such place as Carter County, Mo., that Methuselah lived. He doubtless had pure spring water, good, plain food and not too much to worry him, which are about what make Carter County the most healthful place in Missouri. Only 3.83 persons per 1000 population died in Carter County last year, as against 37.28 for Dunklin County, 18.94 in St. Louis and 13.84 in Kansas City.

Carter County is in the Ozarks. The impression that if you can escape to the Ozarks you will live longer has been growing hereabouts for some time, and the record of Carter County proves it. If the State Board of Health will go farther and tell us what the average expectation of life in Carter County is, we will know how long we can live down there if we will. If we will, because it is not certain that most of us will care to live too long. We have observed of life that if you live too long the world becomes to you a strange place. It is a question whether we would not rather go home in our time than to hold out where everything is changing and nothing is as it used to be. Change is the hardest thing in life to tolerate. If Methuselah lived 900 years, as Genesis says he did, the last 800 years must have been given up to complaint.

However, this is not the fault of Carter County. Life is there abundantly if we want it. Carter County is about 1000 feet above sea level, the water is so cold that trout can live in it, there are moss beds in the hills upon which Pan sleeps, the pilleated woodpeckers make the woods resound, and people just go on pleasantly and quietly living.

As a matter of fact, there is nowhere else to go—not like Carter County.

ABOLISHING MARRIAGE.

There have been happier suggestions than the Russian Government made when it proposed to abolish marriage. The Russian people have been debating ever since, and when the whole Russian people debate there is an uproar from the Baltic to the Sea of Japan. Your Russian is a born arguer. He argued himself into the most stupendous revolution in history, so to himself at least he must be convincing.

However, he cannot decide whether marriage is a good or a bad thing. Nobody has ever been able to decide that. It has not even been determined whether or not marriage is a failure, though it has been debated endlessly. It is said that the people in the Russian cities think marriage is a bad thing and ought to be abolished, but this is not what the people in the small towns and on the farms think. It is an old institution, and in a way it has worked. They are not so sure that something else would work as well. The Government thinks it would be better to do away with every distinction between marriage and merely living together and the rights of offspring from either relation. Its economic obligations, says the Government, are the same, or should be the same. Wedlock they regard as an anomaly. The economic fact is that a man owes his mate support, and he owes their children maintenance and education. What has marriage to do with it?

Nothing, truly, if we are to become so materialistic as all that. Everything, if we are to look at it sentimentally, which is in human nature in Russia or any place else. The Government, we imagine, will lose that debate. It is a bit too intellectual for the people, who can think only of weddings, the way brides look, presents and the pleasant speculation of when it is to be.

And anybody knows that you cannot think of such things as that and think at all.

It is said that when Mt. Pelee blew up lava fell in the sea one hundred miles distant, or about one-half as far as the explosion of the Florida boom is now throwing grapefruit.

WHAT THE FARMER GOT.

There is such a thing as putting the boot to a man after he is down. Except in the lumber camps and the Apache dance halls of Paris, it has never been regarded as quite sporting. In a recent letter to the editor of the Post-Dispatch, a writer who signs himself "X. Y. B." accuses one of our staff correspondents with entertaining entirely too much sympathy with the plight of the Western farmer. Admitting their plight is bad, he says it is all their own fault. They borrowed too much money during the war, and bought entirely too much land at inflated prices. "Between being robbed by a steel baron and a hick land grafter," he concludes, "I prefer the former. They are more gentlemanly, and they are less injurious to the commonwealth."

"X. Y. B." is obviously a person of intelligence and feeling, and surely would not do the farmers an intentional injustice The fact is that during the war the farmers were urged by the Government to cultivate all the land they could lay hands on, and to put it in grain to feed the armies in Europe. The Government made it easy for them to borrow all the money they wanted for that purpose. It conjured them by their patriotism to abandon the diversification policy which they had generally adopted as insurance against bad grain years. It besought them tearfully for more wheat and corn, and, as an added inducement, fixed a minimum price.

The farmers complied. Naturally, as a result of the Government's position, land prices leaped upward. The farmers borrowed money extravagantly and bought land recklessly. It was the patriotic thing to do—and, the Government had told them—the profitable thing. What happened? The war ended. The minimum price was abolished. The bottom dropped out of the grain market, and the farmers were unable to sell their crops for enough to repay their loans. The diversified plan, which might have partially saved them, was gone, by Government request. To crown the situation, the Federal Reserve Board ordered general deflation, causing the farmers' notes to be called just at the time when the Government had made it impossible for them to meet them. Thousands lost their farms, banks closed, business houses failed, and from the general ruin the farmers have never been able to emerge.

If a class of citizens heed the appeal of their Government in its hour of direst need, and are ruined in consequence, have they a right to appeal to that Government to help them out of the hole in which it placed them? The railroads got more than half a billion out of the national treasury to repair the injury which they said the Government inflicted on them during the war. The manufacturers, after repaying unheard-of dividends during the war, got a tariff which has enabled them to plunder the consumers of untold billions. The farmers got it in the neck.

QUEBEC'S TAVERNS.

After perusing the recent description of the working of the liquor laws in Quebec, by George R. White, a Post-Dispatch staff correspondent, a Macon (Mo.) minister says that the Quebec system "means that the saloon is fully established" there, and asks whether the Post-Dispatch wants the saloon restored in St. Louis.

The least familiarity with what the Post-Dispatch has written on the question of prohibition would have shown the absurdity of this question. There is no demand for the restoration of the saloon of pre-prohibition days. As a matter of fact, bootleg saloons do not need to be restored. They are here, with worse effect for evil than the regulated saloon ever had.

But Quebec has no saloons of either kind. It has taverns, in which, as the Post-Dispatch correspondent pointed out, only beer and ale are used. All stronger liquors must be bought, under Government control, at groceries, in bottles, which are taken home for use as the buyer sees fit. The Quebec drinking places are taverns, where rich and poor may meet for refreshing of body and mind, with no temptation to indulge in really "strong drink." Of such taverns, popular for ages, Samuel Johnson was no doubt happily thinking when he wrote: "There is nothing which has yet been contrived by man by which so much happiness is produced as by a good tavern or inn." Charles Dickens was well acquainted with such taverns in England. He found in them a vast store of that deep knowledge of human nature, human frailty, and human goodness with which his novels are rife.

Destroy the good lest it afford a refuge for the bad, is the Prohibition's rule. Quebec, however, has found that careful regulation is not only better than attempted destruction, but the only satisfactory solution of the liquor problem.

THE VALLEY OF FLOWERS.

Where daffodils and lilacs grow,
And golden poppies greet the morn,
There roses bloom beneath the snow
That tops the mountains, bleak and shorn.

Where rivulets run wild with glee,
And blue bells match the heavens high,
Where brush and vine climb joyfully
To greet the winding road that's nigh;

Where daisies and the sunflow'r nod
Their yellow heads at bumble bee,
Where nightingales and robins laud
The powers of a Mystery;

Where honeysuckles saturate
The lazy winds, that wistful blow,
With their aroma, to create
A paradise where'er they go;

Where lilies rise, untouched by hand,
In solemn gorgeousness alone,
As watchers over Eden's land,
Or stars guide those who ever roam;

There shadow and the sunshine meet,
Beneath the flower's leafy dell,
There Nature reigns supreme and sweet—
The valley where the flowers dwell.

The "blurb" on the jacket of "The Verdict of Bridlegoose," by Llewelyn Powys, says: "Mr. Powys puts on the mantle of that plain-spoken and humorous creation of Rabelais, Judge Bridlegoose, in order to deliver himself of his verdict on the United States and the American people. Readers of his earlier books will find here the same realism, humor and magical evocation of emotion with which they have grown familiar, and fond, and a subject close to their hearts. There are many delightful impressions of celebrities." The book itself carefully refrains from saying anything. The realism consists in the remarkable observation that some people in New York and in San Francisco undress without drawing the shades. The humor is in a chapter which implies that the Rocky Mountains are rocky and mountainous. The emotion evoked is bewildered wonder that the book was printed.

Sir: The other day one of our great railroads advertised its widespread service with a map in the fantastic old style—with pictures as well as names—as the ancients used to insert beasts in the sea to depict the unknown terrors of deep water. Well, here are some of the pictures used:

For New York, the statue (not statute) of Liberty; Atlantic City, a bathing beauty; Pittsburg, smokestacks; Cleveland, a ship; Detroit, a flivver; Chicago, the facade of a building—not the stockyards, maybe the Art Institute. And St. Louis—not the towers of Washington University, nor the Municipal Theater, nor the new telephone building—but a bridge!

That's what's on the minds of the railroad men who come to St. Louis. Guilty consciences, perhaps, in view of their bridge trade scheme. To add insult to injury, the bridge on the map looked suspiciously like the Municipal Bridge—the railroad had no approaches to it.

SUCCESS.

What is needed more than anything else at the present day is a definition of success, and a set of rules for its attainment. The query and light magazines tell us that if we work hard and save our money, we will one day be interviewed for a success magazine, and be able to tell people to work hard and save their money. We confess to an utter lack of interest in such a formula. Whenever we start to acquire a fortune, our suppressed desires to spend money usually prove too strong for our newly found virtue of thrift. Were we to inherit a fortune, we would not care to divulge to the public how we got the money. The correspondence school methods hold more attraction for us. Sitting on the important side of a desk and singing: "I wouldn't be where I am, doing what I am, getting what I am, if I hadn't used the mails," is nearer our idea of being a captain of industry, or, at the least, a lieutenant in line for promotion. Furthermore, the privilege of telling people hopefully that they can rise as well if only they will clip the coupon is not lightly to be esteemed. Yet we fear we would never be able to assume that ambitious, yet benignant, expression of countenance which the correspondence school advertisements require. We would, with leave to extend these remarks, rather have the man in the street nudge his neighbor and say: "That is So and So; he makes enough to be able to buy real Scotch," than to have the president of the bank playfully tap the cashier on the chest, and exclaim: "Here comes So and So; he deposits $50 a week."

Social success is in the same muddled condition. We have always been under the impression that an acquaintance with books and an interest in events, together with the ability to listen entertainingly, would give us a fairly high social batting average. But we have our doubts. One advertisement tells us that unless we know Balzac, we are a social nonentity. Another would rescue us from our sorry predicament with a scrap book. Being unable to make up what we ordinarily call our mind, we shall do nothing about the matter. Nor have we the faintest notion as to how to win the divinity that is woman. We used to think that it was love; then we decided it was Listerine. Later, we conceived the notion that it must be hair-dressing. Young men who would make their mark in the world; young men who would win some charming damsel in the dashing manner, are puzzled by the number of conflicting means. What is to be done about it?

A WISHING RHYME FOR FISHING TIME

And now the ardent fisherman is whipping all the streams, or smokes his pipe upon the bank and idly loafs and dreams. And maybe now and then his peace is broken by a bite, and some great trout or monster fish puts up an awful fight. Comes then the thrill of perfect joy to fill a summer's day, UNLESS the fish takes line and all and thereby gets away. But do not let us think of such a dreadful thing, or all the gloom and dire distress that such event would bring. With all his patience surely he deserves a better fate, and when he tells us of his catch, may none dispute the weight.

Moreover, the great leader is almost sure to fail unless he is surrounded by other men who also possess at least a certain degree of greatness. That was what happened in Jerusalem 1900 years ago. It was the result of a long eugenic process which began with the patriarchs and culminated in Jesus.

Accomplishments and Failures of Congress Reviewed expressed in the nomination of Brookhart over Cummins for the Senate in Iowa.

The McNary-Haugen bill, embodying the corn belt plan for raising the domestic price of staple farm products, was defeated in the House by 212 to 167 and in the Senate by 45 to 39.

The bill was attacked as a price-fixing, subsidy-granting device. It was defended on the ground that the farmer, as well as the manufacturer, was entitled to tariff protection. Some of the Democratic opponents of the measure retorted that the remedy was not to create a new evil but to wipe out the existing one. Thus the tariff issue came to occupy a prominent place in the debate.

Evidences of a growing breach between the industrial East and the agricultural Middle West, a breach cutting sharply across the old party lines, appeared. Cummins of Iowa predicted that if the farmers were not given a place in the tariff sun, the whole policy of protection would be overthrown.

The Tariff Again.

The debate indicated that Democratic proposals of lower tariff rates on manufactured goods will form an issue both in the coming campaign and in the next session of Congress. Marked impetus was given the tariff reduction movement by the disclosures of the Senate committee which investigated the inner workings of the United States Tariff Commission.

Immediately after the defeat of the McNary-Haugen bill in the Senate, President Coolidge, taking a position at odds with that announced in his coldly-received speech to a farmers' meeting at Chicago in December, issued an eleventh hour public appeal for passage of the Fess bill. This proposed the creation of a $100,000,000 Federal fund to be lent to farm co-operative associations for financing the storage and ultimate sale of surplus products. Representatives of the farm bodies which had been pushing the McNary-Haugen bill declared that they wanted no halfway measure. The vote on the Fess bill in the Senate—54 noes to 26 ayes—was the hardest blow given the President during the session. Twenty-one Republicans joined with 32 Democrats and the one Farmer-Labor member in refusing to pull the President's chestnuts out of the fire.

An affirmative act of the first importance was the impeachment of Judge English of East St. Louis by the House of Representatives. The vote, taken after several days of debate, was 306 to 62 for impeachment. Five articles of impeachment, based on charges first published in the Post-Dispatch and later exhaustively investigated by a special committee of Congress, were drawn up.

English Trial Nov. 10.

Judge English appeared before the Senate on May 3 and denied all the charges. The Senate will meet Nov. 10 to try the case.

In view of the continued glorification of the Coolidge regime for its "economy," it is interesting to note that the total appropriations carried in the 10 regular supply measures and the two deficiency bills totaled $3,905,166,180, or $431,465,601 in excess of the total in the corresponding bills enacted at the previous session.

The authorized Federal outlay for the fiscal year ending next July 1, including the appropriations made to date, permanent and continuing appropriations that do not require annual approval by Congress and the public debt retirement required by law, will be $3,969,625,673.

This will be boosted well above the $4,000,000,000 mark by deficiency bills in the next session and additional public debt retirement from Treasury surpluses.

Other Important Measures.

Apart from the foregoing measures, the following are the most important enactments of the session:

A commercial air navigation act, placing the regulation of commercial aircraft under the Department of Commerce and giving the department a new assistant secretary to take charge of this work.

A railway labor disputes act, abolishing the Railroad Labor Board and setting up new machinery for the settlement of railroad labor controversies.

An act increasing Spanish-American War pensions by $18,936,108; another increasing War of 1812, Mexican and Civil War pensions by $15,000,000 to $20,000,000, and various other pension measures estimated to cost from $300,000 to $500,000 annually.

A public building act authorizing a $165,000,000 five-year building program.

An army air program authorizing annual appropriations of $20,000,000 for five years, changing the name of the army air service to the army air corps, which is permitted to increase its enlisted personnel to 15,000 and providing a new assistant secretary in the War Department to have charge of flying activities.

Naval Air Program.

A naval air program authorizing the construction of two rigid airships at a total cost of not more than $8,000,000 and of 1800 airplanes during five years at a total cost of $85,078,750, this program to be followed by yearly construction of not more than 335 planes at a cost of $17,476,250. The same bill gives the Navy Department a new assistant secretary, charged with supervision over aviation.

An act authorizing the appropriation of $165,000,000 for Federal aid road construction during 1928-29. This bill carries forward the 50-50 aid plan under which $75,000,000 was appropriated in the agricultural bill for the fiscal year 1927.

The Reed-Johnson measure for additional World War veteran relief, estimated to cost $30,000,000 for the first three years of its operation, and the Green bill, adding $14,771,174 to the cost of the bonus act for four years.

A 1700-page house bill, codifying all the laws of the United States from 1789 to 1925, passed by the Senate after less than an hour's actual debate.

Coolidge Pleas Fail.

Congress continued to ignore or flout most of the recommendations made by the President in his several messages. The tendency of the Republican majority to get out of hand became more pronounced as the returns from Republican primaries indicated a sagging in the President's popularity.

Neither house heeded the President's appeal for payment of the ancient French spoliation claims. One of the outstanding features of his 1925 message was a plea for a selective service act authorizing the drafting of both men and materials in wartime. The recommendation was ignored in both branches of Congress. A joint committee for the leasing of Muscle Shoals, in accordance with the President's program, was created, but the legislation it proposed did not come up for action. Nothing was done toward meeting the President's desire for a bill to facilitate railroad consolidation.

Though it made a great pother over coal during the anthracite strike in Pennsylvania, Congress failed to act on the President's request for power to deal with emergencies in the coal industry. The question of departmental reorganization, for which the President has asked enabling legislation, again went over. His recommendation that prohibition agents, postmasters, collectors of customs and collectors of internal revenue be brought within the civil service met the same fate.

Shipping Board Unchanged.

The President asked for important changes in the organization of the Shipping Board, but no legislation resulted. He failed also in his effort to get increased powers for the Governor-General of the Phillipines.

Two of the important nominations of the President were rejected by the Senate. One was that of Wallace McCamant of Oregon, who placed Coolidge in nomination for the Vice Presidency at the Chicago convention of 1920. The President wanted to make him a United States Circuit Judge, but was thwarted by Senator Hiram Johnson's successful fight against confirmation. The other appointee who failed to run the Senate gauntlet was Aubrey Boyles, named for United States Attorney in the Southern District of Alabama.

The nomination of William J. Tilson, brother of the Republican floor leader of the House, to be a United States District Judge in Georgia and of two Federal Judges and a District Attorney for Alaska were withdrawn under fire. At the request of Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the nominations of E. B. Brossard of Utah and Sherman J. Lowell of New York as members of the United States Tariff Commission were held up for further consideration. Immediately after the adjournment the President gave them recess appointments.

Dawes "Reform" Lost.

The attempt of Vice President Dawes to "reform" the Senate got nowhere. Senator Underwood of Alabama, who will retire at the end of the next session, made a speech for a modified form of majority cloture. Reed of Missouri retorted with one of his best forensic efforts.

Senator Norris again got through the Senate by a top-heavy vote his resolution proposing a constitutional amendment to abolish the "lame duck" session of Congress. The House leadership again sat upon the proposal.

Bills on both sides of the prohibition question, including the administration Goff-Graham bill for a general tightening of the Volstead act, went by the board. Prohibition enforcement appropriations however, were voted to a total of $28,593,916, or some $7,000,000 more than for the previous fiscal year.

Other legislation that failed for one reason or another included the $83,000,000 rivers and harbors bill, which has been given a privileged place on the Senate calendar next December; the bill to continue appropriations under the maternity act (Senator Reed's pet aversion) during the fiscal years 1928 and 1929; the bill that Reed put through the Senate for increasing the salaries of Federal Judges; bills for the disposition of alien property; the migratory bird bill; Congressional reapportionment bills; the hoary truth-in-fabrics bill; the bill for repeal of the Pullman surtax, and the Gooding long-and-short-haul bill.

Radio Control Held Up.

Two important measures remained in conference at the time of adjournment—the radio control bill and the Pepper-McFadden branch banking bill.

Congressional reapportionment, that nightmare of members from states whose allotment would be cut, was blocked in the House by a vote in which that body held its rules to be superior to the mandate of the Constitution. This action means that the present distribution of Congressmen among the various states, fixed on the basis of the census of 1910, will almost certainly remain unchanged till after 1930. Meantime, an ever-shrinking tail (the country) will continue to wag an ever-growing dog (the cities) in the House.

A filibuster by Senator Cameron (Rep.) of Arizona in the last hour of the session killed off the Neely resolution, designed to limit expenditures in primary contests for the Senate. Cameron's effort won him a shower of congratulations from Old Guard members who will be up for re-election in the fall.

Senate Busy Investigating.

Four Senate investigations of large importance and interest were conducted during the session. Senator Walsh (Dem.) of Montana, hero of the oil investigation of the preceding Congress, dug into the affairs of the Mellon-controlled Aluminum Co. of America. Walsh brought in a report censuring Attorney-General Sargent for his ignorance regarding the inquiry which had been initiated by his predecessor into alleged violations of the antitrust laws by the aluminum company. The report expressed doubts as to the "vigor and good faith of the Department of Justice," under Sargent.

Walsh's report was rejected in the Senate by a vote of 36 to 33. Two Democrats voted against it. Had they voted the other way, the report would have been adopted by 35 to 34. The two were Blease of South Carolina and Bruce of Maryland, a strangely assorted pair.

An investigation of the United States Tariff Commission forced by Senator Norris was prosecuted by a committee headed by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader. A wealth of evidence was adduced in support of Norris' charge that the President had packed the Tariff Commission with high-tariff advocates and sought to control its decisions.

Reed and Liquor.

As the star performer in the prohibition investigation, Senator Reed of Missouri demonstrated the ease with which liquor can be distilled at home and got Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, the enforcement chief, to admit that his task probably would be simplified if the Government would legalize the sale of non-intoxicating beer for home consumption. Both wets and drys presented their case at great length. Though Reed disclaimed the title of "wet," the hearings fixed by him in the public mind as the nation's leading champion of modification of the Volstead act.

The fourth important investigation again trained the spotlight on Reed. This, the slush fund inquiry, was made possible by a resolution which Reed forced through the Senate, giving a special committee broad powers to inquire into campaign expenditures in senatorial primaries and the election to be held in November. With Reed as chairman the committee began delving into reports of lavish and corrupt expenditures in the recent Pennsylvania primary.

Reed seized the opportunity to place on the stand Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League, and quiz him regarding the league's war chest and the methods used to fasten prohibition on the country.

The results of this investigation, which ranks as one of the most successful ever undertaken by a committee of Congress, are too much a matter of current news to need repetition. The committee is shortly to begin an inquiry into the last Illinois primary.

It may be said, therefore, that although Congreses has adjourned, Senator Reed is still before the public with a highly promising after-show. As for Reed himself, custom cannot stale his infinite variety.

BROKEN AERIAL WIRE CAUSES YOUTH'S DEATH

Falls Across Live Electric Line and Fatally Shocks Frazier Carroll.

A radio aerial wire, broken by Friday night's storm at the home of John I. Frazier, opposite Glencoe, St. Louis County, on the Meramec River, caused the death yesterday morning of Frazier's nephew, Frazier Carroll, 21 years old.

Frazier spliced the break in the aerial at 7 a. m. yesterday and then his attention was diverted. His nephew picked up the wire, but it fell across a live electric line. The insulation of the latter was seared through. There was a flash and young Carroll fell dead from shock.

He was the only son of Mrs. Gertrude Carroll, a widow, of Crescent, south of Glencoe, and was a sophomore at the University of Missouri.

His funeral will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. at Bethel Methodist Episcopal Church, South, west of Grover, St. Louis County.

MODIFIED MILK DELIVERY TO BE MADE TO HOMES

Commission Revises Plans, Abandons Former Distributing Centers.

The Pure Milk Commission has revised its plan of operation whereby its distributing centers for modified milk have been abolished and arrangements made with two dairy companies for the delivery of such milk at the door. Mothers who want modified milk for their babies may now visit the commission's clinics, where modified milk will be prescribed and the prescriptions turned over to the dairy companies to be filled.

From Jan. 1 to May 30, the commission supplied 67,633 bottles of modified babies, 57½ per cent being given free to mothers who could not pay.

VINCENT VIRZIE IS ACQUITTED

Judge Gayer Exonerates Him of Receiving Stolen Property.

Vincent Virzie, a jeweler, at 204 North Seventh street, and residing at 4337 De Tonty street, was acquitted yesterday of a charge of receiving stolen property, by Judge Gayer in Court of Criminal Correction No. 2. Virzie was accused of receiving two unset diamonds that had been stolen from John Lott, a jeweler at 613 Locust street and which Lott valued at $425.

The evidence was that Virzie had paid an unidentified man $250 for the stones and sold them to another jeweler for $300. Judge Gayer held that there was no discrepancy in price such as would warrant belief that Virzie suspected the gems were stolen property.

Children at Wesley House.

Fifty-nine children are receiving free piano lessons at Wesley House, a Community Fund center at 3035 Bell avenue, where four pianos are maintained for practice and lesson purposes. Aggregate attendance at Wesley House last month was 6335, and an average of 200 children a day used the shower baths.

LLOYD GEORGE WRITES OF EFFORTS TO END BRITISH COAL STRIKE

exhausted. Thanks to the failure of the general strike, supplies are coming in from Germany and the United States of America, but they constitute only a small percentage of the demand and the cost of foreign coal is necessarily high. These supplies will enable the railways to continue running a reduced service and also assist to keep going industries that do not consume large quantities of coal. But the heavy metal trades cannot be kept going by this means.

The numbers of unemployed are therefore increasing week by week and short time is becoming more and more prevalent. It is too early yet to assess the permanent effects of this long stoppage in our most important basic industry. A national loss of 400,000,000 pounds is in itself serious, especially for a nation which has to carry on its shoulders a burden of 7,000,000,000 pounds, and it must necessarily cause a further setback in our foreign trade.

What Settlement Means.

If, however, it ends in a good settlement which has in it elements of permanency, the loss would be more than made up by the new feeling of confidence which would ensue. If there were a settlement which would reconstruct the mining industry and satisfy the workers that their wages were not being unduly depressed through inefficiency, trade would recover in the next few months more than it had lost in these last few weeks. The greatest advantage of all to British industry would be the removal of the constant source of unsettlement which has hung over business in these islands for many years. Coal measures are still there and they are the richest in Europe. They have one superiority over all the coalfields of the world in one respect—that they are within easy access of the sea. That will always enable British coal to come first in natural markets and to keep other industries going within cheap reach of our ports. Nothing that either Mr. Cook or Mr. Evan Williams can do or Mr. Baldwin fails to do can deprive Great Britain of this supreme natural advantage. When the fumblers have all ceased to muddle, British coalfields will have a chance to reap that advantage.

WOMAN'S ESTATE IS WILLED TO CHARITY

A group of men will gather one day this week, probably Tuesday, in the vaults of the Mercantile Trust Co., to open a safe deposit box and thereby determine the value of the estate of Miss Sidonia E. Loehr, real estate dealer, who willed the bulk of her fortune to charity.

In the group will be her attorney and executor, Bruce Starke, a representative of the bank, and an agent of the State Inheritance Tax Department, which will collect its share of whatever Miss Loehr had. Estimates of her fortune range upward from $50,000, but until the box is opened, her attorney does not know how much she owned in addition to the apartment building at 6972 Clayton road, Richmond Heights, in which she lived and died. She left with her executor keys to this and other buildings, but he has not determined whether she owned all the buildings.

Started Work at 13.

Miss Loehr, who was about 60 years old, died Saturday from a complication of diseases and was buried Monday in Valhalla Cemetery beside her mother, Mrs. Mathilda Straube Loehr, who died in 1909. Her father, Adalbert Loehr, died years before that. Miss Loehr is survived by a sister, Miss Adeline M. Loehr of 1203A Delaware avenue, and several cousins in St. Louis, Fenton and St. Genevieve, Mo.

Beginning her business career at the age of 13, when circumstances compelled her to quit school and go to work as a clerk for a photographer, Miss Loehr steadily advanced herself by hard work and thrift. In 1916 she resigned as cashier of the Hagerman-Fitzcimmons Real Estate Co. to enter the realty field for herself.

At first her office was downtown, but later she had headquarters in her apartment. She was a well-known figure along Real Estate Row on Chestnut street.

Provided $1000 for Monument.

The will, filed at Clayton, directs that funeral expenses be paid and a monumental shaft to cost not more than $1000 be erected on the family lot in Valhalla Cemetery.

A specific bequest of $20 is made to her only sister, Miss Adeline M. Loehr, with the comment, "this being all the interest I desire her to have in my estate." Other specific bequests are $5000 to Miss Eglantine Jordan, daughter of the late Dr. G. A. Jordan, Hospital Commissioner, "as a mark of appreciation for the many kindnesses bestowed upon my mother and myself by her father"; $5000 to Dr. John C. Lebrecht, for "loyal and skilful medical atention"; $2000 to Mark Anderson, president of the Title Guaranty Trust Co., for "courteous and efficient advice to me on many occasions"; and to Mary Holwell of 3934 Evans avenue, $250 and Miss Loehr's jewelry, household goods and apparel, for assistance in carying out funeral directions.

Charitable Requests.

The rest of the estate is placed in trust of Attorney Starke, and Dr. Martin J. Glaser, 3550 Hawthorne place, with instructions to convert it into cash and distribute as follows:

Shares of one-tenth each to the Humane Society of Misouri, Convent of the Good Shepherd, Father Dunne's Newsboys' Home, Blind Girls' Home, Salvation Army, and shares of one-twentieth each to the Oblate Sisters of Providence, Little Sisters of the Poor (North Side branch), Little Sisters of the Poor (South Side branch), St. Louis Provident Association, St. Vincent de Paul Society, St. Anthony's Hospital, Deaf Mute Institute, Memorial Home, 2609 South Grand boulevard, and Home of Friendless, 4431 South Broadway.

FRENCH PRESIDENT GIVEN PIANO AND DUN FOR $200

Customs Authorities Call for Duty When Gift From America Is Received.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 10.—An American piano house that presented President Doumergue with a sample has placed him in a rather embarrassing position. With the notice that the piano had reached Havre came a request from the customs authorities to pay 6000 francs duty.

As a nonpiano-playing bachelor, the President had no great use for the instrument, and the idea of paying some $200 on it offered no attraction. Consequently, he wrote to the Customs Department to explain that he had only accepted the present from courtesy, not to hurt the feelings of the donors, but that he had regarded the gift as having been made to his office rather than to him personally. He added that he intended to leave the piano at the Elysee Palace on the expiration of his term of office, in the hope that it would be of more use to his successor. Therefore, he asked the authorities that M. Doumergue, the private individual, ought not to be asked to pay the duty.

The officials, after consulting all the texts available, informed the President that the point could only be settled by the Minister of Finance. The Minister at the time was M. Peret, but before he could give his opinion he had resigned, and the President still is anxiously awaiting the day that his successor will be able to tear himself away from saving the franc long enough to decide this delicate question.

ORDINANCE PLANNED TO CURTAIL SPEEDING

Driving Over 25 Miles an Hour for Even a Block Would Convict Motorist.

Driving at a speed in excess of 25 miles an hour for one city block or farther would be made conclusive evidence of speeding, under a proposed new traffic ordinance drafted by the Safety Council and the Automobile Club of Missouri, which it is intended to submit to the Board of Aldermen this Autumn.

The present speed ordinance has been held unconstitutional by Judge Gayer of the Court of Criminal Correction, who hears appeals from Police Court convictions. As a result, the police have had to adopt a roundabout method of handling such cases, by placing charges of careless driving.

Some lesser changes in the city's traffic code are proposed in the ordinance draft, which was submitted to the Executive Committee of the Safety Council by Robert E. Lee, president of the council, and indorsed.

Says Action Is Imperative.

"Speeding has become a menace here," Lee declared. "Action against it is imperative. Some people have become imbued with the idea that St. Louis has no speed ordinance and think they are immune from penalty. The proposed change will put teeth in the speed law, and its adoption will result in curbing the present tendency. The purposes of the pending ordinance will be twofold; first, it will definitely fix the speed law at 25 miles an hour, as distinguished from the present law, which declares that the motorist must drive so as 'not to endanger the life or limb' of any person, and second, it will enable a rigid definition of what constitutes reckless driving.

"Our State law provides that the city shall not fix arbitrary speed laws, in contravention to the State laws, unless every road leading into the city is properly placarded showing what the speed limit is. The new law conforms with the provisions of the State law and will obviate the necessity of placing signs on the various roads entering the city.

Would Aid the Police.

"The new law also will materially aid the police, who have been handicapped in their campaign against speeders through the weakness in the old law. It will enable them to arrest persons who have been prone to drive their cars in reckless disregard of the rights of others, and have enjoyed a great deal of immunity because of the difficulty of presenting conclusive proof of reckless driving.

"The new law also would enable the police to bring into courts many of those persons who are driving cars outside the congested district at a rate of speed in excess of 25 miles an hour, and would permit the arrest of those who drive carelessly in the downtown district on careless driving charges."

AIR SERVICE PROMOTIONS

Two Lieutenant-Colonels Recommended for Grade of General.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Promotion of Lieutenant-Colonels William E. Gillmore and Frank P. Lahm of the Army Air Service to the grade of Brigadier Generals is understood to have been recommended to Secretary Davis by Major-General Patrick, chief of the air service.

Under the air bill creating the two additional generals, Col. Lahm would have charge of air service operations and be placed in command of Kelly Field, Texas, while Col. Gillmore would become supply officer and continue his present station at a headquarters here.

Col. Lahm now is stationed in San Francisco as air officer of the Ninth Corps area.

ACCIDENT VERDICTS IN TWO AUTO CASES

Pastor Testifies Sylvester Shaw Stepped Directly in Front of His Machine.

A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned yesterday in the case of Sylvester Shaw, 64 years old, of 6222 Easton avenue, who was struck Thursday night in the 4200 block of South Broadway by an automobile driven by the Rev. George A. Percival of 5316 Geraldine avenue, pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church. The minister testified that Shaw stepped directly in front of his machine, which he said was moving at 15 miles an hour.

By coincidence a son and daughter of Shaw were at the scene and saw his prostrate form in the street without recognizing him. They explained at the inquest that their parents were separated and they had not seen their father for a year. He died at city hospital later.

The son, Lester Shaw of 7927 South Broadway, was driving a car just behind that of the Rev. Mr. Percival, and the daughter, Mrs. Ruth Stroup, of the same address, was seated in a car parked across the street.

The Coroner's jury also returned a verdict of accident in the case of William Wein Sr., 70 years old, who lived with his son at 1517 Compton avenue. He died at city hospital Thursday night from the effects of a fractured left leg and shoulder and internal injuries suffered at 2 p. m. June 26 when he was struck by an automobile while crossing the street in front of 1509 Compton. Kenneth Eckler, 21, 2707A Ann avenue, operator of the automobile, who was arrested at the time, was rearrested when Wein's death was reported.

ABSENT-MINDED PAINLEVE SAT DURING 'MARSEILLAISE'

Former French Premier at Banquet Nearly Hit by Hard Roll for His Error.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 10.—Former Premier Painleve, Minister of War in the Ninth Briand Cabinet, has long been known as the most absent-minded politician in France. But his crowning achievement has consisted in forgetting to stand up when the "Marseillaise" was played, and in the presence of the President of the republic.

"Who is that low communist up at the Speaker's table who refuses to rise when the national anthem is played?" one indignant guest asked of another at a recent banquet.

M. Painleve, utterly oblivious to the music and the entry of President Doumergue, was sitting quietly studying, the menu. Only for the fact that Marshal Foch, who was beside him, nudged him in time, he might have received a hard roll thrown by the indignant guest.

"Generally, Mr. Minister," Foch remarked with a twinkle in his eye, "military music does not make people dream, and the 'Marseillaise,' I have never found to be exactly a lullaby."

M. Painleve blushed.

BARONETCY LAPSES AT DEATH OF SIR PHILIP BOURNE-JONES

Succeeded as Portrait Painter and Was Cousin of Kipling and Baldwin.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 10.—The baronetcy of Sir Edward Burne-Jones has lapsed with the death of his only son, Sir Philip Burne-Jones, who was a bachelor.

Sir Philip Burne-Jones, 65 years old, had the artistic temperament of his illustrious painter father and achieved considerable success in portrait painting, although he never showed any of the genius of his father which made him the idol of the Victorians.

Sir Philip was a cousin of Rudyard Kipling and also a cousin of Premier Baldwin. The mothers of the three men were sisters, daughters of the Rev. G. B. MacDonald, a celebrated Wesleyan minister and classical scholar. A fourth daughter of this clergyman was the wife of Sir Edward Poynter, president of the Royal Academy.

Sir Philip was entirely out of sympathy with the extreme tendencies of modern art.

TWO YOUTHS, ARRESTED FOR THEFTS, CONFESS TO POLICE

They and Four Others Caught When Watch Is Set on Picker Street House.

Two of six youths arrested Friday in a house at 1521 Picker street have confessed a number of robberies and automobile thefts, according to Capt. Kirk of Soulard District Police Station. The boys were arrested when police, acting on anonymous information, threw a guard around the Picker street house.

Those arrested described themselves as Henry Kaiser, 19 years old, of 1521A Picker street; Ira Poore, 19, of 1521 Picker street; Alex Yozits, 19, of 1728 Waverly place; Herber Appleby, 20, of 1029 Julia street; Aulick Smith, 19, of 1410 Dillon street, and Albert Furnace, 18, of 1044 Julia street.

Butler Bros. have occupied the building since its completion.

Several months ago Butler Bros. bought the block bounded by Lucas avenue, Morgan, Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, as a site for a new building, but negotiations with the Joliet company obviated the removal. It is understood the new site may be used for a new warehouse for the merchandise concern, which has a number of branches beside that in St. Louis.

Butler Bros. now occupy as a warehouse, the eight-story building at the southeast corner of Thirteenth street and St. Charles street under a lease with a 30-day vacation clause in event of sale.

The building, construction of which has just been started, was sold from the plans to a syndicate composed of Sol Kaiser, Erving Nobach and Edward M. Thornhill, a director of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange. Negotiations were handled by Nathaniel M. Glick, president of the Glick Real Estate Co., representing Fishman & Harris, builders and grantors. Approximately $300,000 was involved, with substantial profits to the grantors.

The new building, when completed, will have 40 efficiency apartments and five stores, yielding $40,000. A number of the apartments and stores have been leased.

The site of the old Harney livery stable on the east side of Kingshighway, just north of Delmar boulevard, recently was sold to a syndicate headed by A. Blair Ridington, with plans for a $1,000,000 improvement, the character of which has not as yet been announced. This project is being handled by Theodore L. Remmert, now living in Country Club Court on Hanley road, adjoining on the east, will take possession of his new residence this week. This house will be open for inspection today.

The interiors have been enhanced with Crafttex finish, with a bronze and gold touch, Huttig Satin brand millwork and Austrian cloth shades. Kitchens have rubber tile floors and washable ceilings and walls and suction fans. Open fireplaces of California tile are a feature. Every labor-saving device available has been installed.

Plans have been completed for the remaining 24 to be built, and which will range in cost from $20,000 to $40,000, the operation involving with the land more than $1,000,000, according to Remmert. These houses will exceed in cost those of Country Club Court.

A total of 18 houses was erected in Country Club Court, at a cost of more than $500,000, including the land. All of these residences, which were only recently completed, have been sold, except one.

Remmert began his career in the construction field less than five years ago, with Gurney Court, on Magnolia avenue, just east of Kingshighway. This section was built up with houses of an attractive type and sold within less than two years. This addition is one of the show places of Tower Grove section.

The Charm of Sherwood Forest
Is the newness and grandeur of the homes, where the outlook from one is upon another equally as beautiful, because all are situated among large oak trees; it is the surroundings that make a house a home and anyone wanting the last word in a home see 479 Sherwood drive, with its commanding view up the winding streets to east and south; there is an open fireplace in the sunroom as well as in the living room; one also in the master bedroom, which bedroom by the way, has a very large private bath and marble shower; there is also another complete tile bath on the second floor; lavatory on first floor.
Or look at 464 West Jackson road; it, too, is a fine home, with hot-water heat, first-floor lavatory, tile bath with shower; 2-car garage. Both of these owners are anxious to sell and will make the price right.

THESE NEW HOMES OPEN TODAY FOR INSPECTION BY THE PUBLIC

Two Beautiful Nine-Room Residences in Surroundings of Surpassing Beauty

Why Pay High Rent When You Can Buy Homes Like These on Terms That Will Be Satisfactory to You?

There is no more exclusive residence district around St. Louis than that in which these houses are located, only 7700 west. It is ideally situated for high-grade homes, as just south is Country Club Place, East Country Club Court and west and north will be improved with attractive residences. The drive to the city along either Forsythe or Wydown Boulevards through Forest Park cannot be surpassed anywhere.

THE LOTS ARE ABOUT 90 FEET BY 300 FEET; SODDED, PLANTED WITH SHADE TREES AND BEAUTIFULLY LANDSCAPED

Not only are these residences well constructed and furnished with every modern convenience, but the interior decorations are of unequaled beauty. The exquisite craftex with which the walls are finished throughout forms a very effective background for the burnished gold and polychromed ornamental cove mould, imposing pillars, arches and stairway on the first floor. The reception room is large, the living room and dining room spacious. The four large bedrooms on the second floor are light and airy, each one furnished with a full length beveled plate glass mirror in the closet, on each side of which are attractive electric light brackets. The lighting fixtures are very new and made especially for these homes by the Roman Art Co. Huttig's Satin Brand mill work is used throughout.

Nothing like these homes have ever been built for sale. You cannot afford to miss inspecting them. If you need a smaller or larger house let us build and finance it for you.

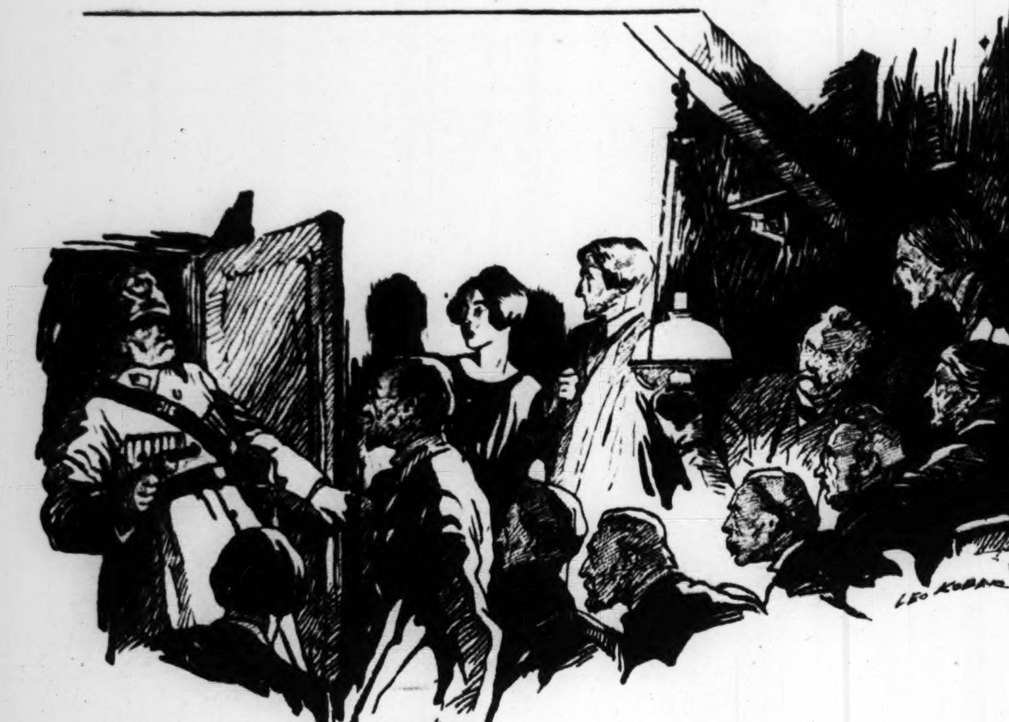
The ARCH-CONSPIRATOR RULES IN POLAND



Socialist, Imperialist, Swashbuckler, Plotter and Patriot, Pilsudski Is Master Where Twice He Was Condemned to Die, and Twice Refused a Presidency.

WARSAW, Poland.

ROMANCE has come into its own. A man twice sentenced to die on the ramparts of Warsaw Castle has twice refused the presidency; a warrior who had never won a significant battle before has by force of arms become the dictator of his country; a poverty stricken and hunted editor sits as Secretary of War in the Cabinet and bends the Government to his will; a Polish swashbuckler has become a German scientific Socialist; and a conspirator—whose haunting of cellars and whose hundred disguises, whose plots and mysteries and counterplots again have made him a figure that might have stepped out of a novelist's nightmare—sits in supreme command of Poland.

The condemned man who would not be President, the untried soldier who sits as Secretary of War, the swashbuckler turned Socialist, the plotting and disguised conspirator who is now dictator—these are one and the same man: Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, whose putsch, in the latter part of May, has made him the most curious and intriguing figure in high politics today.

He is "the man on horseback" of the Polish hour. And he sits in his house at Sulejowek puzzling out his nation's problems, what time he is not in Belvedere Palace serving as understrapper to his own underling, as Secretary of War in the Cabinet of President Ignatz Moscicki, whom he named to that high office after his own refusal of it—simply by signifying that it was his will. "Militarist," say his enemies. "Socialist," say his friends. Perhaps the greater truth is that General Pilsudski is a revolutionist—and was born that way.

FOR Joseph Pilsudski was born of a family long distinguished among Polish revolutionists. Hatred of Russia he imbibed with mother's milk, and hatred of Russia led him on in the strange adventures and conspiracies of a career that has no equal in the twentieth century. He was born in 1867, and that same year one of his uncles was hanged for his part in a conspiracy against the Russian Government. The same year his grandmother and two of his aunts were thrown into prison by Russian authorities. They, too, were revolutionists. Young Joseph's grandmother became blind in a Russian dungeon. His father, not long after the boy's birth, was forced to flee his home at Zulow in the old Russia Government of Vilna and remain in hiding for several years to save his neck. The estate was confiscated. Somehow, Pilsudski's mother, a brilliant woman whom Henry Sienkiewicz immortalized in his novel, "The Deluge," managed to keep together her flock of children. Then an older brother, Bronislas, sent to the Charkow University, became involved in an anti-Czarist conspiracy and was sentenced to serve 20 years at hard labor in the Siberian mines.

Later Joseph went to Charkow. Within a few months the ardent young Pole had organized a secret patriotic society among his fellows. The first venture of the great conspirator was a failure. He was expelled.

That failure opened the way to his success. He returned to Vilna and found his way about among the revolutionists in his native district. Soon admitted to their councils, he became their acknowledged leader. And now he made his first "tie-up" with the Socialists.

The Polish people are not economists. They are idealists. Their patriots live in a world of dreams. It is an age-old feud, that between the Poles and Russia. Patriotic fervor, religious faith and chivalric tradition served to keep it alive. The Russian, an invader, of a different faith, and owing allegiance more to an Oriental than a Western civilization, was hated not alone because he was a conqueror, but because he was a Russian. Ever present was the thought to free the necks of the Polish people from the oppressor's yoke. The victory would be for God as well as for country, and against a barbarian, too. Yet the Poles, as revolutionists, were as futile as were the Irish in their attempts to free themselves. There were melodramatic gestures. There was little done.

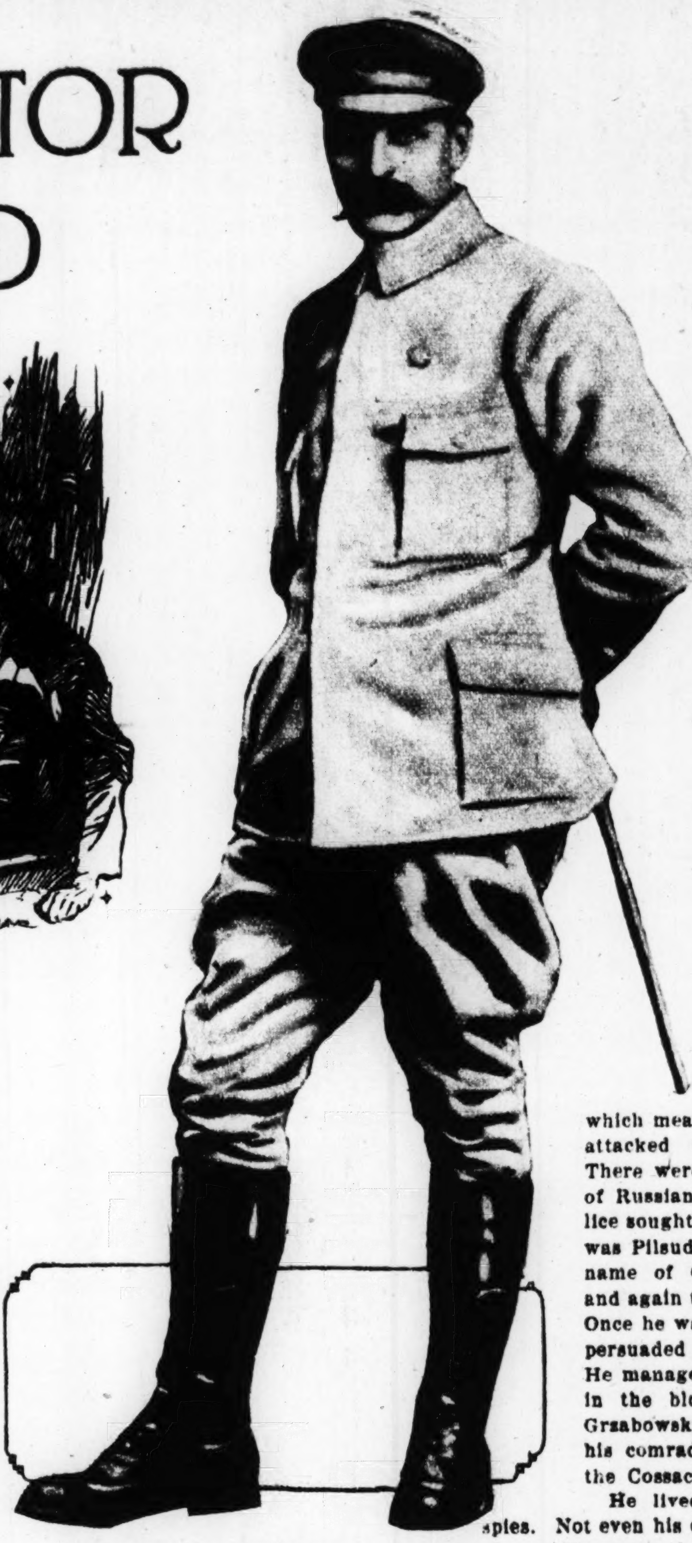
PERHAPS the youthful Pilsudski grasped at first at the possibility of allying to himself any enemy of the Russian Czar. In any event he became involved with the Socialists. In the Polish Revolutionary Society, which he founded, he united the Socialists to the political revolutionaries. And in the end he had become convinced. He was a Social-Democrat, a Socialist as well as a patriot. His putsch of last May was provoked by the crying need of such reforms at home as America would call "socialistic." The breaking up of the large estates of the aristocrats and their division among the peasant class was a cardinal principle.

Said Pilsudski, speaking to his followers on the eve of the National Assembly which tendered him the presidency for the second time: "Once before I had the greatest power any man in Poland ever had. I would not rule with the whip, but summoned the Diet. I did not have to summon the Diet. I did it of my own volition. But the Polish people did not revive as I had expected. They have shown personal courage, but they have only developed parties and disputes. They have abused the freedom of democracy, and that touched me nearest, because I am a convinced democrat."

In his 10-minute speech this Socialist had mentioned whips five times. And twice the whip, according to his figure, was held in his own hand.

That is significant of the man. An idealist in aims. A "direct actionist," ready at once to appeal to force, to gain those aims.

It was so when the Polish Revolutionary Society was being formed by him some 40 years ago. Something, the society felt, must be done to arouse the world to consciousness of Russia's injustice to the Poles. And the inner council of ten decreed that Czar Alexander should die, that the world might know. Carefully they planned. Slowly they moved toward their goal.



JOSEPH PILSUDSKI.

The meetings of the 10 men were held in secret places, in low dives, in criminal dens. Entrance might be had by password only. And at every meeting the password was changed.

The Ten gathered one night in an infamous resort in a suburb of Vilna. With them there were two women conspirators. Among the 12 there, one was a Judas. Cossacks surrounded the tavern at midnight. There was the stamp of boots and the crack of the nagajka, the dreadful Cossack knout. Eleven of the 12 were arrested. Pilsudski was sentenced to Siberia—for five years. Just 40 years ago he started on the clanking tramp to Siberia to serve his sentence.

At once, almost, he was plotting to be free. Three Nihilists had a scheme afoot. To the prison came a beautiful young Russian woman who pitied the Pole and gave to him her sympathy. He confessed the plot.

"Impossible," she said. "If you must go, I will help you, but it is certain death. Think of your mother, I beg of you. Think of yourself. Think of me." He stayed. The three Nihilists were shot to death in an effort to break away. Pilsudski served his five-year term.

He had paid in full, but he wasn't free. Russia banished him from his beloved province of Vilna. He went to Lodz.

AVOWEDLY, now, he was a Socialist. He wanted to organize the people of Poland in preparation for a socialistic democracy. Once organized, he wanted to create an army that was to drill in secret and—be ready.

He went to work. As a printer. He joined various workers' societies. He helped to smuggle to the workers the forbidden socialistic literature of Germany. He called himself "Ziuk." He went hither, yonder, somewhere else. He was organising, now, the Polish Socialist Party.

Joseph Conrad, another Pole, once wrote a novel the plot of which concerned a revolutionist conspiracy. The Anglo-Saxon reader smiles. "Impossible," he says. "Too melodramatic." Yet Conrad might have taken his fiction mysteries from Joseph Pilsudski's fact.

From factory to factory went Pilsudski, now called Ziuk. He formed the workers into groups, which met secretly. Each three groups elected a delegate to the Council of Threes. The Council of Threes sent representatives to the Grand Council. There were passwords, and cellar meeting places. And midnight convocations. But there was also work. A newspaper made its appearance. It was called Robotnik, which means Laborer. Police were attacked and sometimes killed. There were attempts on the lives of Russian officials. Russian police sought the editor. The editor was Pilsudski, who had taken the name of Comrade Ziuk. Again and again they almost caught him. Once he was in their clutches and persuaded them he was a waiter. He managed to lead the marchers in the bloody demonstration of Grzabowsky Square, where 300 of his comrades were shot down by the Cossacks. But he escaped.

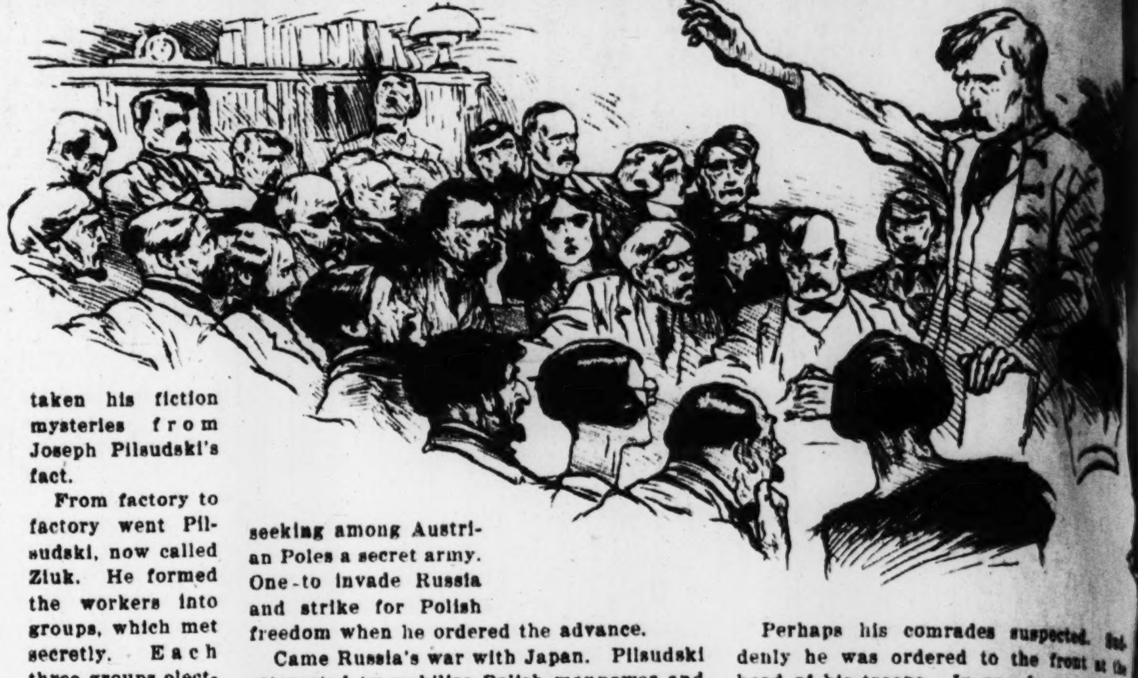
He lived in constant fear of spies. Not even his closest friends knew his plans. He spent the night with comrades wherever he might be, seldom staying at home save when it was needful to work on the newspaper which he printed there. He had made the acquaintance of an actor and had learned the art of makeup and disguise. Not even those who knew him best could always recognise him.

One night in the spring of 1900 Pilsudski summoned to his room The Ten—the inner council of the Polish revolutionaries. A spy sat in that room. Some of them suspected that. It may have been such a suspicion which caused Pilsudski to summon them. They sat at a table handing about and discussing a copy of Robotnik, just wet from the press, which stood in another corner. Then tramping boots. The police were upon them. Those who resisted were beaten into submission. Pilsudski was handcuffed and sent under heavy guard to the police headquarters. Two months later he was sentenced to die. In Cell 10 he lay in the Warsaw citadel—whence, like so many other patriots, he was to march forth to meet death.

PILSUDSKI was never one of the many and he didn't die as the others had died. Friends outside found a way to communicate with him within. "Feign insanity," they wrote. Dr. Patek, a young Polish physician, told him by letter how to simulate the "persecution delusion." Pilsudski refused to eat. He would not drink water of which the Warden had not tasted first. It was convincing. Pilsudski was ordered to Leningrad (then St. Petersburg) for confinement in the Fortress of SS. Peter and Paul, while doctors studied his case. Friends were there, too. One of the physicians was Dr. Mazurkiewicz, a Pole, who had procured appointment as psychiatrist to that institution for just one purpose. He smuggled Pilsudski a surgeon's uniform. He guided him outside the walls. The arch conspirator was free. The Polish doctor had accomplished what he'd planned.

Then he lived in Vienna, in Paris, in London—wherever the Polish exiles needed an organizer. In Paris he married Marja Jurkiewicz, his first wife. She was a beautiful Jewish girl and a revolutionary. There was no place for priests in their ceremony. They simply married themselves by contract. That was that.

Pilsudski couldn't stand the inactive life of a political exile. He went to Austria, and at Cracow began again his plotting. He was seeking among Austrian Poles a secret army. One-to invade Russia and strike for Polish freedom when he ordered the advance.



Came Russia's war with Japan. Pilsudski attempted to mobilize Polish manpower and rebel against Russia in that lucky moment. The plan failed. He sought then to place his Polish Legion in the service of Japan. He escaped to America and thence to Tokio. A rival followed him. "He is a visionary and a dreamer," said the rival. "Thanks," said Japan to Pilsudski, "but how is it you Poles do not agree among yourselves?" There was an end to things. Pilsudski, out of his effort, had gained only a trip around the world. But he wouldn't rest.

He invaded Russia, still at war, with a secret army, which harried the rear of the Czarist forces. The commander of that army was "Witkor." "Witkor" was Joseph Pilsudski.

He learned that 400,000 rubles were on a train bound for Warsaw to pay off the Czar's soldiers. With bombs and revolvers he and his invisible army halted that train at Rogow by tearing up the railroad tracks. With bombs and guns they drove away the soldier guards, after killing half of them. And they took the gold. "Witkor" left a receipt for it and gave the money to the Socialist party. Raids on military trains netted machine guns. A Russian ammunition factory was dynamited at Lodz. Masked men of the invisible army challenged Russian soldiers and shot them down on Warsaw's streets. The lives of high officials in the provinces were taken by the fighting force of "Witkor."

YET at the same time, disguised, Pilsudski lived for weeks in fashionable hotels in Warsaw, disguised as a German merchant, and at Lodz had publicly appeared in the uniform of a Russian officer.

Once he procured the uniform of a Russian Colonel and with forged orders took charge, with six "soldiers," of 10 condemned political revolutionists whom he was to convey to the forest beyond Praga and execute. Of course, he freed the 10. He had become a Robin Hood sort of hero to his people, and then the Russo-Japanese War ended. The Czar grew more brutal in repressing Polish patriots. Pilsudski fled to Austrian Poland.

There he started again to organize a secret soldiery. His "rifle clubs" were to be a Polish Legion, if Fate struck the hour for Poland's independence. And Fate did strike the hour. In 1914 the World War blazed up. Pilsudski offered his "rifle clubs" to the Central Powers, seeking to put them into the field against Russia. He was commissioned as Captain and sent to recruit in Poland.

For a Captain to rise to a General's command in the old Austrian army of Franz Josef was a mere matter of time—of 40 years of time. Pilsudski telescoped those 40 years into one.

His Polish legion was a part of the army now. And Austria needed more such legionnaires. In different disguises Pilsudski traveled back and forth through the Russian lines, always bringing recruits from the Polish conscripts under the Czarist flag. He started one night across No Man's Land with a detachment of 400 Poles. Russian guns opened on them. Only 300 of the deserters survived to reach the Austrian lines. That exploit won Pilsudski the rank of Major. He wasn't satisfied. He threatened to quit. Austria designated him a General. Austrian Majors, Colonels and Generals were wroth.

Russia collapsed. Poland's enemy now was Austria. Only the Central Powers need she fear. Pilsudski now organized, within the Austrian army, a Polish army. "Polska Organizacja Woyanna," he called it ("Polish Military Organization"). It created its own arsenals. When Teutonic pressure got too strong in Poland it blew up a few German munitions factories. At Warsaw, his headquarters, Pilsudski was living a strange double life. By day he served as a General in the Austrian forces. By night, in disguise, he went about the city perfecting, compacting his organization, which was ultimately to turn the Austrians and Germans out.

Perhaps his comrades suspected. Suddenly he was ordered to the front at the head of his troops. In one day on the battlefield he lost one-third of his legionnaires. And still he received an order to storm and take the Russian position. To do so was death. To refuse was a death almost more certain. And he refused. Pilsudski would not have upon his head the blood of these, his fellow fighters.

He was arrested, court martialed, sentenced to die. They took him again into the Warsaw citadel to await death. And then, by a strange war fortune, his sentence was commuted and he was interned in Cracow.

FOR two years he waited there in seeming inactivity. Yet during those two years his secret army increased to 50,000 men. They were armed and drilled and awaited the word. Pilsudski never gave that word. General von Gaesler ordered him and his men to take an oath of allegiance to Kaiser Wilhelm. Pilsudski refused. He forbade his legionnaires to do so. They obeyed and General Pilsudski was haled before a court, questioned and sentenced to spend 10 years in the military prison of Magdeburg.

Fourteen months he stayed there. They were the last months of the war. Revolution flared in Berlin. The people overthrew the autocracies of Middle Europe. Pilsudski went free.

He was off for Warsaw. In that city 40,000 people greeted him in welcome. His Polish Legion would have no other man to head the army of reborn Poland. It escorted him to Belvedere Palace. They offered him all power. They called him Chief of State. In February, 1920, two years later, the Diet unanimously conferred on him that title. He was President and Poland was free. A little later he married for a second time, his bride being the Ruthenian girl Schorbenska who, in the days when he posed as a Russian Lieutenant to save revolutionists' lives, had been his accomplice.

In November, 1921, he resigned as President of Poland. Parliament had interfered, preventing the success of his pet plan of incorporating Vilna in the Polish State. A President had no power, he said. "True patriot," his friends declared. "Imperialist," said his enemies. He retired to Sulejowek to watch affairs from his private estate.

But watching was not waiting. Quiet is foreign to Pilsudski. Patriot and conspirator is he by birth. Army friends surrounded him there. His army continued to adore him. He was consulted about this and that. He did not hesitate in his opinions. Things were not going right. He said so. He wanted to see his country a success. So did others. They thought Pilsudski could make the country a success. So did he.

THUS the stage was set for the putsch of last May. The plans were made. An excuse was seized upon. Pilsudski's troops revolted and marched against the Government. President Wojczechowski — who had roomed with Marshal Pilsudski when the latter was a fugitive in London — went to meet him. The Marshal immediately demanded that the President dissolve the newly organized Witos Cabinet. Wojcsechowski remonstrated at the demand, and at the troops which Pilsudski headed. He ordered the Marshal to withdraw his legionnaires, go home and consider himself under arrest.

Pilsudski started back. "Do you mean to resist me?" he asked.

"With all my power," said the President.

The soldier made a gesture of impatience. A young cadet accompanying Wojcsechowski lowered his bayonet, directing it toward Pilsudski.

"You miserable scrap of a kid," cried the old General, "are you actually aiming that popgun at your Marshal? Why, you are in my own school.

"And you, too," he said, turning to the President, "with my military medal on your breast. Do you mean to turn your sword against me?"

He waited for an answer. Then, impatiently: "Am I to be forced to take the city?"

Take the city he did. The President fled. Pilsudski seized all power. He called an election and was himself elected. "Take another man," he told the Diet. "Take another man. The Constitution does not give me enough power as President."

The patriot-plotter has helped to free his country, had won himself her highest honors. But neither quite would satisfy.

In a Little Cottage in New Orleans She Did Her Own Housework for Many Years. The Death of William Edenborn, the Husband, Makes Her the Mistress of a Huge Fortune.

SHREVEPORT, LOUISIANA.

DURING their 50 years of married life Mrs. Sarah Drain Edenborn stood at the side of William Edenborn and helped him make and save a fortune placed by preliminary estimate at $76,000,000. She might have had castles to preside over, but she lived in a humble 5-room cottage on a New Orleans side street and did her own cooking and her own washing. Now that William Edenborn is dead and she, as his sole heir, is mistress of his colossal fortune and president of the railroad that he built, she still might live in a castle and command a regiment of servants. But that is not in her line. She has spent most of her 68 years as a housewife and a housewife she remains. Great riches never did change her and it is unlikely that they ever will.

Simple people of modest tastes were the Edenborns. Conspicuously so for millionaires. They owned virtually every spike in the Louisiana Railroad & Navigation Company's 700 miles of track, but Edenborn carried his lunch when he went traveling and slept in a berth of a cast-off Pullman which served as his private car.

He had checking accounts ranging from $100,000 to $200,000 in half a dozen Louisiana banks. Once he wrote a personal check for a million dollars to insure payment of his employes on time, but they never owned an automobile or paid more than $50 for an outfit of clothing, and the most extravagant diversion of the inseparable couple was their regular week-end sojourn on an old ferry boat used for giving the L. R. & N. train a lift across the Mississippi River. On this dingy old craft they used to ride up and down the 12-mile ferry stretch from Angola to Naples from early Saturday afternoon until late Sunday night.

THEY seldom went to shows. They never entertained with any degree of formality, but they were kind to their railroad's employes, and it is doubtful if there was ever a man in the State who came to his death with more friends at his command than William Edenborn had when he died in the Schumpert Sanitarium here a few weeks ago. Hundreds of friends and employes ranging from section hand to vice-president of the railroad thronged Forest Park Cemetery on the day of the funeral to honor the memory of a once poor immigrant boy who elevated himself from a peddler's beat to a position of tremendous power in railroad and manufacturing circles and in so doing never became "too good" to stop in the yards and sit on a rail while he chatted with one of his switchmen or firemen. His employes mourned his death as that of a father and they covered his grave with a mountain of flowers. Those who couldn't attend the funeral did not forget to render homage. On that day all trains on the L. R. & N. stopped for ten minutes and their crews, with bared heads, turned their faces toward Shreveport while the casket was being lowered. With Mrs. Edenborn—"Aunt Sarah" they call her—they mingled their tears. She had been a mother to them as "Uncle Billy" had been a father. Then, when "Aunt Sarah" succeeded her husband as president of the L. R. & N. and became the only woman railroad president in the United States, they stood behind her to a man.

As a railroad executive Mrs. Edenborn is as yet, of course, an unknown quantity. She is primarily a housekeeper rather than a business woman, and 68 is an age somewhat advanced for breaking into a new line of activity. She is president largely by virtue of the fact that she owns some 99 per cent of the stock and possesses appointive power. She may step from the limelight by selling the railroad at an early date. Negotiations for its sale to the Kansas City Southern have been in progress for several weeks past. And again, even if she holds on to the road, she may keep out of the administration to a great extent by leaving the active business affairs to her more experienced subordinates.

But it is safe to say that if the L. R. & N. remains an Edenborn property she will see that her husband's program of service to mankind is carried on. With service as its watchword—service even at a financial loss at times—the L. R. & N. was built up into the veritable "gold mine" it now is. Edenborn was not especially in need of a money-making property when he built the road back in 1896. He built it as a hobby, a plaything. He had already made an immense fortune in barbed wire manufacture. As sole owner he was therefore not hampered by demands of shareholders for dividends and was able to subordinate the considerations of earnings and freight volume to that of service to the territory his road traversed. In the long run, his system paid enormous profits, but he never allowed his two cardinal principles to be forgotten. His standing orders to his officials were:

"Get the produce of shippers to market on schedule," and "See that the pay car moves on time."

HE followed those two principles religiously. Once he sent a special train to carry an unprofitable shipment of goods which had been overlooked or missed by a regular train. And while the railroad was struggling along on slender revenue he drew on his own account without hesitation if it seemed that the press of finances would make the road's employes a day late in getting their wages. It was on such an occasion he drew the check for a million dollars.

Closely associated with her husband in all his ventures since their marriage in St. Louis in 1876, Mrs. Edenborn grew familiar with every detail of his business and his policies. She was his constant companion. She used to accompany him regularly on his business trips between New Orleans and Shreveport, living as he lived in their private car and cooking their meals when they went on outings on the ferry boat. Their devotion to each other and their perfect accord in all things was ever a matter of comment. It may have been that Edenborn's success was due as much to her ideas as to his own. Nobody could pick out this move or that and say that it was wifely influence cropping out or that it was characteristic of Edenborn alone. It was characteristic of both. They lived alike, acted alike and thought alike. That is why a story of one must necessarily be a story of both.

Mrs. Sarah Drain Edenborn. From an old photograph.

In this five-room cottage the Edenborns lived for many years after they were millionaires.

A fortune of $76,000,000 couldn't change William Edenborn any more than it could change the phase of the moon. The difference in financial rating never entered into his personal relations with his fellows. Neither can the fortune that is now his widow's alter her attitude or her habits of life. Besides being mistress of a railroad, she is now mistress of the Central Louisiana Construction Company, mistress of the Urania Lumber Company, a great corporation with immense timber holdings; she is mistress also of some 200,000 acres of rich Louisiana land. But she is still unpretentious retiring "Aunt Sarah." She is still not above doing housework and lending a sympathetic and attentive ear to the troubles of her most humble employes. If the trouble happened to be illness in the family, as likely as not she would sit up all night ministering to the sufferer herself instead of hiring a nurse. That is her way. She believes that anything worth doing at all is worth bestowing personal attention upon.

It was that way with the cooking and other housework and with the entertaining of guests. About three years ago when her husband purchased a new line of railroad from Shreveport to McKinney, Texas, a hundred or more Louisiana business men were taken on an excursion of inspection through the new L. R. & N. territory.

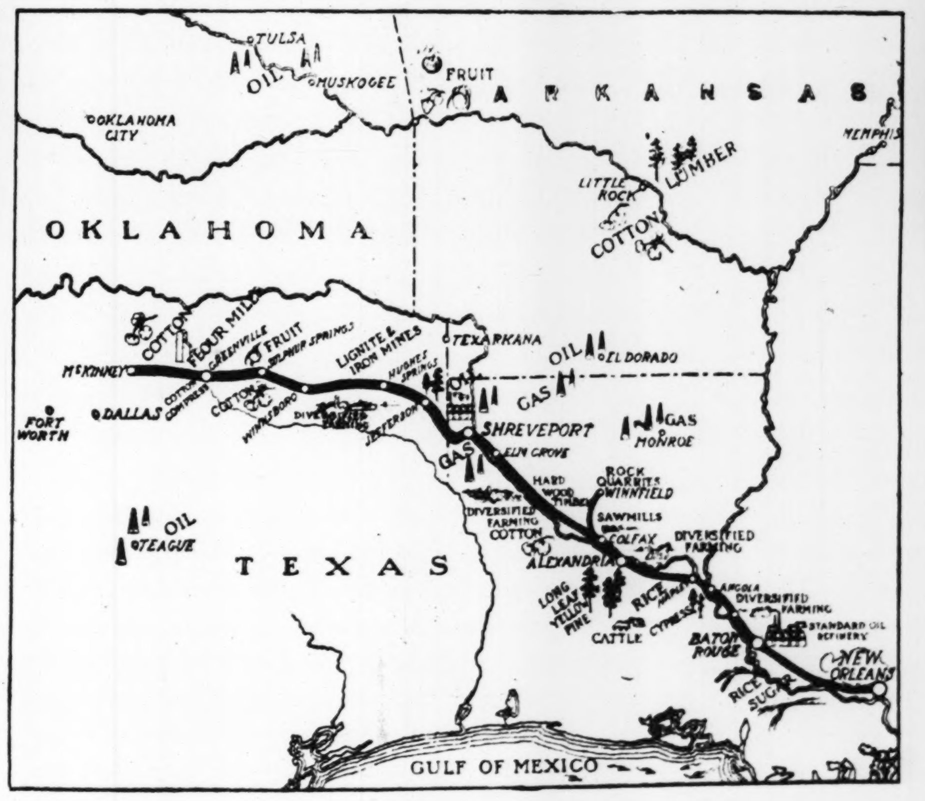
DURING the two hours they spent on the Angola ferry, sandwiches and coffee were served, but even this was not left to the hands of servants. Into the boat's kitchen went Mrs. Edenborn, mistress of millions. Side by side she worked with Mrs. William Dippel, wife of the ferry boat's captain, and with two Negro maids, slicing ham and chicken. As hostess she felt it was her duty to take a personal hand in the preparation of the food. When some of the guests sought her they found her there, her sleeves rolled up and her hands so greasy that she had to stop and wash before she could greet them. After the work was done, she sat in the kitchen for a half-hour conversing with her visitors.

That incident was described to the writer by one of the L. R. & N. executives as characteristic. And this description was in keeping with Mrs. Edenborn's appearance. Of medium height and weight, with her once dark hair now turning white, and with her mild blue eyes possibly a little milder than of yore, she looks and acts about like any kindly housewifely grandmother of average means would look and act. Certainly she doesn't fit in with any traditional conception of a railroad president.

Railroading, however, was not the field in which the Edenborns rose to fame and wealth. Although it occupied the latter 25 years of William Edenborn's life and added considerably to his fortune, already great, it was, in strict analysis, only a diversion of his declining years. The story of the struggling and, ultimately, the conquering Edenborn is properly a romance of steel, a romance of that most unromantic commodity—barbed wire. And St. Louis, the city in which he met and married Sarah Drain, was the scene; an old mill building at Main and Gratiot streets, the setting.

BORN in Westphalia, Prussia, in 1848, Edenborn landed in this country at the age of 19, a penniless adventurer. His first job was painting oil barrels for the Standard Oil Company. Later he started peddling and advanced from the "pack-on-the-back" class to that upper stratum of peddlers who ride in wagons. Then he went to work in the Pennsylvania steel mills, cashing in on a bit of earlier mill experience gained in Prussia. By the time he had reached St. Louis early in the seventies he had saved a little capital. It was then he launched into the wire business with F. M. Ludlow as his partner. Their wire mill set up in the old building at Main and Gratiot was the first in St. Louis. Besides barbed wire, hoopskirt frames and wire nails were numbered among its products.

It might have remained just an ordinary third-rate wire mill as it was originally had not Edenborn proved to be an inventor as well as a mechanic, a steel worker and a few other things. Being an inventor, he set himself to work to devise methods for cheapening the process of barbed wire manufacture, and he succeeded. The machinery he constructed and patented made it possible to cut the cost of barbed wire from 11 to about 2 3-4 cents a pound. This was the stroke that was to make him rich, but there were to be many troubles ahead.

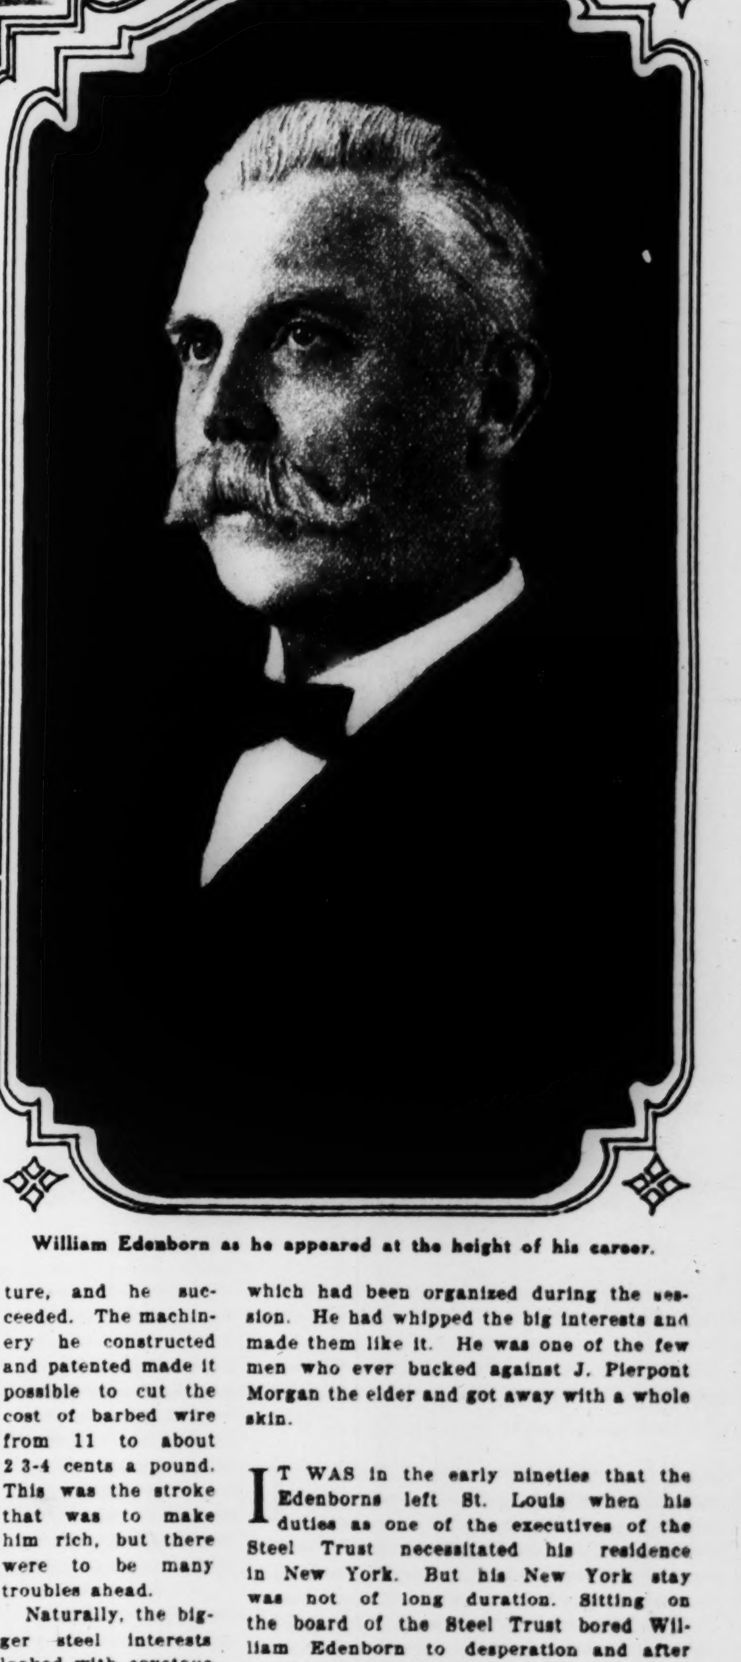


The territory of the L. R. & N. in Louisiana and Texas.

Naturally, the bigger steel interests looked with covetous eyes upon his patents. A group of financiers said to have been identified with J. Pierpont Morgan and the Steel Trust angled for them awhile at a price less than $500 and when he refused to negotiate they began crowding him. If he would not sell out, they are said to have informed him, they would undersell his products at a loss to themselves until he should be forced out of the field as a competitor. Finding him still belligerent, they raised the offer by surges to a million dollars and eventually to three millions. Still Edenborn would not sell. Financiers were amazed to see the independence with which this obscure wire maker continued to defy the powerful Morgan group. It seemed inevitable that he should be forced to the wall. But aside from Edenborn's determination there was another factor at work on his side.

THAT factor was the powerful financier, John W. Gates. Gates knew a good bet when he saw it. He was keenly alert to the trade possibilities offered in the great Southwest, which was then being opened. He was quick to realize the potentiality of Edenborn's cheaper process for making wire. He also loved a fight. What, then, was more characteristic than that he should bet on William Edenborn? It is not clear just how much money, if any, Gates actually put into the wire manufacturing business. It seems his role was that of guarantor rather than investor and that he simply stood by the struggling manufacturer as assurance that Edenborn need not fear annihilation. Anyway, the alliance weathered the storm of price cutting. Finally, when it became apparent that the Edenborn-Gates combination could not be beaten, the St. Louis wire maker was summoned to Chicago and there followed one of the most spectacular conferences in this country's financial history.

For 48 hours, it is related, that conference was in session without a recess. Through two days and nights the battle raged behind closed doors, William Edenborn standing alone against five or more representatives of the powerful steel interests. Details of the conflict probably will never be known. Outsiders could only guess at what was going on within the walls of that council room, but when it ended William Edenborn walked out with $13,500,000 for his patents. Besides that he had dictated agreements under which he was to receive royalties on every foot of barbed wire manufactured by the Edenborn method. And he emerged also as head of the United States Steel Wire Corporation which had been organized during the session. He had whipped the big interests and made them like it. He was one of the few men who ever bucked against J. Pierpont Morgan the elder and got away with a whole skin.



William Edenborn as he appeared at the height of his career.

IT WAS in the early nineties that the Edenborns left St. Louis when his duties as one of the executives of the Steel Trust necessitated his residence in New York. But his New York stay was not of long duration. Sitting on the board of the Steel Trust bored William Edenborn to desperation and after a few years of it he quit.

"I'm accustomed to deciding myself what I want to do," he is reported as saying. "I don't intend to spend the rest of my life talking."

He did not completely sever connection with the steel interests until about 1903, but several years before he had definitely transferred his affections to another field.

Edenborn was essentially a builder and, being a builder, he could not long remain satisfied unless he was building something. It was probably for that reason as much as any other that he chose railroading when, in 1896, he cast about for something to keep him interested and busy in his declining years. When it came to the selection of a promising field he showed the same sound judgment he had displayed before in the wire business, for he chose the potentially rich valley of the Red River in Louisiana as the territory he would serve. He built the 400 miles of track from Shreveport to New Orleans at his own expense, doing much of the engineering work himself, and he kept it a one-man railroad until the end. It wasn't very profitable at first. Indeed, it had a hard struggle for a time to make ends

Laughed His Way to Success—Went Wrong; Still Laughs

Ed Dolson Was the Village Banker and His Laugh Was One of the Bank's Best Assets, Leavening the Day's Loans and Softening the Pangs of Payment.

Ed Dolson, laughing when he was caught.

McCUNE, Kansas.

WHEN Ed Dolson was a boy he was a laughing mischief-making boy. He loved laughter. He was always looking for things to laugh at. Making occasion for laughter, if need be, out of the discomfiture of others. Sharp as a tack. Up to tricks. In trouble often, wiggling his way out of it and coming up laughing. Often taken to task. Quickly contrite, then, and forgiveness quickly winning. As quickly offending again.

Not a bad boy. Just full of devilment. Life was a game. His wits were his weapons. He was quick to seize an advantage and joyed in gaining a point. He was a small-town Methodist preacher's son, and the family was none too prosperous. He learned early to grapple with the world and, by fair play or nimble trick, to get the best of it. Laughing over his little winnings and looking about for another chance. That was Ed Dolson, the boy, as he is remembered around McCune and in other places where his father preached.

When Ed Dolson was a man he was still a boy. Life was still a game and he liked playing at it and laughed when he won. Laughed, too, when he lost, but it was a different sort of a laugh. Never content until he had won and earned the better laughter which belongs to the winner. Facing tasks that a man must face, but facing them with a boy's buoyancy.

It was the dearest wish of the Rev. H. I. Dolson to see his son well established in life. As a small-town Methodist preacher he could not hope to help the boy much. He seems to have possessed business capacity. McCune, where he lived and preached, was a village of no consequence, sitting squat on the plain, but it was the center of a prosperous farming section and it needed a bank. A vision came to the Methodist preacher. He would organize a bank for McCune and make his son a banker.

The bank was organized, with the usual small capital, and the Rev. Mr. Dolson, retiring from the ministry, was president of the bank and at different times Postmaster and Mayor.

ED DOLSON, out of the grammar school, was sent to Baldwin for a course at a business college and came back and was put to work in the bank, with his destiny marked out before him. He would be, after a while, cashier, the town's banker, and the years would bring him a fair share of wealth and a definite distinction. The preacher's dearest wish would be realized.

The boy fitted well into the plan. He was capable. The banking business appealed to him. He saw in it chances for the exercise of his wits, which he had never underrated. It was a game he would like. Everybody called him Ed and everybody liked him, even those in whose recollections were tricks which he, as a younger boy, had played on them. That was one thing that heads might have been wagged about. His devilment. But no doubt responsibility would steady him.

With Preacher Dolson as president no time was lost in pushing the youngster along and he was still practically a boy when he was made cashier and intrusted with the management of the bank's affairs, subject only to the indulgent supervision of directors headed by his indulgent father. Ed Dolson was getting on.

Through the prime years of his manhood he was the town's banker, winning the best success which it was in the power of the town and countryside to bestow. His proofs of prosperity were accepted without question. A banker was supposed to be prosperous. He developed a rotundity of person that betokened him as well fed and possessing peace of mind. He was still very much like the boy that he had been when McCune first knew him. The same twinkle was in his brown eyes, the same hearty laughter came from his lips. He dressed very well and drove a good car and comported himself generally as a person of easy circumstances.

The new story that came to town was delivered forthwith at the bank, for there it was sure of prompt acceptance at its full face value by the jolly cashier, and he took an hour off, if necessary, to pass it along, finding as hearty enjoyment in the last retelling as he had found in the first hearing.

It was an asset, Ed Dolson's laugh. Care-driven men whose affairs were not going well came into the bank and talked with Ed and his laugh lightened their hearts and renewed their hopes. Of course, it was all right for Ed Dolson to laugh. He was the town banker. He had the use of everybody's money. He never had any financial troubles. He could laugh. Not that anybody would have had him more sober. They liked Ed and they liked his laugh. The money that was borrowed at the bank was the more valuable because of the laugh that came out through the wicket with it. The interest was paid with less of a pang because of the reward of the cashier's laugh.

Dolson, as was seemly in a person of his importance, had married and established a home. His wife was June Evans, daughter of a substantial citizen. They had one child, a daughter.

Now, Ed was 40 years old and he had been with the bank 21 years, and for the greater part of that period had been its cashier and manager. The years had been well spent. The bank was doing a good business. A remarkable business, really, considering its small capitalization and the small community that it served. The books that were shown to the directors and to the bank examiner when he came along showed large deposits and correspondingly large loans on what seemed to be high-class security.

Of course, these might have been phony books, filled with entries of bogus transactions, backed by fictitious collateral, but nobody suspected anything of the sort, and nobody discovered anything of the sort.

Collateral, which seemed good, was sent from time to time to other banks and was accepted by them without misgivings, which helped to keep Dolson in funds.

Prosperous farmers and cattlemen who had put their savings into bonds brought the bonds to Dolson's bank and handed them across the counter. "For safe keeping," they said, and, "Why, certainly," said Dolson, and the laugh always lurking behind his bright eyes came out and did its part, and the bond owner, tarrying longer than was necessary over the transaction, went away with full assurance that his bonds were safe in the hands of Ed Dolson.

The only criticism remembered to have been spoken concerning him was that, with increasing prosperity, he had developed a tendency to show off a little. He drove finer cars and gave bigger parties and wore fancier clothes and draped his watch chain from one upper vest pocket to the other. But it was very indulgent criticism. McCune, in fact, was proud of its banker. The more he preened and pranced the greater was McCune's glory, for what other town of 800 inhabitants could point to such a bank and such a banker?

Then there began to be whispers that the banker was departing from the homely virtues upon which his success had been builded, and was "stepping out," as some of the wiseacres called it. Specifically, he had been seen paying pretty attentions to a widow who lived thereabout, or so it seemed to chance observers, and soon it was the talk of the town. For proof there was the vouched-for recital that Ed and the widow had been seen together in Ed's car. It may have been all right. The widow may have had business with the bank. But Mrs. Dolson was in ill health and was away part of the time. McCune was quick to draw conclusions. Perhaps, though, after all, it was no more than was to be expected. When a man who had started poor became rich he sometimes acted up like that.

IN SEPTEMBER, 1921, a bank examiner dropped in and began going over the books. His coming was inopportune. Dolson had been a little careless. It was among the probabilities that the examiner would find something wrong.

"I'm going across the street to get a cigar," said Dolson. "Be back in a minute."

"All right," said the examiner, and went ahead with his work.

Dolson entered a restaurant across the street, passed out the rear way, stepped into his automobile there and was driven out of town. His drive ended at Pittsburg, Kansas. There he took a train. He has not been back in McCune since.

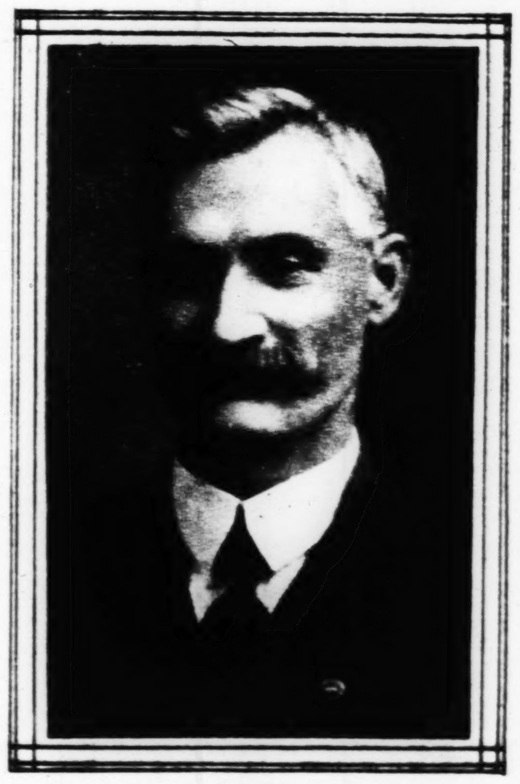
The report at first was that the bank's shortage was $25,000 or $30,000, but when the investigation was completed, and a check had been made of the bond owners who had left their bonds with Ed for safe keeping, it was found that Ed Dolson had made away with $200,000 of the money that had been placed in his hands by people who trusted him.

They remembered how he had laughed with them when they took him their money and their bonds and they wondered if he wasn't sometimes laughing at them and if he wasn't perhaps laughing the louder at them now. They were forthright men, the men who had trusted Ed Dolson, and it filled them with rage to have been made fools of, as Dolson had made fools of them, and it is just as well, perhaps, that they could not get their hands on him. Which, if Dolson knew it, may not have given him great concern. He may even have laughed about it, for it is easy to laugh when one is far away and feels himself safe.

It was all plain enough, now that Dolson was gone and the examiner had a free hand, unhindered and unhelped, how the cashier had kept things covered up, while laughing with the bank's customers—or at them. He had two sets of books, one for the edification of the directors and the misleading of the bank examiner, and another containing a true and faithful record of the bank's transactions.

The discrepancy between the one and the other was represented by falsified deposits and loans and added to the discrepancy were the bonds which had been left for safe keeping, all of which were gone. The stealings had extended over 10 years.

Kansas has a State bank guaranty fund for the protection of depositors. The best that could be done with the assets of the Farmers' State Bank of McCune was to pay depositors 12 per cent. The remainder needed to fully reimburse them was drawn from the guaranty fund. So they lost nothing. There was nothing for the stockholders and bondholders.



Sheriff J. D. Turkington, who set the trap, laughs last.

Dolson was indicted on ten counts and a reward of $600 was offered for his arrest. McCune waited. It expected to wait a good while. It knew Ed Dolson. Catching him wouldn't be so easy.

For five years Dolson was a fugitive. It was a new game for him. He played it for all it was worth. It was more exciting, even, than stealing the bank's money and getting by with it. When he was doing that there was always the good chance of making his getaway. If he was caught in this new game of hide and seek, it would be prison for him. He laughed as he dodged his pursuers.

Knowing that he would be safest where the crowd was thickest, he made the cities his hiding places. He carried nothing away with him, he says, having lost all of his stealings in unhappy investments, so he had to work. He obtained employment with an encyclopedia publishing company and worked in various cities selling books. It is not to be doubted that he found something to laugh at even in this, for it must be funny for a man with a lively sense of humor to sell to unwilling buyers the books that they don't want.

Once in a while, in the crowd, he saw the face of somebody he had known back at McCune. If it was the face of a person he thought he could trust, he acknowledged his identity and there was a little visiting together and then they parted and Dolson was again lost in the crowd. If it was the face of someone he thought he could not trust, he met the situation with a stony stare and passed on. And probably laughed, later, over his escape.

Word came, from time to time, that Dolson had been seen at one place or another, but there were no clews that could be followed and it began to look like he never would be caught. When J. D. Turkington was elected Sheriff of Crawford County, more than a year after Dolson's disappearance, one of his unproclaimed ambitions was to capture that elusive person. He had reason to think that sooner or later Dolson would communicate with somebody at McCune. The fugitive's wife had died. His daughter had married and was living in Pittsburg. If there had been communication between Dolson and his relatives nothing had ever been intercepted.

One night a telegram came to McCune. It was addressed to a man who had been Dolson's closest friend. It directed him to be at a Pittsburg hotel, at midnight, to answer a telephone call. It was sent from the Seelbach Hotel, Louisville, Ky., and was signed E. Rust.

Sheriff Turkington, in some way, knew about the telegram. The man at McCune was not the sort to be receiving telegrams from distant cities, giving him mysterious instructions to be somewhere at midnight to answer a telephone call. Who might this E. Rust be?

Through some mischance the McCune man was not at the hotel at midnight. The Sheriff was there, sitting at an extension phone. The clock struck 12. Over the wire came a call for the McCune man. The clerk answered it. He could not hear distinctly, or so it seemed. What name? Spell it, please. Oh, yes, Walker. What initials? B. A.? C. A.? P. A.? Oh, D. A. No, Mr. D. A. Walker wasn't there.

"Well," said the voice at the other end of the wire, "tell him to call room 529, Elks Hotel, Louisville. Thank you. Good-by."

All the time Sheriff Turkington had been listening to that voice. It was strangely like the voice of Ed Dolson.

Then the Sheriff did some calling of his own. "Get me the Chief of Police at Louisville, Kentucky," he directed, and in a very short time he was talking to the Chief's office in Louisville.

"Go to room 529, Elks Hotel," he requested. "There you will find a man 5 feet 6, 180 to 190 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, cataract scar in inside corner of one of his eyes. Left eye, I think. Calls himself E. Rust. Right name, Ed Dolson. Arrest him. He is waiting for a telephone call."

There was more information to guide the officers in questioning the man for, the Sheriff warned, he was a slick one and would slip through their fingers if they didn't watch out.

DOWN at Louisville, Night Chief Bossung and Detectives Stucker and Monroe were quickly at the Elks Hotel. The night clerk was obliging. Yes, there was a man in 529, but he was registered as H. E. Jones. Some kind of a book agent. There had been a woman staying there, too, and the two had been working together, but the woman had gone away. His description? Well, about 5 feet 6, heavy set, maybe 180 pounds, black hair, brown eyes. Any mark on one of his eyes? Well, yes, there was something peculiar about one of his eyes.

The officers exchanged glances and asked for a bellhop. "Front," called the clerk, and a boy came. "Ice water to 529." The officers went with the boy. There was a light in 529. The boy rapped. A man opened the door. He was fully dressed, although it was well past midnight. The officers stepped in. The man exhibited nothing more than mild surprise. Yes, he was Mr. Jones. No, he was not Mr. Dolson. No, he had never been at McCune, Kansas. Yes, he was perfectly willing to step under the light so that his eyes could be seen. In the inside corner of the left one was a cataract scar.

Would he mind stepping over to police headquarters? Not at all, but he supposed the officers were bonded. If he went over there and it was found, as it would be, that he was not the man they wanted, he would sue them on their bonds. They hesitated and stepped out into the corridor and consulted. "What do you say?" said the Chief to the two detectives. "It's him," they answered. He nodded. He stepped back into the room. "You are under arrest," he said. "Oh, all right," said Dolson, and he laughed.

AT HEADQUARTERS they searched him and found a copy of the "Rust" telegram and Walker's reply, promising to be at Pittsburg at midnight, and assuring him that Walker would "try to arrange that matter." How did he explain having these? Very simple. He had a friend named Rust. Left yesterday for Florida. He remembered now that Rust had been at McCune, Kansas, and had had some trouble there. Probably the telegrams referred to that. Rust had left them lying on the table in Jones' room at the hotel and Jones had picked them up and thrust them into his pocket. He couldn't for the life of him tell why he had done it. Just one of the things that a man will do in an absent-minded way.

There was a letter to "Dear Daddy" from his daughter at Pittsburg. That? He laughed. Well, you see, he was a married man and, going about the country, he met women and there was one that, he remembered now, had said she lived at Pittsburg, Kansas, and she had written to him, calling him "Dear Daddy." The gentlemen would understand.

"You fit the description," they told him. "The sheriff said you are slick. You are slick all right, but not quite slick enough." Dolson laughed.

Bossung called Sheriff Turkington. "We've got your man," he said.

"Hold him till I get there."

"You bet."

WHEN Sheriff Turkington arrived at Louisville, "Jones" was lined up with other prisoners. The Sheriff went up to him and extended his hand. "Hello, Ed," he said. Ed shook hands with him and laughed. "You seem to think you know me," he said. "I know you, all right, and you know I know you," retorted the Kansas Sheriff.

There was a little more sparring and then Dolson laughed. "The game is up," he said. He came back without a requisition.

He stepped jauntily from his cell in Girard jail. He was well shaved and well brushed. His watch chain was draped across the front of his vest.

There was a wariness about him which may not have been the product, entirely, of five years of hiding in the crowds. Ten years of mishandling funds entrusted to him might have had something to do with it. But it was a jovial wariness at that. It suggested nothing so much as the attitude of one who engages in a playful encounter, confident but taking no chances, ready to laugh if he gained the advantage.

There were things that he was willing to tell and things that he had no intention of telling and he would see to it that he was not led into telling them. There had been a shortage and it had occurred when he was in charge of affairs. He was responsible for it. He was to blame for it. Nobody else was. But as to how the shortage occurred and as to how he kept the books so as to cover his tracks for 10 years—those were little reticences to which he felt himself entitled.

He would say, though, that he did not carry anything away with him when he left. Conjectures that he had were not correct. He was a poor man then. And what he wanted to do, when he went away, was to make enough money to cover the losses that his friends had suffered through him. His plan had been to accumulate enough to make restitution and then come back and do the square thing and take whatever punishment might then be meted out to him. As to the prospect of being able to do this, he had been doing pretty well selling books. Yes, it was true that he had only $2 and some odd cents in his pockets when he was arrested, but he let it be inferred that his resources were not limited to his visible assets.

Selling books was not exactly what he would have preferred to do, but it had its advantages. He moved about a good deal. It would not have done, you know, for him to settle down somewhere and go in business or anything like that. It would probably have resulted in his capture earlier, and that was one thing, naturally, that he wanted to avoid.

IT WAS pretty clear that his conscience had not troubled him greatly. He hadn't wasted away. Probably that was because he had convinced himself that there wasn't really any great moral turpitude involved in what had taken place back here at McCune. He had merely borrowed the money, fully intending to repay it after he had made more money with it in his little investments. These investments did not turn out well and he lost the borrowed money and could not repay it. That was all. He beamed genially. It was just as simple as that.

His arrest, as he looked at it, was unfortunate. It upset his plans for making restitution. He had been near to a realization, or a partial realization at least, of the purpose which had actuated him ever since he went away. Within a short time he would have had things shaped up so that he could have made good a part of the losses that his friends had sustained. Now—

He still wanted to make restitution to the stockholders and bond-owners and he would if they gave him a chance. That is, if they didn't put him away too long. No, he didn't feel that he owed the depositors anything. The guaranty fund had taken care of them. If he went up he would be paying the price for what he did with the depositors' money, wouldn't he? It seemed to be his idea that it wouldn't be such a bad bargain, for he laughed.

The Story of BILLY THE KID

Sentenced to Die, and Wearing Handcuffs and Leg-Irons, the Captured Outlaw Obtains Bell's Six-Shooter by a Trick, in a Game of Cards, Kills Two Guards and Rides to Freedom, While the Town of Lincoln Stays Indoors

The first installment of "The Story of Billy the Kid" appeared in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch Magazine. It told of Billy's early life and his adventures in the Lincoln County cattle war up to and including the famous three days' fight at Lincoln, where the Kid escaped in a hail of bullets from the burning McSween home, as though he bore a charmed life. The story is condensed from "The Saga of Billy the Kid," by Walter Noble Burns, recently published by Doubleday, Page & Company.

PART TWO.

BEFORE the three-day battle at Lincoln (described in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch Magazine) Billy the Kid had killed Sheriff Brady, leader of the Murphy faction. The three-day battle virtually ended the Lincoln County war. General Lew Wallace, sent to New Mexico as Governor, offered amnesty to all participants who would lay down their arms. He arranged a conference with Billy the Kid, promising pardon if he should be convicted after standing trial for Sheriff Brady's death. Billy the Kid refused and rode away, gathering other desperadoes, outlaws and killers to his banner. Heading a raid of his rustlers on a cattle herd, he killed Joe Bernstein, a tenderfoot. Later he killed Joe Grant, a desperado who wanted to get him first. Fort Sumner was his headquarters. Into Fort Sumner drifted Pat Garrett, six-feet-four, and a cow hand. Pat opened a restaurant. Beaver Smith made him partner in a store and a saloon. Pat and Billy the Kid became warm friends.

Then John Chisum, who had been Billy's friend, aroused the citizens to open a war on the rustlers, and Pat Garrett, also the Kid's friend, was chosen Sheriff to direct that war.

Billy spent his twenty-first birthday in revelry at White Oaks and took a farewell shot at the feet of Deputy Sheriff Woodland as he rode from town. It was a challenge Pat accepted. Deputy Sheriff Will Hudgens took up the pursuit. There was a skirmish at Coyote Springs. They followed the Kid to Jim Greathouse's roadhouse, where Billy, in a moment of suspicion, killed Jim Carlyle, who was pleading that the outlaw surrender. Billy announced he would spend Christmas Eve at Fort Sumner. Pat Garrett rode hard and got there. Tom O'Folliard was killed, but the Kid escaped. Two days later Garrett and his men, who had ridden through the snow, surrounded Billy the Kid in a cabin at Stinking Spring, at dawn. Charlie Bowdre fell. Garrett's strategy had unhorsed the Kid and his comrades. To his former friend Billy the Kid surrendered.

AT MESILLA in March he was tried for the murder of Bernstein and acquitted, then, immediately, for the killing of Sheriff Brady, and found guilty, and sentenced to be hanged. Taken to Lincoln, he was lodged in a room above the Murphy store, manacled hand and foot, and under guard day and night. Over him were Deputy Sheriff Bob Ollinger and Deputy Sheriff J. W. Bell. No two men on earth hated Billy the Kid so bitterly.

"Don't you or Bell ever let the Kid see the color of your back," said Sheriff Pat Garrett to Bob Ollinger. "Keep your faces to him and your eyes on him every minute. You never can tell what's in that boy's mind. He's got a mighty deceivin' smile. There's murder back of that smile of his."

Billy the Kid's smile was almost as famous as his trigger finger. He smiled in victory, he smiled in defeat. His cool daredevil smile was a part of him. He smiled still in the shadow of the gallows. With death closing in, his smile was as lighthearted and boyish as in his days of freedom. He cracked jokes and laughed at the jokes of others. His talk was light, casual, touched with humor. He seemed less a man about to die than a youth anticipating happy years.

In the whisky glass of life that he had drained, one drop remained, and that drop was hope. He retained his gambler's faith in the break of the luck. The one chance in a million that had saved him before might save him again. The cards had run against him. He had lost. But the game was not yet quite over. He still had one white chip left. This lone white chip was his courage. If the cards broke his way just one hand, he would bet his white chip as if it were a million dollars. That was the way he played the game.

Night and day the Kid was kept bound hand and foot. The steel shackles on his wrists and ankles were never removed. He ate with them on, slept with them on. The chain that held his hands together was six inches long; that which bound his feet, twelve inches. If he took a drink of water or a smoke, he must lift cup or cigarette to his lips with both hands. If he walked the floor for exercise, his steps were perforce short and mincing. Imprisonment between four walls was hard on a youth whose life under the blue sky had been as free as the wind that comes and goes; but harder still were the shackles that changed him, whole-limbed and full of restless energy into a helpless cripple.

DEPUTY SHERIFFS OLLINGER and Bell kept him under constant surveillance. During most of the day, both were on duty; one always, night and day. If he raised his manacled hands thoughtlessly, they watched the gesture with suspicion. If he tossed in his sleep, a pair of cold gray eyes quickened to keen alertness in the dim light of the midnight lamp.

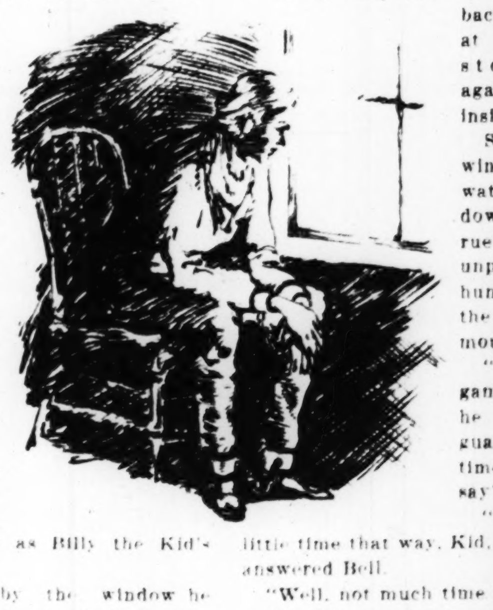
The two deputies differed in character as night from day. Ollinger was a devil. Bell, a man. Ollinger kept up his nagging torture. He gloated over the Kid's unhappy fate. He longed with the eagerness of consuming hatred for the day of the Kid's death. The thought of seeing his enemy choking at a rope's end filled his soul with voluptuous thrills. With the Kid helpless in his power, he took delight in tormenting him, playing with his victim with the purring malice of a cat with a mouse. He harped upon the gallows; he dangled the hangman's noose constantly before the Kid's eyes.

"Good morning, Kid," was his daily salutation. "One day less between you and the rope."

Though Ollinger's hatred grew more intense as the days went by, Bell's gradually diminished, until at last it merged into pity that was akin to friendship. Bell was a tall grim-looking man, with a livid knife scar across his cheek, but at heart he was generous and kindly. The mercilessly cold-blooded murder of his friend Carlyle at the Greathouse ranch had inflamed Bell with bitterness against the Kid. But with the gallows looming to wipe out the score, Bell was filled with the sympathy of a magnanimous spirit. The pathos of the Kid's situation softened his heart and he felt only pity for the slim youth, pale from months of imprisonment, bound hand and foot like a mad beast, yet bearing up with cheerful fortitude and smiling bravely as death drew nearer hour by hour, day by day, with the slow momentum of inevitability.

THE old Murphy store in which the Kid was held prisoner was the largest building in Lincoln.

The Kid was quartered in the courtroom, a great bare chamber 60 feet long by 50 wide, that occupied the entire east side of the second story and was lighted by six windows, two in front overlooking the street, two at the back and two in the east wall. At the rear of the chamber was the Judge's bench on a low dais, the jury box at one side and at the other the witness stand and a railed-off inclosure where the clerk and other court attaches had their desks. A door in the west wall gave upon a wide hall that ran through the center of the building. At one end of this hall a door opened upon a roofed-over second-story porch along the front of the building, reached from the street by stairways at either end. At the other end of the hall was a room known as the armory, in which rifles, six-shooters and munitions of war were stored for emergency use by Sheriff's posses in that unsettled time. Just in front of the armory a stairway led down from the hall through a walled-in passage which, halfway down, turned at a sharp angle to the left toward a ground-floor door opening on a rear courtyard. Across the courtyard stood the little adobe jail, deemed too precarious for the confinement of such a desperate character as the Kid, and another small building which served as a jail kitchen and the sleeping quarters of Old Man Goss, the jail cook.



The Kid's sleeping cot was in the northwest corner of the courtroom, with the cots of the two members of his death watch near by. His prison chamber was at least light and airy. The window in the east wall, near the front, is known today as Billy the Kid's window.

From his box seat by the window he watched the homespun drama of village life. It was his daily amusement. Upon the comings and goings in the street, humdrum commonplaces, trifling incidents, he passed his criticism and comment.

Tilted back in his chair against the wall, Bob Ollinger sat at ease. With a casual gesture he brushed a straggling lock of his long lank hair over his shoulder and adjusted his sombrero, tilting it slightly on the side of his head.

Ollinger had a double-barreled shotgun lying across his lap. He broke it at the breech.

"Look here, Kid," he said. "See these two shells?"

"Going quail hunting?" Billy smiled.

"Each one of them shells is loaded with nine buckshot. Try to escape. I wish you would. I'd like to see you kickin' at a rope's end, but, when I come to think about it, I believe I'd rather murder you myself. Go ahead and make your break and you'll get 18 buckshot between your shoulder blades."

"Eighteen?" The Kid gave a little sneering laugh. "That's too many to waste on a slim young fellow like me. But 18 would be just a nice fit for a man of your size. It would be a joke if you happened to stop those 18 buckshot yourself. Eh, Bob?"

Footsteps sounded in the hall. The door for a moment framed the impressive figure of Sheriff Pat Garrett.

"I'm riding to White Oaks this morning, boys," he said to the deputies. "Got to see about the gallows. Get some timbers freighted over right away. Not much time left. Going to try to find a good carpenter, too."

"Hurry up with that gallows, Pat," remarked the Kid. "Ollinger can't sleep good till it's up."

"So long, Billy."

"Adios, Pat."

Sheriff Garrett was off on the road to White Oaks.

NOON came. It was the dinner hour in Lincoln. Ollinger rose and stretched himself.

"I'll step over to the hotel and put on the feed-bag, Bell," he said. "Won't be gone over an hour. When I come back, you can go for grub."

He turned at the door and patted the shotgun held in the crook of his arm.

"Eighteen buckshot, Kid," he snarled. "Don't forget what I said. Make a break and you get 'em right between the shoulder blades."

On his way out of the building by the back stairs he stopped at the armory and stood his shotgun against the wall just inside the door.

Standing in the east window, Billy the Kid watched him swagger down the road to Larue's store. A cryptic unpleasant little smile hung for a moment at the corner of the Kid's mouth.

"Let's have a little game of monte, Bell," he drawled to the guard, "to pass the time. What do you say?"

"Might as well kill a little time that way, Kid, if it'll amuse you," answered Bell.

When it was monte and Bell dealing, the Kid balanced himself on top of the table to be above the layout in a position that made it easy for him to put down his bets with his manacled hands. Now Bell took a seat in a chair at the table, and Billy, as was his habit, perched himself on the table top, his shackled feet resting on the seat of a chair.

"You bank, Bell," said the Kid. "I'll buck the game."

The Kid shot one shrewd furtive glance at Bell's six-shooter. Bell was wearing it today without a scabbard, stuck down his pants leg on the right side, between his shirt and his belt. As Bell sat down its muzzle rammed into his flesh. With a casual gesture, he adjusted it, pushing the handle slightly farther back toward his hip. Then, taking up the deck, he shuffled it with the ease of old familiarity, riffling the cards like a faro dealer, giving them deft cuts that made a slapping noise.

"Help yourself to chips out of the matchbox, Kid," he said. "Ten matches the limit on a card."

"Bueno, muchacho."

Bell began to deal. He pulled a few cards from the deck and laid them face up on the table. His monte layout began to assume form.

"I'm out for blood this game," warned the Kid jovially.

"Coffee talks."

"Bet $10 on that deuce of diamonds."

Bell went on turning. The bet lost and he raked in the matches with a laugh.

The Kid edged over a few inches farther toward the center of the table—a few inches closer to Bell.

"I'll beat this deal yet," he said. "No game's lost, Bell, till the last card's played."

Again a cryptic little smile hovered for a moment at the corner of his mouth, which Bell didn't see, being busy dealing. And again the Kid hunched over slightly nearer the center of the table—slightly nearer Bell.

Bell pulled out the jack of hearts and laid it on the table.

"Jack of hearts, eh?" laughed Billy. "That's my luck card."

"Luck run in hearts?"

"In bullets mostly. But in hearts sometimes. Knock off the limit, Bell. Make it the ceiling. I'll bust the bank on this play or lose my last white chip."

Bell shook his head with a good-natured laugh.

"Ten matches are the limit."

"Once over in San Patricio," remarked Billy, "when I was dealing monte"——

He reached out his manacled hands to place his wager of 10 matches, when, seemingly by accident, he brushed the jack of hearts off on to the floor at Bell's left side.

"Didn't mean to do that Bell," he apologized. "Hard to play with handcuffs on like this."

"That's all right, Kid. I'll get it."

Bell bent over to pick up the card. Holding the deck in his left hand, he reached for the card with his right. To do so, he had to turn slightly away from the table. For a fraction of a second his head dipped below the level of the top, his eyes intent upon the card on the floor.

IT WAS Billy the Kid's chance in a million, for which he had been waiting for weeks, with the deadly patience of a panther. As Bell stooped, the butt of his six-shooter projected within reach of the Kid's hand. Leaning across the table the Kid snatched the weapon. When Bell raised his head, he was looking into the muzzle of his own gun. He rose to his feet, knocking over the chair. He staggered back a step, his face abruptly white, his eyes wide.

"What the hell, Kid!"

"Do as I tell you, Bell, and be mighty quick about it," ordered the Kid in crisp sharp tones. "Don't make a false move. You're a dead man if you do. I don't want to kill you. I'm not going to kill you. You've been good to me. Turn and walk out the door. I'm going to lock you in the armory."

Bell hesitated. The tables had been turned so quickly, he could not for a moment grasp the desperateness of the crisis.

"Quick," snapped the Kid. "No time to waste."

Bell faced about silently and marched out the door, the Kid, hampered by his leg irons, shuffling after him. He turned south in the hall. A sudden surge of anger, chagrin, hurt pride, swept through him. Could he turn quickly and overpower the Kid? No. That seemed suicide. But if he could trick the Kid as the Kid had tricked him, he might yet save his reputation. Once out of the Kid's clutches, he would organize the citizens and recapture or kill him. He came to the head of the back stairs, just beyond which was the armory door. He shot a furtive glance over his shoulder. The Kid had fallen perhaps six feet behind him, making awkward progress, his ankle chains clattering.

There were not more than a dozen steps from the upper floor to the point where the stairway turned. Once behind the angle of the wall Bell would be safe. The stairs were his one forlorn hope. Swerving sharply, he plunged down them. In one flying leap, he made the bend. His outthrust hand struck the plastered wall; the heels of his cowboy boots cut splinters from the steps as he lunged for the shelter of the turn. One step more and the wall would shield him. . . .

BUT behind him was the quickest, deadliest co-ordination of eye, mind and muscle in the Southwest. At that instant the Kid sprang to the head of the stairs. Almost before his hobbled feet struck the floor his six-shooter coughed fire. The hall shook with a deafening report. The bullet struck Bell beneath the left shoulder blade, cut through his heart and buried itself in the wall beyond. He pitched forward on his head, crumpled over in a somersault, rolled down the few remaining steps and lay lifeless at the bottom, his limp body half out the courtyard door.

The Kid paid no further attention to Bell. His life hung upon a split second. What he did now he had not planned; but he did it as if he had thought it out in detail and carefully rehearsed it. He translated lightninglike thought into lightninglike action. Every move counted. Jamming Bell's six-shooter into his belt for emergencies, he stepped to the door of the armory, flung it open, caught up Ollinger's shotgun leaning against the wall within arm's reach. Turning, he sped through the hall with strange swiftness, with strange noiselessness, gauging his quick staccato steps to the exact reach of the ankle chains. Like a flitting shadow, he curved into the courtroom, glided across the floor and halted against the wall by the east window. From the moment Bell fell dead on the back stairs until now, the clock of eternity had ticked perhaps 10 seconds.

The Kid cocked the hammers of his shotgun. He peeked furtively out of the window into the road. For a moment he stood there against the wall, gun poised, face set, every muscle taut, like an ambushed panther about to spring.

A SUDDEN crashing noise over in the courthouse startled Bob Ollinger, on the hotel porch. Then silence. What was that? He jerked out his six-shooter and, holding it cocked in his hand, started across the road at a lumbering run, his long hair tossing about his shoulders.

"Hello, Bob!"

The voice came to him out of the silence. He knew that voice. It was the Kid's. It was even, pleasant, friendly. There was a purring softness in it. For a fraction of a

He Bet He Would Win Clara Bow; He Lost

Robert S. Savage, a Football Star, Could Not Break Through Defenses of the Flapper Actress, So He Made a Mild Attempt to End It All.

ROBERT S. SAVAGE.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

HOLLYWOOD, California.

THOUGH he writes poetry, Robert Savage, the 25-year-old son of John A. Savage, a millionaire steel magnate of New York and Duluth, is a he-man. In boyhood he was a football star. In manhood he played polo. Yet old Dan Cupid, every time, downs Robert Savage for a loss.

Bob Savage likes the open spaces, God's country, the land where a man's a man. Also he likes, or did like, Follies beauties and movie stars. Cupid threw him first—for a distance loss—when he married pretty Geneva Mitchell, who wore a "Y" sweater and danced upon a pogo stick in the Ziegfeld Follies in 1922 when Bob was a freshman at Yale. After five days the marriage was annulled.

And the second time, tiny Dan Cupid fairly annihilated the athletic Bob. The second time was just a few weeks ago when Bob bet with a fraternity friend that he would woo and wed pretty Clara Bow, motion picture actress, within a week.

The love-god sent the former Yale athlete to the hospital, his wrists slashed from an attempt at suicide. Also Dan Cupid sent the luckless Bob before the lunacy commission at Los Angeles, which—despite the fact that he is a poet—has found him sane.

IF FOOTBALL tactics weren't exactly adopted to carry away the heart of Clara Bow—and they were not—he-man strategy was entirely wrong. The Kleig light of the studios was as the breath of life to Clara Bow. Perhaps she would have accepted in lieu thereof the paradisiacal delight of the South Sea Islands. But here was Bob Savage wooing her with promises of the frozen north:

"In Alaska lands a cabin stands
"On the bank of a rivulet,
"Where we will go, sweet Clara Bow,
And seek and love and get"—

There was more of it. But that much was plenty. Clara Bow wasn't anxious to trade that magnificent home in Laurel Canyon for the tiny cabin in God's country. And she didn't hesitate to say so.

Clara Bow at home.

The mere fact that he didn't know Clara Bow was no obstacle to Bob Savage's wooing. Obstacles hadn't deterred his father, who built up a great steel industry at Duluth. They had only made the game more joyful to Bob when he plunged at the opposing football line in a Culver uniform. It didn't worry him if Clara Bow didn't even know one Robert S. Savage was on earth. He made ready for his encounter with the picture actress as though he were lining up with a college team to await the kick-off. He didn't even stop to remember that Clara Bow has red hair.

Frank Gay, a motion picture director, knew Clara Bow. And Bob Savage knew Frank Gay. His friend Gay introduced athlete to actress. And Bob Savage, in human fashion, laid his cards on the table. He gave Miss Bow fair warning. He purposed to marry her, he said, and he purposed to marry her soon. It was much as though a quarterback's signal had started Bob Savage careening against an opposing line.

AND Clara Bow was just a bit amazed, and dazed, by the sudden shock of the onslaught.

"I don't even know you," she said.

"But you will know me," said Bob Savage. So he went home and with his trusty typewriter before him wrote out his heart in PLAYING THE GAME OF LOVE.

A haunting voice comes in the twilight
Whispering soft and low,
Telling of a beautiful creature,
Telling of Clara Bow.
And I lie in my bed by the window,
To happily, happily scan
The heavens so star-filled above me,
Grateful, indeed, I'm a man.
Man with a soul for the forming
Of musings so filled with a maid,
That life is a playground of chances
And love is a game that is played.
A game so old that its glory
Has never been dimmed by the years,
And everyone lists in the tourney
To gamble the smiles with the tears.
I know of the rules and I'll gamble,
No matter, the score in the end,
I know of the prize and it's worth it.
I'll pray for Good Luck as my friend.
So on with the game, I am ready.
Clara, you'd better beware.
Muster your wiles for protection.
This warns you, young lady—prepare!

In Robert Savage Clara Bow, had she been a short-haired literary person, might have found an echo of Robert Service—and been forewarned. But she didn't.

After all there are worse poets than Bob Savage. When he was 21, which was four years ago, he had a volume of his verses printed. It was called "The First Road's Turning." And it contained a lot of verses about life at Culver, at Phillips Exeter Academy, at the Milford School, at Yale, on dude ranches in the Far West; and other verses entitled "Golden Tresses" and "Raven Locks." There wasn't any poem about red hair—which may suggest a lack of training in Robert Savage's preparation for his encounter with Clara Bow.

CLARA BOW.

Bob knew that Clara Bow had received his verses when he met her one afternoon almost immediately after the introduction at the fashionable Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles. She complained of feeling tired. And the poet offered to take her home.

"I wish you would," she admitted.

SO HE HAD his big roadster brought to the hotel entrance and they got in, the broad-shouldered athlete and the chic little actress with her Titian tresses. They drove away and things began to happen.

For Savage headed his roadster for Beverly Hills. And Miss Bow's home is in Laurel Canyon—which is something else again.

"She was listless," said Savage, as he discussed the incidents of his courtship. "We neither had much to say. After an hour conversation began to pick up. We talked about ourselves and I told her I was very seriously in love with her. Then she laughed and reminded me that I had only known her since the previous Saturday.

"But there is no time like the present. No matter what the game you play. I told her I was going down town to get a marriage license. She thought I was joking. But we drove back to the city and down on lower Broadway I called a lawyer friend into the discussion."

It was like a forward pass that had all gone wrong—that move of Savage's. Clara Bow, tiny though she is, broke up the play.

"Mr. Lawyer," she asked, "if we get a license do we have to go on through and get married? Is it the same as getting really, truly married?"

"Not exactly," answered Richard Cantillion, the lawyer.

Clara Bow's eyes flashed fire, just as the California sun flashed back from her red hair.

"You take me home or I'll walk back," she told young Savage scornfully. Out of the door of the car she climbed.

And Bob begged her to come back, she says.

"I'm going to get a marriage license. I'm going to marry you. In a few hours you're going to be Mrs. Robert S. Savage or I shall"——

It was a terrible threat he made—to go to Alaska, where the fierce Yukon

"Will not be won by weaklings, subtle, suave and mild,
"But by men with the hearts of vikings, and the simple faith of a child:
"Desperate, strong, resistless, unthrottled by fear or defeat."

But you can read all that in Bob Service, and this is Bob Savage's story.

Yes, she must be his bride or he would go to Alaska. At least so Clara Bow quotes her lover. And perhaps she knew how horrible it was up there under the rule of the law of tooth and claw. At any rate she climbed back in the car.

Instead of turning toward Laurel Canyon Bob headed his machine straight for the Hall of Records, where for a modest fee you get that bit of paper which permits you to legally marry in the State of California.

HE WAS in deadly earnest. "Desperate, strong, resistless," perhaps. But Clara Bow could resist him—with a woman's weapon. With the weapon of a red-haired woman—her tongue. Clara Bow started an argument.

"But if you let me get the license," Savage argued, "I'll do my convincing later. I can't do much without a license. We're going to need it anyway. Father always used to tell me, 'Do it now.'"

People were pouring out of the Hall of Records. The California sun was dropping into the sea. Commuters were boarding cars for their cottages on the beach. Long lines of motors were pouring through the Broadway tunnel. And a Los Angeles policeman—who was not the motion picture kind—stepped up and said:

"Come on, now! Move on! You've parked too long in one place!"

The hands of the clock were pointing to exactly one minute past five. The marriage license bureau was closed. Cupid had thrown Bob Savage for a loss of he knew not how many yards. But he squared away his shoulders and stepped on the starter and the roadster, soon, was gliding out Sunset boulevard toward the home of Clara Bow.

A scene from one of Miss Bow's plays.

That night the typewriter clicked out real Yukonian rhythms:

TO CLARA.

While a million stars with their silver bars
Their shafts of love-light threw,
By a thousand streams in a thousand dreams
I have kept my tryst with you.
About us there in the evening air
There sounded the sweet, sweet song
Of the twilight breeze—faint melodies
On the sephyrs borne along.
And that plaintive strain to a billing twain
Was Cupid's choice delight.
Ay, he blessed us so, fair Clara Bow,
Each hallowed dreamland night.
'Twas the make-believe I did conceive
Back there in the land o' dreams.
But this afternoon I beguiled the boon
Of a trysting, real—supreme!
The Clara rare of the Titian hair,
Who dwelt in the vision land,
Came down to earth and I prized her worth
As I kissed her dainty hand.
We played a game that was not the same
As we played in that land o' dream;
Another sort that was not the sport
We knew by that moonlit stream.
But I looked at you and conclusions drew
Of a time not far away
When the vision of old, with its theme oft-told,
Would fashion a real life play.
In Alaska lands a cabin stands
On the bank of a rivulet,
Where we will go, sweet Clara Bow,
And seek and love and get
That oldest tryst that in life we've missed.
And there we will happy be—
With the moonlight night, the pale starlight,
The stream—just you and me.

Tahiti's coral strand had been more beguiling than Alaska's icy mountains. But even Tahiti's coral strand doesn't exactly invite a petite actress who has a profitable contract at a whaling big salary; who lives in a luxurious home, owns a motor car, and within five minutes can alight in a district where gilded cafes and flashing theater lights range side by side, and where one finds caviar or chocolate eclairs, or lobster, or macaroons, or most anything else that doesn't grow in Alaskan lands where a cabin stands.

Penning poetry didn't seem to win. Well, watchful waiting might!

Bob Savage took up a vigil on the Clara Bow front porch. Every time he saw Miss Clara he asked her to marry him.

"Don't be silly," she said.

One evening when he appeared Papa Bow gravely informed the athletic [illegible] that Clara was not at home.

More yardage lost. And the week to win was almost gone. Bob had only the memory of Clara's last words to console him. Cold consolation.

"I don't love you. I don't even like you," she had said.

The typewriter clicked out a swan-song:

You lovely thing, I like to sing
Of love and such to you.
Such lovely maid I'll serenade
With fervent ardor true....
There is no song, nor am I wrong,
That ever could express
The feeling bold for you I hold,
Nor do I love the less.

It was posted. Bob Savage returned to his room. A fraternity brother called. Was it to sympathise? Or to twit him?

"Get out of the room," ordered Savage. "I'm going to end it all."

The fraternity brother took Bob at his word. He told the landlady. She told the police. They forced the door.

Bob Savage was sitting on the side of his bed. Before him was a picture of Clara Bow. Short, deep cuts were in each wrist. Blood welled out with each heart beat.

Savage was weak and dizzy from the loss of blood before his wrists were hurriedly bandaged and he was taken to the receiving hospital. But he managed to tell the world he had done it all for love of Clara Bow. At the hospital, they said he would get well.

WHAT a stupid ending to a wild romance. But Bob Savage, gaining strength there in the hospital, wasn't through. Not yet!

"I hope to tell you I tried to kill myself," he said. "I don't mean maybe. I'm wild about Miss Bow—I never loved a girl so much in all my life. I thought she returned my love, but I guess she didn't. She threw me down cold. I wrote notes, begged interviews, and called her on the phone. And when I went out to her home in Laurel Canyon her father told me she was not at home.

"That was the last straw. I decided to stage something desperate. They say I'll recover. Well, give me another week and I'll make her love me yet."

Geneva Mitchell, the first Mrs. Robert Savage.

Clara Bow was upset by Savage's attempt at suicide much more than by his temperamental wooing. But when it was announced that he would be out of the hospital she said:

"Mr. Savage is just an episode in my young life. He's a nice boy—just a trifle impulsive and a little too temperamental. I simply laughed at his wooing. And then, he says, he tried to commit suicide because I 'gave him the gate,' as he calls it.

"Let me tell you this—when a man attempts suicide over a woman he doesn't cut his wrists with a safety razor blade and drape himself over a couch with a cigarette in his lips.

"That might work out fine in the pictures, but men don't think of dramatics when they kill themselves. They use pistols. As a lover, Bob was a good poet."

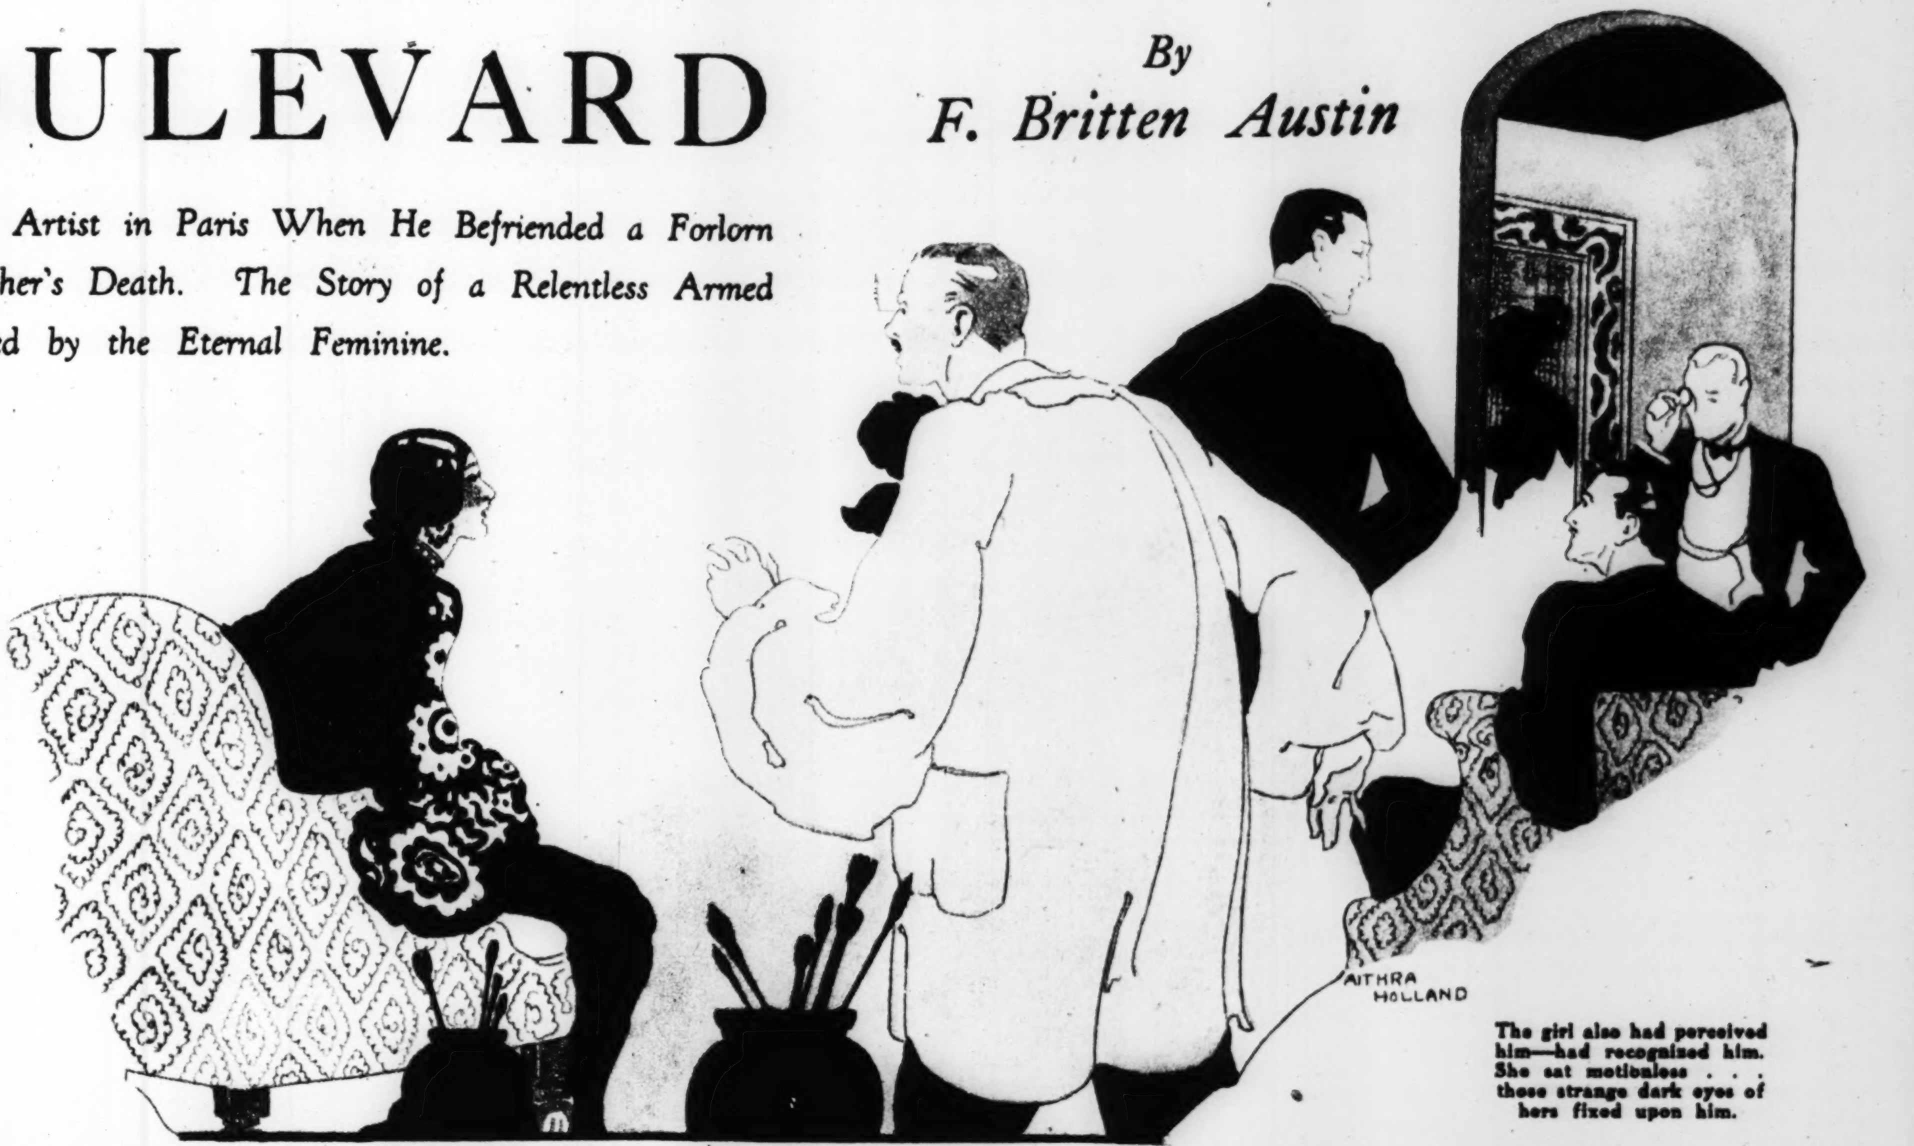
ON THE BOULEVARD

By F. Britten Austin

Of the Adventure Which Was Shared by a Middle-Aged Artist in Paris When He Befriended a Forlorn Young Woman. She Had Sworn Vengeance for Her Brother's Death. The Story of a Relentless Armed Quest and Its Outcome, as Complicated by the Eternal Feminine.



The girl also had perceived him—had recognized him. She sat motionless . . . those strange dark eyes of hers fixed upon him.

THERE is no spectacle more chastening to the male pride of intellect than that of a number of quite clever men attempting to explain the feminine riddle to each other. This cynical reflection is not mine. It was murmured to me by Dicky Morrice, from the cloud of tobacco smoke which enveloped his philosophic taciturnity as he sat cross-legged, Turk-fashion, on the divan in McFadden's studio.

"Let's have your theory, then, O Solomon!" said a perceptibly aggrieved voice.

"Theory? Heaven forbid!" replied Morrice, as he refilled his immense dropping briar. "I have no theories about women. Human life is not long enough. I am modestly contented with a collection of observational data. If I should happen to remember them, together with earlier collections, in the interval between one incarnation and the next, I propose to amuse myself by trying to fit them together. It should occupy quite a considerable period of eternity."

McFadden laughed.

"You may be otherwise engaged," he said, "but let's have some of your observational data!"

Morrice sucked thoughtfully at his briar for a moment.

"Well, you're a mighty clever lot of fellows," he said, "and you know all about women. I'll give you a little study in the eternal riddle, and we'll see what you make of it.

"It was last year, while I was still in Paris," he began, a little clumsily. "I was sitting one evening outside the cafe at the corner of the Rue du Faubourg Montmartre, watching the crowd stream along the boulevard.

"And the women. You know that procession of women with faces that are painted masks varying from the grotesque crudity of blue-circled eyes and scarlet lips on a rice-white face to the delicate work of art that mimics, with ochre, the tint of a sun-kissed country-girl. One and all, their faces turn to the light of the cafe and their eyes—the eyes that made you hate or pity them—range over the customers at the little tables, some expertly, some with a diffidence that may be only assumed, while they venture a half-smile of perfidious allurement.

"SUDDENLY I found myself looking at a girl who passed slowly before the serried tables. Her eyes were on mine when I first knew that I was looking at her. Such eyes!—great dark orbs in an oval of a face that, innocent of paint, was set white and cold like marble.

"On a sudden inexplicable impulse, I made a sign to her. She saw it—hesitated—then, with an obvious effort of courage, came and sat down beside me.

"'You meant me to?' she queried, with a shy timidity unusual in such meetings. I could see that she was trembling.

"'Certainly, mademoiselle,' I replied. 'What may I order for you?'

"'Coffee,' she said. 'Please.'

"'Some cakes?'

"A ghost of a smile came over the marble beauty of her face. 'Je veux bien. Merci, monsieur.'

"The coffee and the cakes were brought. Despite a quite apparent effort to control her appetite, she ate them ravenously.

"A suspicion flashed into me. I turned to her. 'When did you have your last meal?' I asked.

"'Yesterday.' She seemed half-ashamed to make the admission.

"'Why not tell me?' I said irritably. I was annoyed with her as with a child for being foolish. 'I asked you what I should order.'

"She looked up at me penitently, those great eyes in the pale oval of her face curiously sincere.

"'Pardon, monsieur,' she said. 'You see, I—I didn't know. I—I am not accustomed—'

"I rose from my chair, threw down money for the waiter.

"'You can explain afterwards,' I said. 'Come and have something to eat.'

"I took her to the restaurant on the first floor over the cafe. It was deserted at this intermediate hour. In a few minutes she was spooning up her soup as a preliminary to the substantial meal I ordered for her. It did one good to see her eat. I watched her, without conversation, until she had finished. Not until she was peeling her final orange did I utter the question that had been waiting for utterance since I first set eyes on her.

"'Now, my dear young lady,' I said severely. 'Perhaps you will be good enough to explain what you are doing on the boulevard? It is obviously not your metier.'

"I felt like a father to her. In comparison, I was old enough.

"The white marble of her face, softened for a moment by the comfort of food and drink, hardened again. Then she ceded, perhaps out of gratitude, to the authority I assumed.

"'I was looking for a man,' she said, and the brows over her great eyes contracted and her lips went thin.

"'So much I guessed,' I said ironically. She flushed at my tone.

"'One particular man,' she elucidated, with an expression that puzzled me. 'I am sure to meet him on the boulevard sooner or later.'

"'How long have you been looking for him?'

"'This is the first time.' She glanced at me. 'You guessed that, too?'

"'Easily—but who is he, this man you are looking for? An old'—I was going to say 'lover'—'friend of yours?'

"'I have never seen him, but when I do I shall know him.' She felt in her handbag, extracted a photograph, passed it to me. It was that of a young man, strikingly good-looking in an ascetic sort of way. 'His name is Boris Mirsky. You don't know him?'

"'No—and when you do meet him?'

"'I shall kill him.'

"I CAUGHT a glimpse of a miniature automatic in her bag, as she replaced the photograph. The cool ferocity of this bald statement, coming as it did from the girlish beauty of that face, gave me a queer shock.

"'Will you tell me your name?' I asked.

"'Vera Mikhailovna,' she answered, automatically almost, her dark eyes staring thoughtfully in front of her at some prospect I could not share.

"These Russian names always muddle me. 'Mikhailovna is not your surname?' I ventured.

"'My father's name was Stapouloff,' she said.

"'Was?'

"'He died the day before yesterday.' Tears came up in her great eyes.

"'My dear young lady,' I said, 'will you not grant me the privilege of a disinterested friend and confide in me?'

"Her great eyes softened as she looked at me. 'I believe you are a friend,' she said, 'just a friend and not—not——' she hesitated, pathetically hopeful.

"'I am just a friend,' I assured her, 'nothing more. But I should like to help you, to put you on a better path than that of the boulevard.'

"She looked at me almost pityingly after a sudden resentment had gone out of her eyes.

"How should you understand?—Mon ami, I did not go on the boulevard because—because I liked that—that horror. I had to force myself to it. But it seemed to me the only way.'

"'Because you had no money?' I hazarded.

"She shrugged her shoulders, contemptuous of my obtuseness.

"I have no money, it is true,' she said. 'But not because of that. I have a sacred duty laid upon me. I sacrifice myself to it.'

"'I don't understand,' I admitted. 'What duty?'

"'The duty of finding Boris Mirsky—and killing him.'

"'Why is it your sacred duty to kill this Boris Mirsky?' I asked.

"SHE hesitated as though judging whether I were worthy of her confidence and then suddenly she gave it to me. Her eyes flashed somberly as she began her story. It would take too long to give it in her own words, and in its broad outlines it was a simple story, not dissimilar to that of hundreds of other Russian refugees in Paris at the present time.

"Her father was a general in the old Imperial Army. Together with his son and daughter, he had managed to escape at the beginning of the Bolshevik terror. They arrived in Paris utterly penniless, and the old man had managed precariously to avoid starvation for himself and his daughter by doing translation work. The son became a cab driver. During the war, he had been a Major in one of the Guards regiments. In the same regiment, and his great friend from the time they were at the Military Academy together, was this Boris Mirsky.

"Mirsky, it seemed, was an 'intellectual,' one of those high-caste Russians who, before the Revolution, were forever tortured by doubts of their right to the privileges they enjoyed. The Revolution, apparently, fired the magazine in him. He enthusiastically embraced the new order of things, and was one of those who assisted Kerensky in his efforts to reconstitute the army. Young Stapouloff fled.

"Some months later, leaving his father and sister to continue their struggle against starvation in Paris, the ex-Major joined Denikin's ill-fated army in the south of Russia. They sent him up-country on some secret service mission, disguised, of course. As luck would have it, he ran into his old friend, Boris Mirsky—and Mirsky, Spartan or merely a scoundrel, promptly denounced him. The local Extraordinary Commission shot him next day. But, somehow or other, he managed to send a message to his father, giving the name of his betrayer.

"A week previous to that evening, old Stapouloff had been startled to see—of all unlikely people—young Boris Mirsky on the boulevard. He was on the other side of the street, apparently unconscious of the old man's proximity. Old Stapouloff had darted across after him, blind to the traffic in his excitement—and a motor car had knocked him down. He died a few days later in a hospital, holding his daughter's hand and making her swear that she would not rest until she had tracked down her brother's murderer and exacted that vengeance which he begged from God, even as his life went out.

"She had spent her last centime on that automatic.

"'LOOK here,' I said, inspired on the spur of the moment, 'when you looked at me outside the cafe and came across to me at that sign from me, you had a feeling that this was predestined—that I was to help you—didn't you?' It was the wildest of guesses on my part.

"She nodded her head gravely.

"'Yes,' she said. 'I felt that.'

"'And you feel absolutely confident that you will sooner or later meet this Boris Mirsky?'

"'I am sure of it!' she said with emphasis.

"'Good! If you feel instinctively certain that you will meet him, then assuredly you will meet him.' Privately, I felt that nothing was less certain, but I assumed all the impressive sincerity I could. 'But will you admit the possibility that now you are not going the right way to meet him?'

"She looked at me, her confidence a little shaken.

"'You say you felt that I was sent to help you,' I went on quickly. 'I felt the same. I believe I was there to help you.'

"'Yes,' she breathed, almost to herself. 'Something told me that.'

"'That means, if it means anything, that in some way—I don't know—you will meet him through me—because you have followed my advice,' I continued. I felt almost ashamed to deceive her with this illusive hope—if, probably, I met Boris Mirsky, I meant merely to keep them as far apart as possible—but I remembered what I had read about the fatalism of the Slav and I played on it desperately. 'Will you follow that advice?'

"'Yes.' She looked, a rapt far-away expression in her eyes, like a nun listening to supernatural counsels.

"'Then you will abandon your absurd project. You will never meet him in that way. I feel sure of it.'

"An evident relief came into her pale set face.

"'What must I do?'

"'Have you any means of support?' I asked.

"She shrugged her shoulders.

"'I might perhaps procure some lessons to give,' she said.

"I had another inspiration—saw a picture in that head—many pictures.

"'If you will come to my studio,' I said, giving her my card, 'and will pose for me, I can give you work—and introduce you to other artists who will be glad to paint you.'

"'You don't mean . . .?' She hesitated apprehensively, blushed suddenly vivid in a curious alarm of modesty. What strange mixtures some women are! Half an hour earlier she had been walking the boulevard.

"I reassured her. She was not the type that makes a Venus or an allegorical nude. Her beauty was made to shine mystically out of somber brocades, a queen or saint, or both in one.

"'Only the head—or the draped body,' I said.

"She smiled gratefully—and then suddenly looked at me with a last searching doubt.

"'And I shall meet Boris Mirsky? . . . You promise?'

"I gestured my personal impotence.

"'My dear child, we are but the vehicles of Fate,' I said equivocally.

"IT SATISFIED her. I gave her a few francs to go on with and sent her home to the little apartment she had occupied with her father. As she disappeared into the interior of the long green-and-white motor bus she gave me an almost joyous wave of the hand to reiterate our au revoir.

"I had no doubt that she would arrive at my studio the next morning. She did. You know that old studio of mine, high up on Montmartre; Paris, silent at that distance, immense below one?

"The sunlight fell upon her, touching her dark hair to a ruddy glint. Her beauty gave me a shock. I steeled myself against it, maintained myself in the attitude of the altruistic friend. A man always feels instinctively whether he has a chance of awakening a woman's love. Smiling at me though she was, I knew she regarded me quite dispassionately, saw in me only a friend sent by Fate to help her on her road. At my time of life a man shuns those pangs of hopeless love he reveled in as a boy. I crushed out the little spark she struck in me, busied myself with my easel and palette, posed her for some trial sketches after a few perfunctory words. I was resolved to keep our relations on an unimpeachable basis.

"She was an excellent model, docility itself. The pure white oval of her face, with the great dark eyes pregnant with unfathomable thoughts, was an inspiration. I became absorbed in my work, forgot her identity, forgot the purpose that had brought her to me. At last I stopped for a rest-interval. She ventured to move, came across to me.

"'Do you think it will be today that I shall meet him?' she said quietly, her appealing eyes upon me.

"Busied with my own thoughts, I only half realized her words.

"'Meet who?' I said, out of my preoccupation.

"'Boris Mirsky.'

"Memory came back to me with an unpleasant jolt, but I affected a gravely smiling confidence.

"'My dear child, who can hasten Fate? We must have patience.' I tried to commit myself as little as possible. She smiled, quite satisfied.

"SHE certainly had patience. Day after day she came to the studio and sat for me; day after day, in the intervals of repose, she speculated gravely whether this would be the day that she would meet Boris Mirsky. She showed me his photograph so often that I got to know his features as well as she herself.

"I found her work with other artists and she went gladly, because, my agency still being ultimately responsible, every one of those other studios held the possibility of meeting him. Many, if not most, of those artists made love to her, of course. They might have saved themselves the trouble. She was, gravely smiling, immune to their cajoleries. She was, underneath her smile, so much the ascetic incarnation of that single, grim purpose that I often wished, in desperation, that she would fall in love with one of them, commit a folly. But her soul was ice.

"This went on for some weeks. I could devote but a fraction of my time to painting her, as I was busy finishing off the last of my pictures for the Salon. One afternoon—you know how one troops around to others' studios — a crowd of fellows came to see my lot before I sent them in. Vera Mikhailovna was there, grave and silent as usual, replying to the flirtatious sallies of the men only by that smile of the mouth in which her eyes did not participate. One of the crowd brought in a stranger, a Russian—Serge Bolensky, I think he called him. As I turned to shake hands with him I had a shock. Fate had taken me at my word. It was the man of the photograph.

"The Russian had not noticed her, surrounded as he was by the throng of excitedly talkative young men with whom he laughed. I made an occasion to pass close to her. Involuntarily, I glanced round to the girl. She also had perceived him—had recognised him. She sat motionless on the divan in the corner of my studio, those strange, dark eyes of hers fixed upon him.

"'It is he!' she whispered. On her lap she fingered the little black handbag which held the automatic.

"I did not know what to answer, could only temporize in a blind desire to stave off the catastrophe.

"'Not here!' I whispered back to her warningly.

"She nodded, continued to sit and watch him as a cat does a mouse.

"IN AN agony of apprehension, I rejoined my guests, tried to laugh at their slangy witticisms. And at the back of my mind loomed the inevitable tragedy I was impotent to prevent. I racked my brains for some device that should get him safely away, and could think of none. An eternity seemed to have elapsed when, by a piece of unexpected luck, the Russian excused himself by an appointment he had to keep and took his leave. With an immense relief, I watched him go out of the door. When all these people had departed, I would take good care not to let Vera Mikhailovna out of my sight.

"The next moment I saw her rise from the divan, her beautiful white face as marble-like as that first evening I had seen it. Without a word, she went towards the door. I stood like a fool, paralysed and fascinated by her quiet deliberation, so significant to me alone in that room, unable to make a movement to withhold her. If ever in my life, Fate was a reality to me then. It was as if there was a spell upon me. I saw my opportunity slip away from me. Another moment, and she was gone.

"I waited in terror of that revolver shot upon the stairs which should suddenly hush the babel around me. Half a dozen of the fellows, quite unconscious, of course, of my preoccupation, were pulling me this way and that. The minutes passed—then, unable to bear the suspense any longer, I tore myself away from them, dashed down the staircase.

"There was no sign of Vera Mikhailovna or the Russian—not even in the street from end to end. They had vanished utterly.

"That evening, desperate with anxiety, I went round to her wretched little apartment. The concierge informed me that she had not been back since she left in the morning.

"The next day, contrary to her usual regularity, there was no sign of her. I waited all day in suspense. That evening I went again to her apartment. She had not been back at all.

"A whole week went by—and then I suddenly ran into her on the main boulevard. She tried to avoid me, but I held her.

"'For God's sake,' I said, 'tell me what has happened.'

"She looked at me strangely, seemed about to explain, and then stopped herself. 'Come with me,' she said.

"Not any sort of reply could I get from her as she led me to a street just behind the boulevard, close to the Folies Bergeres. She turned into a house and I followed her up interminable flights of stairs. At last, at the very top, she opened a door and we entered a large, untidy room. In one corner was a couch and blanket on which somebody evidently had been sleeping. The little black handbag which held her automatic lay upon it. Just beyond the couch another door, now closed, led into a further room.

"'Tell me,' I implored. 'Have you killed him?'

"SHE put her finger to her lips. 'Sh-h!' I stared at her in bewilderment as she went softly to the other door, opened it and peeped in.

"'Is that you, Marie?' said a man's voice faint' from that further room.

"'Yes,' she answered from the doorway. 'I have brought a friend to see you—the artist, Monsieur Morrice, whose studio you visited.'

"She looked at me with an expression that completely baffled me. 'Would you like to see him?' she said.

"'Certainly,' I replied, my curiosity roused to the highest pitch.

"I entered the room and Vera Mikhailovna withdrew, shutting the door gently upon me. In the bed was a man, my visitor to the studio—obviously very ill.

"'Well, my friend,' I said with an assumption of cheerfulness, 'what is the matter?'

"'It's the cursed influenza, he replied. (Paris was in the grip of an epidemic just then.) 'If it had not been for Marie I should have died.'

"'Marie?' I echoed, puzzled.

"'Marie Bakunin—the Russian girl who was at your studio. She ran after me as I went downstairs and introduced herself. It seems she knew some friends of mine in Russia. There was a taxi standing just outside when we arrived at the street and I offered to take her back to her apartment. We got in together and—you know how suddenly influenza comes on—as we were on the way I felt myself ill, very ill. I had had a shiver a day or two before coming to your studio. So Marie insisted that I should come back here—and I was so ill that she stayed and nursed me. She has been here ever since.'

"'She has nursed you?' I repeated stupidly. My bewildered brain would not find the key to this mystery.

"'LIKE the angel she is!' said the sick man. 'Monsieur,' he added gravely, but with a feverish sparkle in his eyes, 'I never knew that a woman could be such a miracle. To that chance visit to your studio I shall owe the happiness of my life. She almost makes me believe in God!'

"I stared at him speechlessly.

"'Have you never been in love?' he asked, with a peculiar smile.

"I could stand no more of this. Using the excuse of his weak state, and promising to visit him again, I left him and rejoined Vera Mikhailovna in the outer room.

"She was waiting for me, that inscrutable expression on her marble face, her eyes a mystery I probed in vain with mine.

"'It was not he after all?' I said. 'Not Boris Mirsky?'

"Her reply was as hard-toned as her face.

"'Yes,' she said simply. 'It is Boris Mirsky.'

Mrs. Dumbly

Fourth of July.
How Hard She Worked.
There's Another Battle.
Artie Was Right for Once.

BECAUSE of the deeds of our forefathers, I had to buy paper cups and make potato salad and hunt up an old worn tablecloth. Because of the deeds of our forefathers, I had to make a beef loaf and stuff deviled eggs. Because of the deeds of our forefathers, I had to frost a cake and hunt up the cracked china cups and fill the thermos bottle. Because of the deeds of our forefathers, I had to make trips to the delicatessen, buying paper plates and canned cream and dill pickles and salad dressing and bananas until I was completely worn out, but I'm nothing if not patriotic and I did celebrate the Fourth.

At first Artie wanted to stay at home on the holiday, but I explained to him that that wouldn't do at all. "Why, Artie," I said, "don't you know that we're celebrating the day when our ancestors got together and signed the Declaration of Independence, informing England that we were a free country and that we intended to settle down here in our own happy homes? Why, no one stays home on that day! All the people who live in the country drive into the city and those who live in the city drive out to the country. Everybody goes somewhere!"

Artie argued against it. "If we could only have an old-fashioned Fourth," he said, "with firecrackers and skyrockets and Roman candles. Gosh, I was always up first in the morning and woke all the neighbors by shooting off a cannon cracker!"

"You can still wake the neighbors up at four," I consoled him, "by letting your exhaust shoot off. The only difference is that you can't burn yourself up!"

"Yes, but you're asking me to burn up miles," he retorted.

"ARTIE, aren't you ashamed!" I said indignantly. "After all those men have fought for us in all those wars and were wounded and died for us, I should think you'd want to do something about it."

"All right, then," he said, "let's go to the shack!"

"I don't want to go to the camp," I hastened to assure him. "I know just what would happen. You'd leave me to sit on a wrecked kitchen chair and play an antique victrola record while you go off and play cards with those men around there. I hate men in summer camps with the skin peeling off their faces and shoulders like the outside of a boiled onion and their beards all going to seed and no clothes on but track pants and bathing suits. Let's go to Ye Red Raid Inn and dance and have a chicken dinner."

But Artie didn't fall in with my plan at all. He said that, after trying to pilot the car through the holiday crowd on a slippery pavement all day, he didn't relish the idea of spending the evening trying to steer himself and me across a slick floor, where there aren't any traffic regulations, where they'd just as soon park themselves on your feet as on the floor.

"Why can't we go to that little schoolhouse where we went last year?" he asked. "It's easy to park there and there's a good pump."

"Why, I wouldn't go to that place if it was the last place on earth!" I said. "Why must you always think of parking easily and getting water! Don't you remember those pigs and chickens? They certainly had communistic ideas about the sharing of sandwiches and salad. Why can't we take the Grabit family out riding and then eat in some hotel some place?"

"WHY must you always fill the car with people I don't like?" he fumed. "And with people—like the Grabits—who live way out of the way, so that I have to taxi them home afterwards! And that Grabit kid! Last time he took the back of my seat for the top of a trench and me for a Hun and every fifteen minutes he'd go over the top and land on my shoulders. And he pulled the rubber off the windshield and broke the dash light and smashed in the glass on the speedometer. No, I don't want to take the Grabits and let's don't eat in a hotel. Let's put up a lunch and go to some secluded place."

If we wrote a list of all the people we argued over taking, it would make a city directory, and if we drew a picture of all the places we thought of going to it would make a good auto map of the country.

But, anyway, I put up the lunch and we drove on the Fourth of July, for, after all, as Artie says, "We people who buy flowers at $3 a dozen and deal in ribbons and silks and laces, buying and selling beauty by the yard, need to rest our eyes on the shop windows of nature, where miles of green velvet embroidered in purple and velvet and gold are displayed; where roses are flung prodigally over wayside fences and tiger lilies hedge the road; where the corn flaunts ribbons of green and the lace of elder blooms is spread over the tops of bushes. When we look at these things we somehow realize that we're a country well worth saving and that our forefathers did a pretty good job."

For once I agreed that Artie was entirely right.

Ring Lardner

Days of Youth.
His Autobiography:
The First Sweetheart.
Invited to Inaugural Ball.

THIS autobiography started out to follow the style of Edward Bok or Henry (Peaches) Adams and refer to the hero in the third person, but the idea has been abandoned because in my case it would be confusing on account of two of my abominable brothers also being named Ring (inspiring a Niles wag, Charles Quimby, to call our family the Three Ring Circus) and if I were to write that Ring did this or Ring said that, the reader would not know whether I meant myself or one of the other boys unless in each instance I gave the full designation, a practice that would eat up too much space. For my oldest brother was christened Ring Once for Ice Water; another one, Ring Twice for Towels, and I, Ring Three Times for Good Luck. So from now on the author will be spoken of as I, provided it ain't too hard to locate that unaccustomed key on my typewriter.

As all we boys began being born one after another it became necessary to take drastical action in regards to the intra-mural traffic problem. For example, there was so many mouths to feed that only a third of same could be accommodated in the dining room at one time, and the confusion and congestion was something fierce when those that had had their meal was trying to get out and those that was still hungry trying to get in.

A NEW door was cut into the hall to be used for eat-bound traffic only and my sisters took a course in barking and served as traffic cops, but the situation would of soon gotten intolerable only for nine of the boys suddenly deciding to leave home. Five went to Leavenworth, two to Atlanta and two to San Quentin. The roving spirit proved contagious and soon a tenth, Gregory, entered Yale and won his Y as coxcomb on the varsity crew. Still another, Polycarp, obtained employment as a Chicago caddy. A Chicago caddy is a boy who carries your ordnance bag, retrieves sliced or hooked bullets and replaces divots in bystanders.

None of we children was ever allowed to talk at table, but as soon as a meal was over we were encouraged to talk as much as we liked, and in that way I got quite a reputation as an after-dinner speaker. This was in my third year, 1888, when Taylor and Presser were running for President and Vice President against Polk and Beans. The Taylors lived right across the street from us, but it was a different family. The Taylor who was elected President was Zachary Taylor, while the Taylor near us was H. N. Taylor, the feed man. No relations to the other Taylor.

H. N. Taylor had a daughter, Livid Taylor, who suffered from contusions by a prior marriage. Livid was my first sweetheart which she will learn for the first time if she reads this. I was too young (only three) to know the exact wording of a formal declaration and so kept my love a secret, but many is the night I cried myself to sleep in regards to Livid Taylor and her contusions.

IN MARCH, 1891, a few days before my sixth birthday, the postman brought an invitation, for our whole family, to attend the Inaugural Ball. In those days the event was held not in Washington, but in Seattle, to make it more exclusive, as it was figured that very few Congressmen and foreign diplomats would have the money to go way out there, or the inclination either, the train running only as far as Duluth, and from that point you had the choice of walking or creeping on all fours. Those who chose the former method usually relieved the tedium of the journey by rolling a hoop.

The invitations were always purposely sent out so late that only people who lived right near Seattle could hope to get there in time, and they were not invited. You may imagine that our home was a scene of bustling activity from the instant the card reached us till it was time to board the train for Duluth. I was taken along because there was no one to leave me with and to help open the car windows.

We left Niles at noon on the third day of March and did not reach Duluth till the morning of the sixth. This was before the era of patent couplers and the cars of a train were fastened to one another with gay ribbons. (It was in 1895 that the Santa Fe adopted hooks and eyes.) The result was that every mile or so the engineer would feel a lightening of the pull on his "iron horse" and would find on investigating that two or more cars had been left far behind. Four hours after the "start" of the trip it was discovered that the engine was way up in Wisconsin while the train was still standing in the station at Chicago.

Everybody felt kind of blue when we arrived in Duluth at last and realized that we were already 36 hours late for the ball and with at least three weeks separating us from Seattle. Some were in favor of returning at once to Niles, but wiser counsel prevailed and we prepared to complete the trip in the hope that the difference in time between Minnesota and the Coast would work to our advantage.

The First Sweetheart.
Invited to Inaugural Ball.

THIS autobiography started out to follow the style of Edward Bok and Henry (Peaches) Adams and refer to the hero in the third person, but the idea has been abandoned because in my case it would be confusing on account of two of my interminable brothers also being named Ring (inspiring a Niles wag, Charles Quimby, to call our family the Three Ring Circus) and if I were to write that Ring did this or Ring said that, the reader would not know whether I meant myself or one of the other boys unless in each instance I gave the full designation, a practice that would eat up too much space. For my oldest brother was christened Ring Once for Ice Water; another one, Ring Twice for Towels, and I, Ring Three Times for Good Luck. So from now on the author will be spoken of as I, provided it ain't too hard to locate that unaccustomed key on my typewriter.

As all we boys began being born one after another it became necessary to take drastical action in regards to the intra-mural traffic problem. For example, there was so many mouths to feed that only a third of same could be accommodated in the dining room at one time, and the confusion and congestion was something fierce when those that had had their meal was trying to get out and those that was still hungry trying to get in.

A NEW door was cut into the hall to be used for eat-bound traffic only and my sisters took a course in barking and served as traffic cops, but the situation would of soon gotten intolerable only for nine of the boys suddenly deciding to leave home. Five went to Leavenworth, two to Atlanta and two to San Quentin. The roving spirit proved contagious and soon a tenth, Gregory, entered Yale and won his Y as coxcomb on the varsity crew. Still another, Polycarp, obtained employment as a Chicago caddy. A Chicago caddy is a boy who carries your ordnance bag, retrieves sliced or hooked bullets and replaces divots in bystanders.

None of we children was ever allowed to talk at table, but as soon as a meal was over we were encouraged to talk as much as we liked, and in that way I got quite a reputation as an after-dinner speaker. This was in my third year, 1888, when Taylor and Presser were running for President and Vice President against Polk and Beans. The Taylors lived right across the street from us, but it was a different family. The Taylor who was elected President was Zachary Taylor, while the Taylor near us was H. N. Taylor, the feed man. No relations to the other Taylor.

H. N. Taylor had a daughter, Livid Taylor, who suffered from contusions by a prior marriage. Livid was my first sweetheart which she will learn for the first time if she reads this. I was too young (only three) to know the exact wording of a formal declaration and so kept my love a secret, but many is the night I cried myself to sleep in regards to Livid Taylor and her contusions.

IN MARCH, 1891, a few days before my sixth birthday, the postman brought an invitation, for our whole family, to attend the Inaugural Ball. In those days the event was held not in Washington, but in Seattle, to make it more exclusive, as it was figured that very few Congressmen and foreign diplomats would have the money to go way out there, or the inclination either, the train running only as far as Duluth, and from that point you had the choice of walking or creeping on all fours. Those who chose the former method usually relieved the tedium of the journey by rolling a hoop.

The invitations were always purposely sent out so late that only people who lived right near Seattle could hope to get there in time, and they were not invited. You may imagine that our home was a scene of bustling activity from the instant the card reached us till it was time to board the train for Duluth. I was taken along because there was no one to leave me with, and to help open the car windows.

We left Niles at noon on the third day of March and did not reach Duluth till the morning of the sixth. This was before the era of patent couplers and the cars of a train were fastened to one another with gay ribbons. (It was in 1895 that the Santa Fe adopted hooks and eyes.) The result was that every mile or so the engineer would feel a lightening of the pull on his "iron horse" and would find on investigating that two or more cars had been left far behind. Four hours after the "start" of the trip it was discovered that the engine was way up in Wisconsin while the train was still standing in the station at Chicago.

Everybody felt kind of blue when we arrived in Duluth at last and realized that we were already 36 hours late for the ball and with at least three weeks separating us from Seattle. Some were in favor of returning at once to Niles, but wiser counsel prevailed and we prepared to complete the trip in the hope that the difference in time between Minnesota and the Coast would work to our advantage.

ON THE BOULEVARD

" 'I don't understand,' I said. I was indeed utterly bewildered. 'What happened?'

" 'Mon ami,' she replied, 'you would never understand.'

" 'Let me try,' I appealed to her. 'He does not know who you are?'

" 'No—I wanted to get him away from your studio without alarming him. You told me not to do it there, you remember. I pretended to be a Marie Bakunin who knew some people called Bolensky. There was a taxi passing along the street and we got in together—to go to my room. On the way, he was taken suddenly ill. I noticed that he had fever when he first entered your studio.' She stopped, looked at me. 'Could you kill a sick man, mon ami?'

"I shrugged my shoulders, made a gesture of inability to say.

" 'I COULD not,' she went on. He was so ill that he scarcely understood what I said to him. I wanted Boris Mirsky to understand, fully understand, before I killed him in all the fullness of life as my brother was killed. So I told the taxi to come straight here, and I put him to bed. I stayed with him, so as not to let him again out of my sight.'

" 'But you have nursed him—like an angel, he tells me.'

"The strangest expression flitted over her face, her lips quivered.

" 'I would not let him die—die like an innocent man in his bed,' she said, and her eyes turned away from me.

" 'And when he is well?'

"The eyes came round to me again, strange, defiant.

" 'When he is well, I shall kill him, and'—her eyes burned at me—'then kill myself!'

" 'Kill yourself?' I repeated. I thought I saw a chance, now that she realized her desperate situation after such a crime, to dissuade her from her obsession.

" 'Because I love him! If you must know!' she threw at me, and suddenly sank down to the couch and buried her face in her hands.

" 'WHAT is he doing here—this Mirsky?' I asked, just to say something.

" 'Espionage,' she replied mechanically, without looking up. 'I went through his papers. They are here.' She made a blind gesture which indicated the interior of the couch.

"She looked up, stared at me through a long minute of silence.

" 'Yes, my friend,' she said at last slowly, 'you spoke truly that first evening. You are indeed the vehicle of Fate!'

" 'What do you mean?' I asked, vaguely alarmed. 'I don't understand.'

" 'How should you understand?" she answered, her smile contemptuously tolerant. 'You are only an unconscious vehicle.'

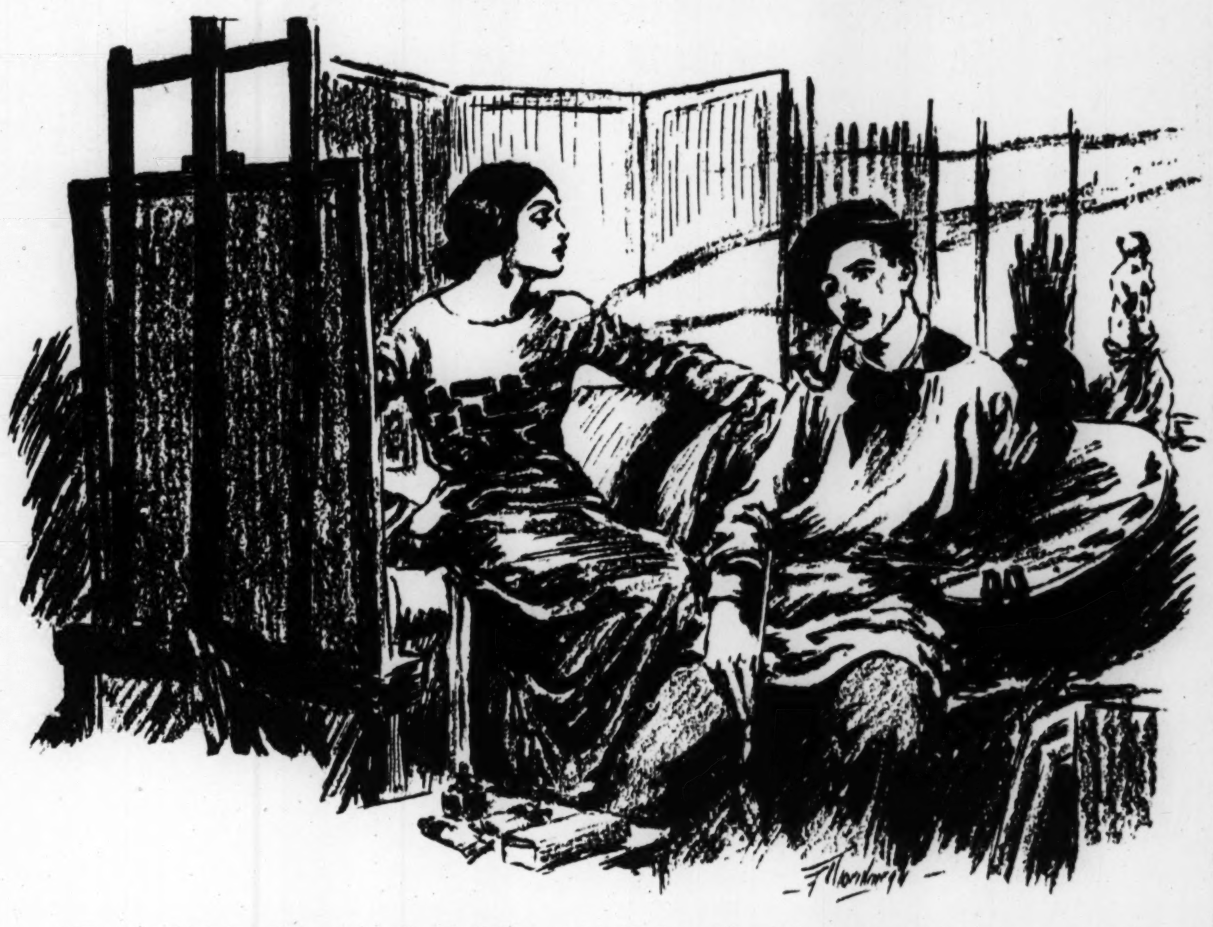
"I humored her.

" 'Very well, then, Vera Mikhailovna—an unconscious vehicle, but one that would wish well to you if it could. Now, I want you to do me a favor—I can't get on with that unfinished head of you. Mirsky cannot move from here in his present condition. I want you to come back to the studio with me now.'

"Her eyes probed me. Then a slow smile came on her lips.

" 'I will come back with you, mon ami, if you will allow me to perform an errand on the way. I have something I must do!'

" 'Where?' I asked.



" 'Do you think it will be today that I shall meet him?' she said quietly, her appealing eyes upon me."

" 'At the Prefecture of Police.'

" 'The Prefecture of Police?'

"She smiled again at my suspicion, annulled it.

" 'Serge Bolensky has no permis de sejour,' she said, quietly.

" 'Very well,' I agreed. 'But come at once—or the light will be gone.'

" 'Tout de suite!' she said. 'Wait here a moment for me.'

"She went into the further room where Boris Mirsky lay helpless, closed the door after her.

"I waited. I heard the faint sound of voices, too muffled by the closed door for articulation to be distinguished. Suddenly, a louder tone made me start. Was it my excited imagination—or did I hear, just perceptible, the names 'Mirsky'—'Stapouloff' from behind that door? I went to it, softly, tried the handle. It was locked. I stood there trembling, trying with all my faculties to distinguish words in that murmur from the other side. 'Mirsky—Mirsky—Mirsky!' Surely I heard them in her voice—caught an answering 'Stapouloff!' uttered by the man! Or was it my fancy, disordered by apprehension? Before I had decided, I heard the key turn in the lock. I stepped back from the door.

"Her appearance reassured me. She was perfectly calm, her pale face utterly emotionless, her movement as she closed the door behind her merely the precise care of a conscientious nurse.

" 'I am ready,' she said. She had not removed her hat when she came in with me. We went down those interminable flights of dingy stairs together, found a taxi in the Rue de Faubourg Montmartre.

"I was grateful for the speed of that taxi which whirled us madly through the streets after the manner of Parisian taxis, with an imminent accident barely shaved at every minute.

"We arrived in a few minutes. You know that gloomy Prefecture of Police, close to Notre Dame? She jumped out of the cab.

" 'Wait here for me,' she said. A moment later she had disappeared through its uninviting portals.

"I WAITED on the pavement, while the taxi clock ticked up the fare, for half an hour perhaps—it seemed an eternity. But, knowing the little ways of the Prefecture, I was resigned to remain there indefinitely.

"She appeared at last, as unexpectedly as a long-waited-for person always does and smiled at me, a strange little smile.

" 'It is finished,' she said. 'I thank you, mon ami.' She held out her hand as if to say good-bye.

" 'Finished?' I echoed, at a loss to understand the stressed significance of her tone.

" 'I have denounced him.'

"I stood speechless, incredulous of my comprehension. She had denounced him to the police! She still held out her hand.

" 'Adieu!' she said.

"I looked into her eyes, had one glimpse of stoic tragedy that will haunt me all my life. Then she sprang into the taxi, cried to the driver an address I failed to catch. I made to follow her, but she stopped me with a gesture of the hand. 'Je vous en prie!' she said, in an accent that compelled obedience. The cab whirled away, swung round the corner, left me standing, staring at a vision of the man she loved, lying doomed and impotent in his bed."

Morrice knocked out his pipe with an air of finality.

"What happened to him, then?" queried McFadden.

"To Mirsky?—What does happen to spies who are caught? I don't know. They vanish," replied Morrice sententiously.

"And the girl?" said someone else. "Did she kill herself?"

"The next morning among my letters," said Morrice, "there was one from her. Just a scrap of paper with the words, 'To die is too easy.' Nothing more, except the signature, 'Vera.' "

"And you never saw her again?"

Morrice looked up from refilling his pipe.

"SOME months later I was walking along the boulevard just by the Matin office. Coming towards me I happened to notice a couple of Soeurs de Charite, conspicuously incongruous in the crowd, with their white flapping coifs and voluminous dark robes right down to their clumsy shoes. They were, as usual, an old one and a young one, their heads bent as though in blinkers to the mundane wickedness of the boulevard. There was something vaguely familiar in the gait of the younger one, muffled up in clothes though she was. She came close, her eyes downcast, her fingers on her rosary. It was Vera Mikhailovna. She did not even glance up at me. She passed along that boulevard where the painted women were beginning to appear, in a different world from theirs—or perhaps mine. I leave her to your clever theories."

He got up and walked out.

The Woman $76,000,000 Could Not Change

meet, but not a share of stock was sold and not a single bond issued against it. Once he was asked why he didn't put out some stock, and he is quoted as replying:

"The road isn't earning money just yet. I wouldn't ask anybody to invest in a deficit."

IT isn't a deficit any longer. It still isn't much as a passenger line. Its schedules are slow and the roadbed is rough, but as a freight line it is said to be a veritable mint. Last year its net revenue exceeded $1,000,000. Three years ago his railroad holdings were increased when he bought from the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Lines a 300-mile stretch of track from McKinney, Texas, to Shreveport. This purchase was made when Edenborn was in his seventy-fifth year, and it followed eight years of negotiation. The Texas branch, coupled with the Louisiana line, now forms the only outlet to the gulf for much of the rich East Texas farming, oil and mining territory. The Shreveport-New Orleans line also penetrates Louisiana's richest cotton and lumber country and provides the principal means of transportation for the new Urania oil field. Inventory of the road is still incomplete, but its value is roughly estimated to be in excess of $15,000,000. Edenborn asked $25,000,000 for it when the Kansas City Southern tried to buy it and held out for that figure through repeated negotiations up to the time of his death.

Although Shreveport has always been the headquarters of the railroad, the Edenborns made New Orleans their home when they abandoned residence in New York about 1908. Paralleling aristocratic St. Charles avenue two blocks east is a narrow thoroughfare called Hampson street. It is dingy, its pavement, which at best is only a sort of macadam, is full of holes and its homes are mostly the modest abodes of working men. At 8018 Hampson, in the city's extreme west end and only a few blocks from the Mississippi River, stands a small frame cottage possibly a little older and a little dingier than the rest. It is built flush against a shed which stands in the rear of a better house facing an intersecting street. The once-green blinds are closed now and the flowers in the narrow area between the front porch and the rusty iron fence are blooming unattended.

IN this humble abode lived the Edenborns when they were not riding up and down the line in their old private car or taking their week-end outings on the ferry boat at the Angola crossing. There was nothing in their life to mark them as the possessors of millions. They started out in life as working people and working people they remained. There probably wasn't even a conductor or a brakeman on the entire railroad system who didn't dress better than William Edenborn, president and owner of the L., R. & N. Neighbors tell how he used to shamble forth in baggy trousers to carry home the groceries in a basket. In the days before prohibition, they recall, he used to go out every evening and bring back a bucket of beer. So far as known, no servant or laundress was ever employed in the home. More than one acquaintance asserts that Mrs. Edenborn did her own cooking and washing and that she always prepared her husband's lunch when he went "up the road." He never ate in a dining car and he preferred the old Pullman berth to any hotel room.

Edenborn always contended that most of the money spent was spent to gratify unnecessary whims of taste. He had no expensive tastes of his own.

"When a man has enough money to feed and clothe and house himself," he often declared, "he has money enough. The rest of the money he can make means nothing to him. It means nothing to me. All I can do is use it in helping others who need helping."

To this philosophy Mrs. Edenborn adhered as she adhered to all other principles expounded by her husband. In St. Louis she has two sisters, the Misses Melvina and Henrietta Drain, residing at 3649 Cleveland avenue. They are school teachers in modest circumstances. She has also a brother, Edgar Drain, who is Desk Sergeant at the Mounted Police Station. Left to judge from dress and appearance which of the three women was the mistress of a colossal fortune and president of a railroad, a stranger might find himself confronting a formidable puzzle. For Mrs. Edenborn exhibits none of the earmarks of vast wealth. She remains, and no doubt will continue to remain, a woman that $76,000,000 cannot change.

The Story of Billy the Kid

second he felt a sense of relief. Everything was all right. His suspicions were groundless. The Kid was probably sitting up there in his old familiar east window, taking it easy. Perhaps sprinkling crumbs along the sill for the robins. He looked up.

Almost directly above him was the Kid, leaning half out of the window, Ollinger's own shotgun, loaded with 18 buckshot, pressed tightly to his shoulder. Over the shining length of the double barrel gleamed the Kid's hard gray eyes and the Kid's cold white face. He was smiling.

Ollinger stopped dead in his tracks. It may have been the shock of surprise that stopped him. It may have been the paralysis of fear. It may have been the helpless realization that he was at the end of his journey of life—everything. His cocked six-shooter hung useless in his hand at his side. He stared up at the Kid with a startled foolish hopeless look. His eyes popped half out of their sockets. His mouth fell open. . . . The Kid pulled the trigger. All Lincoln heard the roar of the gun. A puff of blue acrid smoke drifted off into the street. Nine buckshot struck Ollinger in the breast. The impact spun him half round. He lunged forward and measured his length on the ground, his arms outstretched, his cocked six-shooter still grasped in his hand.

The report of the shotgun brought the townspeople to their doors up and down the street. News of some sort of tragedy at the courthouse spread quickly. Billy the Kid had done something terrible again. "I told you so," ran from mouth to mouth. The desperado was loose; he might be planning other atrocities. Panic fell upon the town. Best for Lincoln to keep indoors.

The front door in the second story of the courthouse opened. Out upon the porch, high above the street, stepped Billy the Kid. He still wore his leg irons, but the handcuffs had disappeared from his wrists; he had slipped them off without great difficulty over his remarkably small hands. The sheer bravado of his appearance was his gesture of drama. It made him a fair target for death from a dozen places of concealment, but no hidden foe ventured a shot to avenge Ollinger and Bell. With the porch as his stage, he stood for a moment leaning upon his shotgun like an actor awaiting the applause of his audience at the close of a big scene.

He moved a few paces to the east end of the porch. Standing at the head of the steps that led down to the street, he caught sight of Ollinger's body sprawled face downward beneath him. He raised the shotgun to his shoulder and took deliberate aim. Again all Lincoln heard the roar. The dead man seemed to jump as the nine buckshot drove home between the shoulder blades.

The Kid raised the gun high above his head and with all the strength of his lithe arms flung it crashing down upon the corpse of the man he hated.

"Take that to hell with you, you cowardly yellow cur!" he snarled, and, turning, hobbled back into the building.

The Kid's task was only half completed. His liberty was still precarious. He had yet to escape. His plan was definite and he set about working it out patiently, systematically, without excitement and without hurry. He went first to the armory, where he armed himself with two six-shooters and a Winchester rifle. With cool indifference to the lapse of time, he loaded the chambers of the revolvers and charged the magazine of the rifle with cartridges. He selected two cartridge belts and filled the loops of one with revolver cartridges and the loops of the other with Winchester bullets. This was slow work. Then he went down the back stairs, stopping at the bend to examine for a moment critically the bloodstained hole in the wall, bored by the bullet that had passed through Bell's heart. At the bottom of the stairway he stepped carefully over Bell's body, which lay in the door, and walked out into the courtyard at the rear of the building.

Old Man Goss, the cook, had locked himself in the jail kitchen. The Kid rapped at the door. Shaking with fear, the old man opened it.

"Don't be scared, Goss," said the Kid. "Any man who can cook ham and eggs like you is safe with me. Get an ax and chop the chain of these irons in two."

Goss brought an ax from the woodpile. "Don't make any mis-strokes," cautioned Billy, swinging a six-shooter carelessly close to Goss' head.

With a few vigorous strokes Goss broke the chains. The Kid tied pieces of twine to the two shattered ends, and, pulling the chains taut up along his legs, fastened the strings to his belt. The movements of both hands and legs were now unencumbered.

Back of the courthouse was a two-acre pasture under fence. In it a black horse was cropping grass along the irrigating ditch near the foot of the south wall of the canon.

"That Pat Garrett's pony?" asked the Kid.

"No, it's Billy Burt's, the County Clerk."

"Wish it was Garrett's. It'd tickle me to ride away on old Pat's horse. But go catch him and bring him here."

Goss' chase of the pony wasted more than an hour. Finally, the horse grew tired of the pastime and submitted to the bridle. Goss led him in and cinched a saddle on him. The old man was fearfully apologetic.

"You seen how the darn critter acted," he explained. "I done my best, but I couldn't ketch him no quicker."

"Oh, that's all right," returned the Kid, easily.

Through the pasture gate at the northwest corner of the building, the Kid led the horse out into the street. The group of a half-dozen men was still standing curiously on the porch of the Wortley Hotel, waiting for the show to continue. They perked up interest now; here was the next act. The Kid gathered up his bridle reins, gripped the pommel and swung into the saddle. Burdened with his two six-shooters, rifle and heavy cartridge belts, he was immediately bucked off. He struck the ground on his hands and knees, still holding the bridle. He leaped to his feet; for a moment he stood there in the middle of the sun-drenched road, legs braced, rifle cocked and ready for instant use, a tense thrilling figure of a fighting man at bay. The watchers on the porch made no move, but on their minds this quick picture of Billy the Kid remained indelibly engraved for all their lives.

Again the Kid swung into the saddle. This time he settled himself comfortably and, waving his hand in farewell to the group of men, rode out of town at an easy gallop. At the edge of the village he passed a Mexican urchin and, at that time, according to the boy, he was whistling a merry little tune.

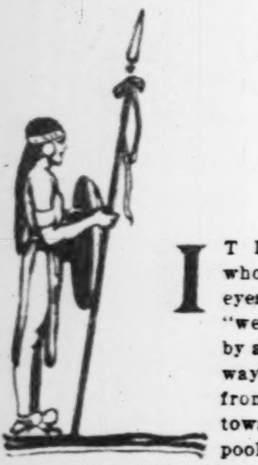
Living SACRIFICES

The Romance of a Forgotten People Lives Again in the Words of Edward Herbert Thompson, Our Consul in Yucatan. The Remarkable Story of America's Oldest Civilization.



IT IS "Don Eduardo" who speaks. . . . "My eyes," he is saying, "were caught and held by a broad raised roadway leading straight from the temple toward a vast black pool overgrown with trees. Breathless, frozen to the spot, I could only look and look, for in a blinding flash I realized that I was gazing at the Sacred Way, and at its end the Sacred Well, in whose murky depths even then might lie the pitiful bones of many once lovely maidens sacrificed to appease a grim god. What untold treasures this grisly well might hide! What tragedies had been enacted at its brink!"

"Don Eduardo" he is called affectionately by the natives among whom he has lived and worked for 30 years. We know him as Edward Herbert Thompson, the American Consul in Yucatan, the persevering archeologist who, in the face of towering barriers, dug out of the ruins of Chi-chen Itza a fragmentary but unique tale of America's oldest civilization; who dredged from the depths of the Sacred Cenote the ghastly secrets of a once mighty race—the Mayas. To T. A. Willard he is telling his story in "The City of the Sacred Well," just published by the Century Company. It is a fascinating chronicle of tropical moonlight and stately temples of the ancients. Savage and terrifying deities glower from its pages. Romance of a forgotten people lives again in its wealth of legend and folk lore. Permit "Don Eduardo," through the pen of Willard, to proceed with his absorbing story.

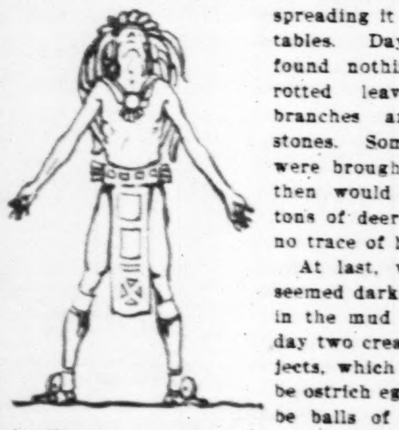
"AT THE brink of the well," the narrative continues, "I peered into the blackness and continued to gaze into its depths, picturing in my mind's eye the awesome ceremonies it had witnessed. The chant of death begins, swelling softly over the slow pulsing of the drums. The solemn procession leaves the holy temple of Kukul Can and the funeral cortege advances along the broad raised avenue of the Sacred Way, toward the Sacred Well, the dwelling place of Noh-och Yum Chac, the terrible Rain God, who must be placated by human sacrifice. The corn in the fields is withering, crying for rain. If the anger of Yum Chac be not appeased, famine will follow and the dread Lord of Death, Ah Puch—he of the grinning sightless skull—will walk abroad in the land."

Caught in the spell of Maya folk lore, the imagination of Don Eduardo is soaring. Graphic and vivid becomes his picture . . .

"Slowly, slowly, the cortege draws near. At its head is the high priest, clad in ceremonial vestments and elaborate feathered headdress, as befits the Pontiff of the Feathered Serpent. And what is this embroidered bower borne so reverently by sturdy sunbrowned lesser priests? Is it a bier, a stately catafalque? Is the pitiful victim already dead? Ah, no! she moves, beautiful, flawless—the most lovely maiden to be found in the land. Through every city and village and countryside, for weeks and weeks, thousands of priests have sought her, this fairest flower of Maya maidenhood. Her face is pale. She knows the supreme honor that is hers—she who is to become so soon the bride of the Rain God. But there is terror in those lovely eyes, a benumbing cold fear of the unknown.

"AND behind them, filling the whole of the Sacred Way, come the King, the nobles, the great warriors and many priests. Already, on the far side of the Sacred Well, is gathered a silent, grave-faced multitude, the whole populace of the city and pilgrims from afar.

"The high priest enters the little temple at the brink of the well. The dirge ceases, the drums are stilled. He performs his devotions to the Rain God. He lights the sacred incense burners and the fragrant blue vapor floats curling upward. Again the slowly chanted dirge starts to the muted beating of the drums. He lights a basket of sweet-smelling copal incense, holds it aloft and casts it into the well. The chant grows louder, the drums beat faster.

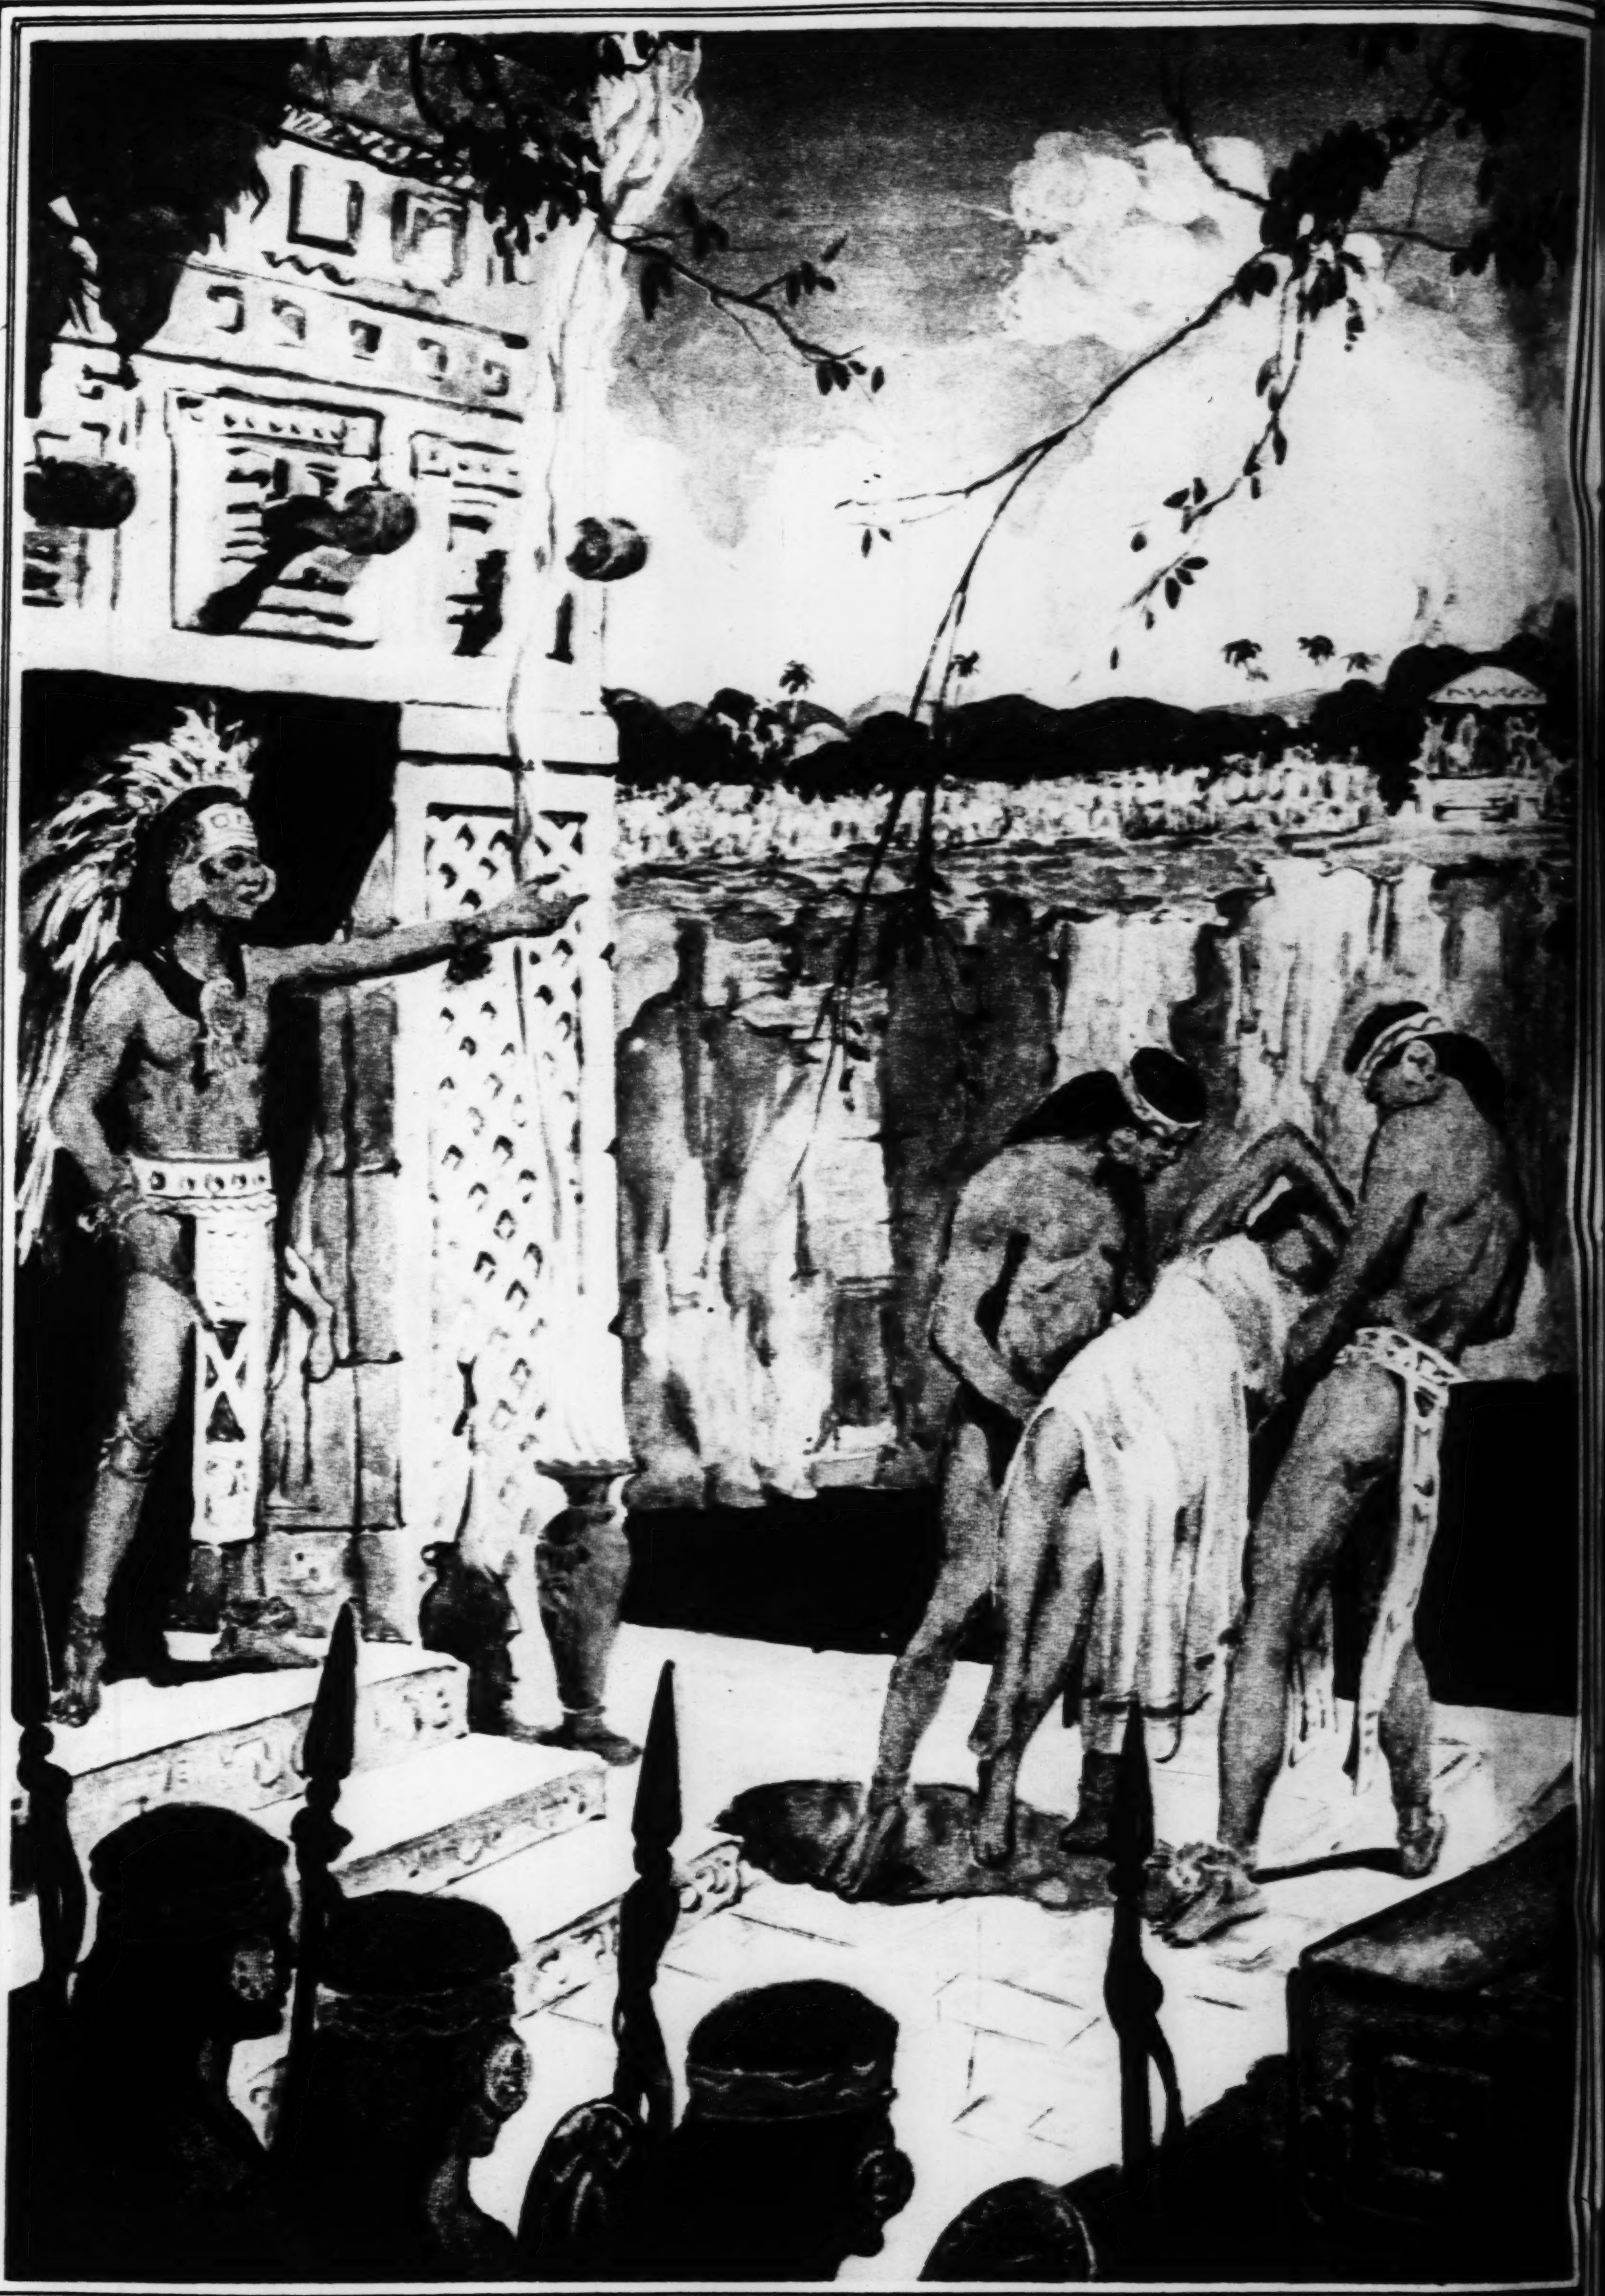


"Two powerful nacons, or lesser priests, lift the maiden from her couch, their muscular arms forming a sling, in which she lies as lightly as a leaf on the bosom of a stream. They advance with her to the edge of the well. The pitiless sun glares down into her upturned fear-stricken eyes and she throws one slender arm over her face. Her gauzy garments reveal the tender flesh and adolescent contours of a girl in her early teens.

"Slowly the nacons swing the featherlight body backward and forward to the beat of the drums and the rhythm of the dirge; forward and backward in an ever wider sweep, while the drums and chant begin to roar. At a sign from the high priest the drums are suddenly stilled; the chant ends in a high-pitched wail. A last forward swing and the bride of Yum Chac hurtles far out over the well. Turning slowly in the air, the lithesome body falls faster and faster till it strikes the dark water 70 feet below.

"An echoing splash and all is still. Only the widening ripples are left. The child bride has found favor in the eyes of her lord, the great god Noh-och Yum Chac.

"DON EDUARDO" — Edward Herbert Thompson, American Consul in Yucatan, who tells the story of the Maya discoveries.



"Thus," concludes the narrator, "I imagined the sacrifice at the Sacred Well—a sacrifice enacted not once, but hundreds of times, through many centuries. Thus has it been handed down in a dozen Maya legends, and I wondered whether this grim old well really held at its far murky bottom the relics of the ancient rites or if, after all, the sacrifices were myths founded on some trivial event, which grew and grew with each telling.

"Granting that such sacrifices had been, every vestige of evidence might well have disintegrated into nothingness a thousand years before my time. Assuming even that at the bottom of this watery pit was all I sought, what a mad venture it was for one lone man with but a little money and no great mechanical skill to attempt to recover these evidences. And yet my faith was strong. I felt that my quest was not to be in vain and that somehow I would make the well yield up its treasures. At least I must attempt the feat or continue to be haunted by the idea all the rest of my life."

SO DON EDUARDO did attempt the feat. And mad as the venture may have been, his faith was to be rewarded. He proved the truth of the ancient legend in all its horrifying ramifications. For details of the difficulties encountered in the undertaking and laboriously overcome, let the reader turn to Willard's book. It suffices here to say that they were tremendous. To challenge the explorer's meager resources, there yawned an elliptical pit 160 feet wide and 130 feet deep. Vertically, its irregular stone sides rose 70 feet from the water to almost impenetrable thickets of jungle growth crowding about its rim. To drain it or pump it dry was unthinkable because of an inexhaustible source of water from below. The work of exploration would have to be accomplished either by means of dredges or of deep-sea divers, or both, so Thompson bent to his task.

Dredging machinery, specially designed and built in the United States, was shipped to Progreso, unloaded five miles out and lightered to shore. There it was reloaded on flat cars and hauled to Dzitas, 16 miles from the site of ancient Chi-chen Itza. From here it was necessary to transport the heavy equipment piecemeal to the Cenote without trucks or any other adequate vehicles, over the most forbidding roads and with only native assistance. Again, at the well, space had to be cleared and the machinery assembled. Months were consumed in the process, but at last all was ready and Don Eduardo set to work.

Day after day, as great bucketfuls of ooze from the well bottom were brought from the dark green depths, the expectant hands of Don Eduardo went through the muck, spreading it out on the sorting tables. Day after day they found nothing but ill-smelling rotted leaves, broken tree branches and a few small stones. Sometimes whole trees were brought up and now and then would appear the skeletons of deer or wild hogs, but no trace of human bones.

At last, when the prospect seemed darkest, there appeared in the mud of the dredge one day two cream-colored oval objects, which at first seemed to be ostrich eggs. They proved to be balls of copal incense and revived the waning hopes. For no other purpose than that of sacrificial offering would copal incense have been thrown into the pit. The legend was on its way to confirmation, and from then onward progress was rapid.

Strange and antiquated weapons came to light, relics of incalculable value. There were baskets of incense and objects of wood and rubber. Finally, the tireless dredge arose with the bleached and polished skull of a young girl, and then other skulls and human bones came by the score. It seemed the dredge at last had found a veritable pocket of skeletons. Most of the skeletons were those of youthful maids, but every now and then appeared one which had the breadth of shoulders, the thick skull and heavy form of a powerful man—no doubt some mighty warrior sacrificed in the flower of his vigor and sent to grace the court of the Rain God.

Skeleton after skeleton was raised, until there were gathered more than 90 of these gruesome reminders of the terrible price the Mayas paid for the good will of their deities.

"At the sight of the whitened bones," related Don Eduardo, "my heart was wrung with pity for the young creatures whose lives had been snuffed out just when living was sweetest. I remember as if it were yesterday finding in the mud raised by the dredge a pair of dainty little sandals, evidently feminine, once worn by some graceful high-born maid. These, more than the bleached skulls and bones, more than any other of the finds, brought home to me the pathos and tragedy of those ancient well-intentioned and cruelly useless sacrifices. Frequently bits of cotton fabric were brought up, perfectly preserved, but carbonized. These specimens of cloth, many of which are lovely in design and texture, are, I believe, the only relics of ancient Maya fabrics in the world today. Our finds proved conclusively that the statements made to Landa in 1565 by the natives were true—that both maids and warriors had been frequently sacrificed to the god of the well."

WITH vague recollections of these horrifying sacrifices surviving among the remnants of the Maya race, it is scarcely unnatural that there should flourish legends commemorating some particularly poignant tragedy enacted at the Cenote's brink and that national disasters—even a disaster so great as the fall of the ancient city—should be linked in some way with the ill will of Yum Chac. The Rain God, dwelling in the midst of his earthly subjects and reminding them periodically of his awful presence with searing drouth, was their most personal and tangible deity. And demanding a new bride two or three times a year he was certain to cross swords with many a resentful suitor. Tales of lovers torn apart are legion as are also the traditions of Yum Chac's hand in the fall of Chi-chen Itza. One that deftly combines the tragic ending of a romance with national calamity is the story of Ix-Lol-Nicte, who, according to the native troubadours, was the last maiden to be cast into the well. Condensing here and there, let us tell the story as it was told to Don Eduardo by the aged tale-spinner of the Sublevados.

"Two powerful nacons, or lesser priests, lift the maiden from her couch, their muscular arms forming a sling, in which she lies as lightly as a leaf on the bosom of a stream. They advance with her to the edge of the well. The pitiless sun glares down into her upturned fear-stricken eyes and she throws one slender arm over her face. Her gauzy garments reveal the tender flesh and adolescent contours of a girl in her early teens.

"Slowly the nacons swing the featherlight body backward and forward to the beat of the drums and the rhythm of the dirge; forward and backward in an ever wider sweep, while the drums and chant begin to roar. At a sign from the high priest the drums are suddenly stilled; the chant ends in a high-pitched wail. A last forward swing, and the bride of Yum Chac hurtles far out over the well. Turning slowly in the air, the lithesome body falls faster and faster till it strikes the dark water 70 feet below.

"An echoing splash and all is still. Only the widening ripples are left. The child bride has found favor in the eyes of her lord, the great god Noh-och Yum Chac."

"My grandfather told me this"—the narrator is quoted—"as his grandfather related it to him, and so on back through many grandfathers. There was in the north of this great land a city, and this city existed a thousand years before the coming of the white man. The dwellers were called the children of Kukul Can. Afterwards the Itzas, who were a mighty people, discovered this city and dwelt about the edge of its sacred well for many katuns (a katun is 20 years).

"In the city was a high-born maiden, the most beautiful that eyes had ever looked upon. Ix-Lol-Nicte she was called—She the Flower of Sweet Perfume. At 16 it seemed that the greatest honor in all the land must be hers and that she should become the bride of the Rain God. With no thought of the future to darken her pleasure, she played happily in her garden, and there one day she encountered a handsome youth in pursuit of a wild faun. Never before had she seen a man other than those of her household, but she pleaded for the life of the faun and won the youth's heart. Daily he stole back to the garden to look upon the lovely vision of Ix-Lol-Nicte.

"Now, Ix-Lol-Nicte, taught from infancy that to serve the Rain God was the greatest honor that could come to a mortal maid, had accepted eagerly the possibility of becoming Yum Chac's bride, but after the coming of the youth her heart grew strangely chilled at the thought. And the youth, knowing that soon she would be chosen for sacrifice, began laying his plans for rescuing her and carrying her away to distant lands. About that time he met Ix-Ek.

"IX-EK (Brunette), daughter of a great war chief, was as beautiful to the eye as Ix-Lol-Nicte, and it had been rumored that the honor of serving the Rain God might be hers. At first she desired to be chosen of the gods, especially when she saw that Ix-Lol-Nicte was a rival, but after the handsome youth had passed within her sight her only longing was to bask in his adoration. Artfully, she found a way to know him and make it seem he had sought her himself. Then he foolishly confided to her his love for Ix-Lol-Nicte. She appeared to sympathize, but, with jealousy seething, she at once set herself to cause the choice of the gods to fall on Ix-Lol-Nicte and thus separate the lovers by death. When at last it was announced that Ix-Lol-Nicte was chosen, and the youth lay upon his couch in anguish, there came a messenger from Ix-Ek saying:

"'Come to me. I will save Ix-Lol-Nicte and yet not anger the gods.

"When he arrived he was counseled in this wise: 'Tell her to hold her body straight, so it will enter the water as an arrow. The under priests will do as I say. I will tell them the Rain God desires no new bride and that they are to fling her carefully, so her body will not turn in the air. Then she will rise to the surface and you may rescue her. Fear not.'

"But when the fateful day arrived Ix-Ek carried out a plan of her own. She sought the two brawny priests and told them to fling the maid with all their strength, so her body would turn again and again and again and strike the water with fatal impact. The slow-witted nacons, befuddled by her words, let slip their hold. Instead of flinging the victim far out toward the center of the well they let fall the tender body of Ix-Lol-Nicte so that it struck the rocky sides of the pit. A mutilated bloody corpse at last sank beneath the green waters.

"Her lover, poised to dive to her aid, saw the body of Ix-Lol-Nicte strike the rocks. Turning like a flash, he rushed to Ix-Ek and hurled her far out into the well. Then he leaped upon the two dazed under priests and dragged them over the brink so all three fell like plummets.

"Horror overwhelmed the high priests and the populace. They knew a portentous thing had happened and that the wrath of the gods would swiftly be upon them. Enormous black clouds came rushing from the horizon. Lightning split the firmament and entered the Sacred Well. The whole earth trembled and then the heavens poured down such a deluge that hundreds were swept into the pit. Others fled to escape, but only a few reached their homes. When the storm had passed the sun shone down upon a ruined city and a decimated population

"I HAVE FOUND that by adding three cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast to my daily diet I am able to keep in perfect physical trim and ready for action on the hottest of Texas summer days. Fleischmann's Yeast eliminates all impurities from the blood and is a safeguard against constipation."

J. P. ("Snipe") Conley, Dallas, Texas

"A YEAR AGO I was anaemic, could not sleep, and was losing weight. I tried in vain one remedy after another. Then someone suggested that I try Fleischmann's Yeast. I did so, and grew better so quickly that I kept on with it. My color came back and my nerves became more steady. Now I am in sound health."

Stephana Lee, Chicago, Ill.

These letters tell of constipation conquered—skin and stomach disorders corrected—through one fresh food

Not a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active. And day by day it releases new stores of energy.

Eat two or three cakes regularly every day before meals: on crackers—in fruit juices, water or milk—or just plain, nibbled from the cake. For constipation especially, dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before breakfast and at bedtime. Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days. All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Start eating it today!

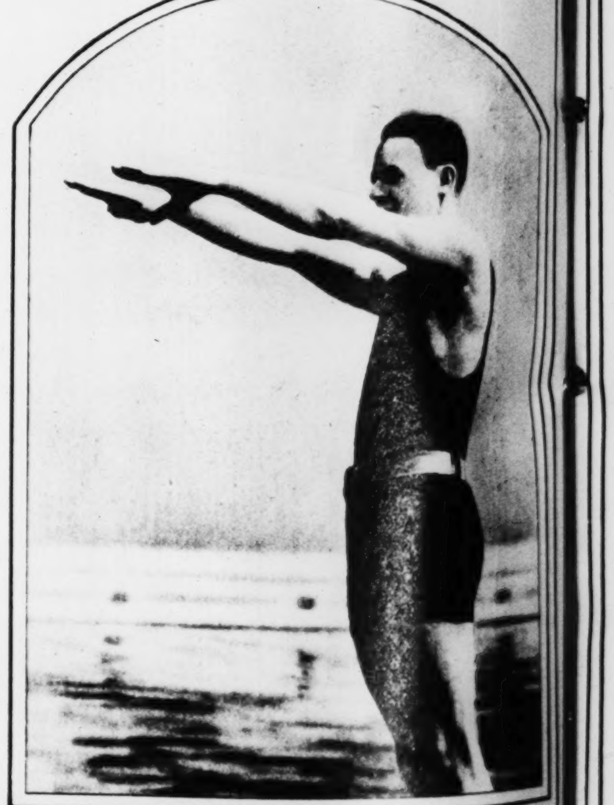
And let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. N-913, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York.

"I USED TO HAVE PIMPLES all over my face and shoulders. I didn't like to wear an evening dress and was always embarrassed when I was with a group. I was absolutely lifeless all the time; I had no energy. I tried many remedies to no avail. One day I read an advertisement in the paper about Fleischmann's Yeast. I took two cakes a day for three months and was entirely rid of my skin trouble."

Francies Shaw, Richmond, Va.

EAT FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST FOR HEALTH

THIS FAMOUS FOOD tones up the entire system—aids digestion, clears the skin, banishes constipation.



"LAST YEAR my physician told me that my stomach was bad . . . I decided to try Fleischmann's Yeast. Then feeling better, I stopped eating the Yeast. Some time later the same trouble returned. I ate the Fleischmann's Yeast as before. The bad stomach was the basis of my trouble. For, thanks to Fleischmann's Yeast, I am again feeling fine."

Permanence Without Penalty

Permanent waves graceful as nature's—and more.

Permanent, under the Eugène Method, without demands upon the life or texture of the hair.

For, in the Eugène Method, clean, white steam is the only agent that comes in contact with the hair.

That is a sure safeguard against breaking or splitting of the hair, since no pressure is created within the hair to strain its delicate structure.

The perfect preservation of the hair's natural beauty is an even greater achievement than the faultless grace of the Eugène Wave itself.

May we give you a little booklet which tells you more about the Eugène Method? Perhaps, too, we may be able to direct you to a shop where you may inquire firsthand about it. Just drop us a note or a post card, and we shall forward the booklet to you at once.

A cool, refreshing treat awaits you at the soda fountain

"CANADA DRY!" Just say those two magic words to your cheerful friend behind the counter and he will serve you the coolest and most refreshing drink you've ever tasted on a hot summer's day.

You will like the wonderful flavor, of course, for there is no ginger ale in all the world with a flavor so supremely fine as this.

But there is an even more important reason why you will like "Canada Dry" when you're hot and tired and thirsty. It's a real ginger ale, made from real Jamaica ginger.

Because of this it lifts you up! Refreshes! Invigorates! Makes you feel keen and cool and cheery, no matter how hot the day.

Especially in summer time you want a beverage that you know is good for you, and you get just that when you ask for "Canada Dry."

Substitutes can't possibly bring you the same refreshment because most of them aren't real ginger ales at all, but owe their "bite" to capsicum, or red pepper. There is no capsicum in "Canada Dry."

That's something to remember when you step up to the fountain and you're wondering what to order.

It's worth paying a little more just to be sure of the definite assurance of purity and quality that you get in "Canada Dry."

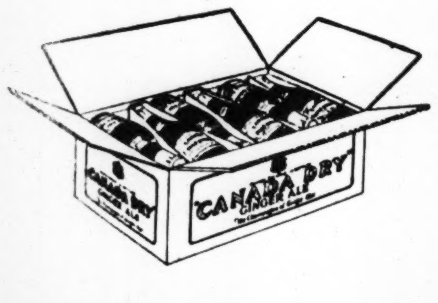
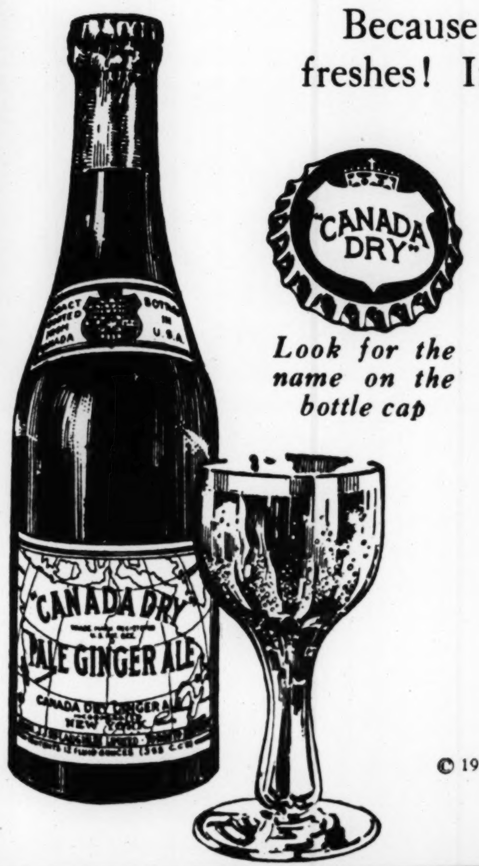
Imitations are never "just as good"

There are literally thousands of imitations of "Canada Dry" on the market today and you must be careful if you want the original. For your own protection, insist that the bottle comes to you with the cap on, and always look for the name "Canada Dry" on the bottle cap. That's the best way to be sure of the matchless flavor and quality that have made "Canada Dry" the sensation of Canada and of this country.

YOU WILL LIKE THIS HOSTESS PACKAGE



The most convenient way to buy "Canada Dry" Twelve bottles in a small, substantial carton. You will be especially glad to have it handy when good friends drop in unexpectedly—when seeking something a little better than usual for dinner—before retiring when you want a bedtime snack. This Hostess Package is sold by all "Canada Dry" dealers.



Look for the name on the bottle cap
